TALMADGE CHAIR AT PHILADELPHIA APT TO BE EMPTY

Governor Makes No Plans To Attend Democratic Convention Despite Post on National Committee Representing Georgia.

MANY CANDIDATES FOR STATE OFFICE

Larsen Opens Governorship Campaign Thursday; Scramble Seen After Entry Lists Close.

By L. A. FARRELL.

Definite indication that Governor Talmadge, arch critic of the national administration, will shun the democratic national convention at Philadelphia three weeks hence was seen last week as the Governor made no plans for the trip northward.

It was generally understood that the 30 hotel rooms obtained early this year by the Talmadge forces will be turned over to the Roosevelt delegates who appear certain to number more than enough to fill the 30 rooms also reserved by the President's campaign manager, Marion H. Allen.

What the Governor will do during convention week remains problematical, but it is pretty certain he won't be any closer to Philadelphia than Atlanta, and maybe no closer than McRae, whither he hied himself last fall during the President's visit to the Georgia capital.

"Word Went Out."

The word went out to Talmadge followers to stay away from the convention in the last Talmadge radio talk in which the Governor said that "up there with Ickes, Hopkins, Wallace, et al., is where I don't belong." Ickes, Hopkins, Wallace, et al., particularly the et al., will be in full bloom at Philadelphia, so it isn't quite likely that Eugene Talmadge, as the retiring national committeeman, will fill that chair on the convention platform that is set aside for him.

The chair probably will be as empty as was the one the Roosevelt homecoming celebration committee had for him on the platform at Grant field last November. Then he went to McRae to look after his farming interests.

Future in Georgia.

Talmadge's future, if he has one, lies in Georgia politics, but as yet

WPA Contempt Cases Referred to U.S. Court

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—(UP) Six persons charged with contempt for alleged refusal to answer subpenas to a hearing by the state senate committee investigating the WPA here will ask the United States district court to take jurisdiction in their cases Monday, it was revealed tonight.

Warrants for the arrest of the following were issued by the senate committee, of which G. Mason Owlett, republican, Tioga county, is chairman:

Franklin G. Conner, head of the Federal-State Employment Service here; E. K. Hunter, assistant to WPA Director John H. Rankin; Henry T. Seibert, personnel director of WPA here; Edward R. Yarnelle, labor supervisor of WPA; Claude McKinley and Bessie Dumas, two WPA workers.

FULTON ASPIRANTS PLAN CAMPAIGNS

Boykin-McRae and Dorsey-Hudson in Spotlight as Politics Warms Up.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Fulton county's political cauldron, scheduled to reach the boiling point during the hot summer, was simmering yesterday as aspirants for offices to be filled in the September primary began the momentous task of mapping preliminary plans and determining just where, if any, their support lies.

Not until the state democratic executive committee meets the second week in June and announces entrance fees and closing dates will the full cry of the pack of office-seekers be heard. But even as early as now, a number are quietly telling their friends they intend throwing their hats into the ring.

Boykin-McRae Battle.

A brief summation of the situation at present is that Solicitor General John A. Boykin will be opposed by his old foe, William G. McRae; that Judge Hugh M. Dorsey will have to beat former Assistant Solicitor John H. Hudson in order to retain his seat on the bench; that the veteran legislator, Luther Still, and the Atlanta lawyer, W. R. Bentley, will be fighting for the legislative post now held by Ralph L. Ramsey; and that Councilman William G. Hastings probably will seek the position of Representative Bond Almand, if Almand sticks to his determination not to run again, and that James C. Wilson, newspaperman, will oppose Hastings.

Two prominent lawyers, Paul Etheridge Sr. and Edgar Watkins Sr., have announced for the judgeship now held by Judge G. H. Howard in Fulton superior court, and political observers say it will be a close race between them. However, these same political observers are frank to say they would not be surprised to hear that Judge Howard had changed his mind about not running and will once more seek the bench seat he has held for more than a decade.

No rumors of opposition have been heard concerning Judge E. D. Thomas or Representative William Hartsfield.

The Fulton democratic executive committee, of which George L. Bell is chairman, is to meet immediately following the session of the state committee and will fix the county closing dates on the same day selected by the state body, Hewitt W. Chambers, committee secretary, said. The Fulton organization will hold the primary in this county and will finance it, maintaining the usual number of ballot boxes.

A record heavy vote is expected in

SOUTH'S INDUSTRY SHOWS INCREASE IN EMPLOYMENT

Number of Employed, Pay Rolls Better During March, Report States; Building Permits Gain.

March employment and pay rolls in the southeast reached the highest levels since December, 1931, the sixth district federal reserve bank reported yesterday.

The Atlanta bank's summary disclosed a roseate business picture of increased industrial activity, retail trade gains, larger bank deposits, quickened industrial construction and more activity in the major southern industries.

Nearly every business index registered a wide gain over last year and most showed substantial progress from March to April, the period covered in the report.

"Further improvement is indicated in most lines of industrial activity," the board commented.

Pay Rolls Increase.

Employment figures, compiled by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, from February to March, showed a 1.8 per cent gain in jobs and a 3.3 per cent hike in pay rolls.

Retail sales were .9 per cent larger than in March and 8.1 per cent ahead of the previous year. Wholesale trade dropped 2.7 for the month but was 14.5 per cent larger than in 1935.

Building permits registered a 49.2 per cent gain over last year despite a 6.5 per cent tapering during the month.

Building Permits Double.

"Building permits for the first four months of this year are more than double the same period in 1935 and the largest since 1929," the board said. Construction contract awards increased and southern pine mills registered wide gains in production, shipments, orders and unfilled business.

TWENTY QUALIFY FOR DEKALB POSTS

Woman Enters Primary for Seat in Legislature; Hard Battles Foreseen.

Two records were smashed yesterday as 20 candidates qualified for the 11 positions for which DeKalb voters will cast their ballots this fall in the state primary.

For the first time in DeKalb's history a woman—Mrs. Boyd D. Quarles—is seeking a legislative seat, and for the first time in the memory of political observers there was no opposition to incumbents of four major offices—clerk of court, ordinary, tax commissioner and sheriff.

Entry lists closed Saturday in DeKalb and although the date for the state primary has not yet been set by the state committee, it is anticipated that there will be several hard-fought battles.

Lindsay vs. Carter.

Paul Lindsay, veteran member of the DeKalb county delegation in the Georgia assembly, and E. E. Carter, attorney, will fight it out for the nomination as senator from the thirty-fourth (DeKalb county) district. Under the rotation plan it is DeKalb's time to nominate the senator. The thirty-fourth district is composed of DeKalb, Newton and Rockdale counties.

John E. Verner and C. Murphy Candler Jr. are qualified for the Lindsay post in the legislature; Mrs. Quarles, John J. Poole, Cecil R. Hall and Mell Turner for the legislative position now held by David Ansley, and H. O. Hubert Jr. and Augustine Sams for the legislative post which Carl Guess will vacate.

DeKalb Superintendent of Schools W. M. Rainey is opposed by J. C. Wallace and J. M. Collier. Coroner E. Thomas has opposition from Hub Huddleston Jr.

Judge, Solicitor Fees.

DeKalb qualification was not required for the judge or the solicitor of the Stone Mountain superior court circuit. At the last election the state committee assessed qualification fees,

Clear, Cool Sunday Is Promised Atlanta

No rain is in sight, announced weather forecasters yesterday as Atlanta entered the 52nd day of drouth.

"Skies will be bright and clear in Atlanta Sunday," announced Chief Forecaster George W. Mindling. "Good news for the Sunday automobile tourist, but bad news for the farmers hereabouts."

There will be little change in temperatures today, said Mindling. The mercury will start at 58 degrees this morning and climb to 78 during the afternoon. Yesterday the mercury started at 60 degrees and stopped at 82 degrees.

Hungry Bride Leaves Zioncheck, Who is Jailed for Throwing Dishes

Madcap Marion Starts Day by Sending Landlady to Hospital and Ends It in Cell After Tossing Bottles, Typewriter Out of Window in One-Man Celebration.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Representative Marion Zioncheck lost his wife and his freedom today.

It all started this morning when Madcap Marion tossed his landlady out into the hall. She was taken to a hospital, suffering a fractured hip, her physician announced. In the words of Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, who sublet her apartment to Zioncheck, the congressman "threw me out five or six times and beat me with a broom, crying all the while 'I'm a witch and my broom won't behave.'"

The capricious congressman then called in the crowd that gathered to witness the protection of hearth and home and passed the bottle. After a bit of this, Rubye, the "little woman," made futile efforts to clear the house. She wanted breakfast, but the pantry was bare.

Making a disgruntled appraisal of the situation, she stamped her foot and hied herself to a neighbor's apartment.

Tonight, John W. Crabs, manager of the apartment house, called the police because, he said, Zioncheck was hurling bottles, dishes and a typewriter out of the window.

"Nobody was at home except the congressman, and he must have lost his temper all by himself," Crabs said.

Lacks $25 Cash.

Zioncheck was held for $25 collateral—a sum which he was not immediately able to produce, but which was produced two hours later by his secretary. His attorney announced Zioncheck then left for Atlantic City.

The last time he was placed behind the local police bars here, after being judged guilty of traveling 70 miles an hour in his then-new roadster, the Washington representative was unable to pay the $45 fine placed upon him and apparently was due to languish in the "bullpen" for a matter of hours at least. On that occasion, however, Representative O'Connor, of New York, paid up for him and obtained his release.

Jail attaches said that when Zioncheck appeared he was barefooted, coatless and wearing only a shirt and a pair of trousers.

"Whoopee" was the congressman's only reply when asked about the series of escapades that has stretched from New York to Puerto Rico and the Virginia Islands.

90 MILES AN HOUR REACHED IN CHASE

Hundreds Endangered as Detectives Pursue Car and 133 Pints of Liquor.

Entirely disregarding hundreds of endangered motorists and pedestrians a liquor car and a police auto, manned by detectives of the liquor squad, early last night raced at speeds of from 75 to 90 miles an hour through the heavy Saturday night traffic in the northeastern section of the city.

The chase started on Argonne avenue, near Ponce de Leon, continued for several miles and ended when the liquor car struck another machine at Highland and St. Charles avenues and was in turn struck in the rear by the police auto.

Detectives Earl R. Harbin and Oscar H. Pendley reported to headquarters that the automobile, driven by a man listed as J. A. Woodruff, 31, of 431 Parkway drive, was parked on the west side of Argonne avenue when they approached. Woodruff stepped on the gas. Harbin driving the police car, followed suit. Since city police cars are not equipped with sirens, there was practically no warning to other drivers or to pedestrians. The detectives said both cars were speeding at 75 miles an hour and that at one time the pursued car was clocked at 90 miles an hour.

The chase continued south on Argonne avenue to North avenue, to Parkway drive, to North Boulevard, to Virginia avenue, to Ponce de Leon place, to Greenwood avenue, to Highland avenue.

The pursued car passed a red light

Pension, Share Wealth Forces Are United

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—(AP)—Dr. Frank E. Townsend, leader of the old-age pension movement, and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, head of the share-the-wealth clubs organized by the late Senator Huey P. Long, announced tonight they have joined forces.

"We are presenting a common front against the dictatorship in Washington," Dr. Townsend said.

The announcement was made after a conference with Smith, as they paused here overnight on their way to Allentown, Pa.

They said the first attacks in their campaign will be made tomorrow at a mass assembly in that city, where both are scheduled to speak.

"Anyone but Roosevelt" was their expressed choice when asked concerning presidential preference, and announced they would actively participate in the election campaign.

SINO-JAP TENSION STEADILY GROWING

Mayor of Tientsin Reported Ousted; Additional Troops Arrive in City.

PEIPING, May 30.—(AP)—Tension in North China between Japanese and Chinese is growing hourly as the result of a series of incidents during the last two days.

Chinese sources, with no immediate direct verification, said the mayor of Tientsin and the Tientsin customs superintendent had been ousted from office by Japanese army officers.

The mayor, Hsiao Chen-ying, is generally regarded as one of the most astute of Chinese politicians. The customs superintendent is Lin Shichen.

Chinese interpreted these reports as signifying Japanese determination to dominate increasingly the affairs of North China.

A detachment of 650 Japanese troops arrived here late today, bringing the local Japanese garrison to a strength of 1,300 men.

A Japanese military airplane flew over the city this afternoon making observations.

Local students followed the example of their colleagues in Tientsin by declaring a strike in eight schools and colleges as an anti-Japanese protest. They walked out of their classrooms for a five-day period, demanding Chinese government resistance to the Japanese.

Japanese consular authorities at Tsingtao reported the local Japanese Residents' Corporation, at an emergency meeting, had "considered steps to deal with the recrudescence of Chinese activities against Japanese."

The authorities stated the action was the result of an alleged assault by Chinese students on a Japanese schoolgirl in which the girl suffered a broken arm.

Uncle Sam Identifies Original Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The Works Progress Administration announced today that "Samuel Wilson, genial meat packer of Troy, N. Y.," had been "definitely identified" as the original Uncle Sam and would be honored by American patriotic organizations at memorial exercises in July.

"The tribute, nearly 82 years after the death of 'Uncle Sam' Wilson," the announcement said, "follows confirmation of his right to the title by investigators employed in preparing the American Guide, the comprehensive travel handbook employing the talent of jobless writers through the Works Progress Administration."

Roosevelt Joins Nation in Tribute To Heroic Dead of America's Wars

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—A plea for peace among the nations today dominated America's traditional Memorial Day tribute to those who died in defense of her sovereignty.

With President Roosevelt a thoughtful listener in the crowded marble amphitheater just back of the grave of the unknown soldier at Arlington, both Secretary Roper and General Pershing called for an end to international animosities.

About them in the crowded amphitheater were hundreds of soldiers of past wars, medals shining in the sun, their varicolored uniforms sprinkled liberally among the plain clothes of every day citizens. Below them on the Arlington slopes, stretched acres of graves of those who have died in the nation's wars, each bearing its flag and vivid poppy.

To his appeal, Pershing added a plea for the preservation of American ideals of democracy lest the nation "become the prey of a dictator." Roper asked for a broader, world-wide understanding of the economic relationships which may become the cause of war.

With these exercises and a veterans' parade in Constitution avenue, the capital led the nation in an observance which saw veterans' organizations on the march, with speech-making and flag-decked buildings in many cities.

President Roosevelt's only personal comment on the holiday was contained in an exchange of telegrams with King Leopold, of Belgium, who informed the chief executive that "faithful to a tradition which is dear to it, Belgium decorates today the graves of the American soldiers who fell on her soil during the World War."

To this Mr. Roosevelt replied:

"The heartfelt thoughtfulness with which your majesty and the Belgian people continue to keep in remembrance the American dead interred on Belgian soil touches the hearts of the

SENATE APPROVES FUNDS FOR CANAL, REFUSES QUODDY

Engineers Must Survey Florida Project Before $10,000,000 Fund Available; Vote Is 35 to 30.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The senate today turned down a proposal for a new survey of the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project in Maine after approving a similar plan for the Florida ship canal.

Before quitting for the week-end, the senate approved the committee amendment making $300,000,000 available for a new public works program.

The sum would be used for grants up to 30 per cent on projects costing more than $100,000 and up to 45 per cent on smaller ones. It is estimated to produce a works program aggregating about $800,000,000.

The senate voted 35-30 to open the way for revival of the ship canal, but turned down a similar plan for the Maine power project, 39-28.

Both studies were proposed in amendments by Senator Robinson, the democratic leader, to the $2,370,000,000 relief-deficiency bill.

$10,000,000 for Canal.

Both projects were originally incorporated in a single amendment but they were separated on the request of Senator Hale, republican, Maine, who said he favored the Quoddy project, but not the ship canal.

The amendment by Robinson permits an allocation of an additional $10,000,000 for the canal project if an engineering board's report is favorable.

Hope of final action on the bill before nightfall was abandoned. Robinson obtained an agreement whereby it will be considered again Monday with debate limited after 3 p. m. that day.

Senator Fletcher, democrat, Florida, one of the chief advocates of the canal, said the benefits of the canal would "more than justify the cost."

He denied the two undertakings had

President Disclaims Aim To Interfere With Convention Broadcast.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—President Roosevelt has personally intervened, it was learned tonight, to insure clear broadcasting channels for the proceedings of the republican national convention at Cleveland.

The unusual step was taken, the White House revealed, because Mr. Roosevelt will be engaged in a speech-making tour in the southwest during the convention period.

The President's action constituted, in effect, an answer to critics who suggested he was deliberately seeking to shift national interest away from the republican gathering by launching his cross-country trip during the convention period.

The White House made plain that under no circumstances will the two broadcasting companies, National and Columbia, be asked to switch from the proceedings of the G. O. P. conclave to the speeches the chief executive will be making at the same time.

Word to this effect was sent to Harry Butcher, vice president of Columbia, and Frank Russell, vice president of National, by Stephen T. Early, White House secretary.

He wrote, explaining that Mr. Roosevelt would be speaking at Little Rock, Ark., June 10; Dallas, Texas, June 12, and Vincennes, Ind., June 14, adding:

"Therefore it may be that the addresses of the President in Little Rock and Dallas will come at a time when you are broadcasting the proceedings of the republican national convention, meeting in Cleveland, Ohio.

"This is to advise you that, under no circumstances, do we wish through the broadcasting of these addresses

Smith Begins Service Of Bond Fraud Term

His fight with the law out of the way, William A. Smith yesterday morning boarded a train for Chillicothe reformatory in Ohio, where he will serve an 18-month sentence.

Smith left Atlanta in the custody of a deputy United States marshal and a guard. He was star salesman for the bankrupt American Bond & Share Corporation, one of Benjamin R. Bradley's stock-selling schemes, and he was convicted on charges of using the mails to defraud in a trial that lasted three weeks.

Smith had filed a motion for a new trial but Friday he withdrew this motion. Judge William H. Barrett, who presided at the trial, yesterday wired his consent to this action and Smith was started on his prison sentence immediately.

Robert E. S. Lee, the so-called Earl of Pelham, still rests in Fulton tower under three-year sentence, where he is planning an appeal from the jury verdict.

QUEEN MARY TOPS NORMANDIE MARK

Travels 766 Miles in One Day; Heavy Fog Slows Ship, Threatens Record.

By FRANCIS W. CLARKE,
Constitution Staff Writer.

ABOARD THE S. S. QUEEN MARY EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK, MAY 30.—Thick fog late today diminished hopes that the Queen Mary would set a new Atlantic crossing record.

With visibility limited to about 50 yards most of the time, disappointment among the passengers was keen when the giant ship's speed was sharply reduced.

Although the engines were cut down due to the fog, which had not lifted at 4-15 o'clock this afternoon, (Atlanta time) officers claimed the ship already had set a record for the greatest distance ever traveled by a ship in one day—the 766 nautical miles logged between noon yesterday and noon today, a 25-hour period.

The distance smashed the previous long-distance record which the Normandie established last June when she steamed 754 nautical miles in 24 honrs, two minutes.

Master Pleased.

Sir Edgar T. Britten, master of the Queen Mary, said: "Everything is going according to plans. Results far exceed expectations. We are not out to show off or to aim at fantastic records."

Only today have most of the passengers become familiar with the vastness of the liner's main decks. During the first two days the spacious interior accommodations were filled with milling throngs but today hundreds of chairs on the outer decks began filling up.

Religious Services.

Three religious faiths will be represented in separate services Sunday aboard ship. Captain Britten will officiate in services of the Church of England in the main lounge, while a Catholic mass will be held in one of the drawing rooms and Jewish services in a complete synagogue in the tourist quarters. The Jewish holy room, which was consecrated before the Queen Mary left Southampton by the chief rabbi of England, is equipped with a perpetually burning holy light, a replica of the ark of the covenant and scrolls of Hebraic law.

The prayers for the royal family and for the President of the United States are engraved in bronze on the walls and the names of the tribes of Israel are inscribed on wooden panels.

The American ambassador held impressive Memorial Day services on board today with a large number of American passengers participating.

FEAR NO REPRISAL FROM POLITICIANS, GOVERNOR ADVISES

Street Railway Weeds Out Night Riders and Police Department of Detroit Looks Up All Members, Suspecting 60.

CITY DISCHARGES PURVEYOR OF GUN

State Workers Are Investigated for Activity in Order and Many Face Quick Ouster.

DETROIT, May 30.—(UP)—Private industry joined the city, county and state tonight in purging its pay rolls of Black Legion members.

Men proved to be members of the night-riding terroristic society already have been dismissed by several Detroit firms, the United Press learned. The Detroit police force, believed to contain 60 or more legionnaires, has begun the weeding out process.

Street railway employes have been discharged. At Lansing, Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald exercised over reports that the band's membership had extended into his branch of government, ordered Attorney General David H. Crowley to investigate this possibility and to "publish the facts as soon as they are learned."

Do Not Fear Power.

"Do not fear the rank or political power of anyone who is shown to be a member of this terroristic society," Fitzgerald advised Crowley.

While Wayne county authorities have examined the files of their departments, and while Mayor Frank Couzens, of Detroit, has issued orders similar to those of the Governor, industry quietly has been making its own investigation. Reports indicated that each discharge has been accomplished with the minimum of publicity. One printing house was reliably reported to have discharged four workmen as the aftermath of disclosures that the Black Legion inflicted tortures, and even death, upon those who violated their tenets of so-called "Americanism."

Four Detroit street railway employes were out of work as the result of state-wide inquiry into the Black Legion. Four policemen were questioned concerning reports of their activities in behalf of the vigilantes.

Arthur F. Lupp, of Highland Park, revealed as the "brigadier general" of the group, and more recently as the

Zimmerman Nabbed By Agents in Chicago

Atlanta postal inspctors yesterday arrested Jack Zimmerman, former operator of Zimmerman & Company, a brokerage house that had been in business for about a year in a downtown building, in Chicago.

Zimmerman is charged with using the mails to defraud. Losses on which the federal government base its case amount to about $30,000.

Art Jones, who worked with Zimmerman, was arrested by Chicago postal inspectors in that city Thursday night.

A petition for receivership was filed against Zimmerman & Company several days ago by T. D. Williams, of Habersham, before Fulton Judge Virlyn Moore. Zimmerman and Jones are accused by federal agents of having operated a bucket shop, soliciting investments in stock over the telephone and through a mail campaign.

ANSLEY GIVES VIEWS ON HOUSE CANDIDACY

Attorney Issues Statement Outlining Platform in Race for Legislature.

Cecil R. Hall, attorney, one of the qualified candidates for the legislative post from DeKalb county, now held by David Ansley, yesterday issued a statement concerning his candidacy.

Because of his entry into politics, he asserted, he has resigned as president of the veterans' council of Atlanta, as executive committeeman of Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, and his term as commander of the Georgia department of D. A. V. terminates within a month. He explained he does not believe a man actively engaged in politics should inject organizations into his campaign.

He is married and the father of two children and for several years has been active in bar and fraternity organizations.

Text of Announcement.

Text of his announcement follows:

"DeKalb is one of the wealthiest and most populous counties in the state. Its more than 70,000 people are going to need able representation in the general assembly during the next two years. Present conditions are likely to bring about many problems, now unforseen, which will test the mettle of the men chosen for this honor. The county and state will benefit, or suffer, in accordance with the care and consideration given the selection of our lawmakers in the September primary.

"It is my belief candidates who are not willing to sacrifice their time and finances and really take their jobs seriously should run for some other better paid and less important office.

"While I am not making any stereotyped campaign promises in order to get votes, I shall meet the issues squarely as presented and I believe I am qualified by training and experience to deliver the type of representation which the people of DeKalb county have a right to expect.

Served in War.

"Shortly after moving to Atlanta from Nassau county, Florida, where I was born in 1898, I enlisted in the army in May, 1918, and served in the Eighteenth Service Company, signal corps, during the World War, being honorably discharged after the war on account of disabilities incurred in line of duty. Attending night school and working during the day in the offices of a large Atlanta law firm, I received my law degree from the Atlanta Law School in 1921 and have subsequently engaged in a general practice of the law in Decatur and Atlanta, being admitted to practice in all of the state and federal courts, and the United States supreme court.

"During the past two years, as one of the county attorneys for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, my office has closed more than $600,000 in government loans to distressed DeKalb county home owners."

Two DeKalb County Legislative Candidates

E. E. Carter, candidate for senator from the 34th Georgia state district, and Mrs. Boyd D. Quarles, only women ever to seek a legislative post in DeKalb county, are shown left to right above. Carter is opposing Paul Lindsay, veteran member of the DeKalb delegation in the Georgia house of representatives, and Mrs. Quarles is seeking the legislative post which David Ansley will vacate.

BEDINGFIELD TO AID LARSEN'S CAMPAIGN

John B. Bedingfield, of Cadwell, said last night he has been asked to assist the gubernatorial campaign of W. W. Larsen and that he was "willing to make any personal sacrifice I think would be beneficial to the welfare of the state and county."

Larsen, a resident of Dublin, opens his campaign headquarters here in a few days.

Bedingfield is a businessman and farmer of Laurens county. He is a former member of the state legislature and the state democratic executive committee. He served on the state democratic steering committee in 1931-32.

MOTHER SENTENCED TO HANG.

DORCHESTER, England, May 30. (AP)—Mrs. Charlotte Bryant, 33, a mother of five children, was convicted today of poisoning Frederick J. Bryant, her farmer-husband, and was sentenced to be hanged. The prosecution alleged she killed him because she was infatuated with an itinerant merchant.

RIVERS URGES SLICE IN GEORGIA GAS TAXES

Tells Rural Carriers Routes Should Be Included in State System.

CAIRO, Ga., May 30.—E. D. Rivers, speaker of the Georgia house of representatives, and candidate for governor, was principal speaker at the Second Congressional District Rural Letter Carriers' convention here today. While making no mention of Talmadge, by name, or any reference to his own candidacy for governor, Speaker Rivers did respond in vigorous terms to an inquiry about the highway situation.

He urged that all rural routes be placed in the state highway system and that they be used as a basis for the state's congressional delegation to get a special allotment of federal funds for their construction as U. S. post roads.

Gas Tax Reduction.

He urged that the people "smoke out" the state administration and either get more and better roads or force a reduction or temporary partial suspension of the gasoline tax since the state is getting extra millions of federal money. The convention later adopted a resolution urging inclusion of rural route roads in the state system.

Rivers said in part:

"Every rural route in Georgia should be placed in the state highway system. If Georgia will initiate a program of construction of rural routes, I am confident our United States senators and congressmen will be able to get additional federal allotments from time to time for this rural route construction program. These rural routes are already specifically recognized by the federal government as United States post roads, over which the federal government carries on its mail service to our farmers. But of course the state government must initiate the program.

County Efforts Opposed.

"This right of the state to initiate road programs upon which federal road funds are spent has only recently been insisted upon the 'nth degree by our present state administration. All efforts to permit the counties to deal direct has been vigorously opposed.

"The last legislature sought to add mileage to the state highway system which would have included many miles of rural routes. Our efforts were blocked, just as we were blocked on old-age pensions, just as we were blocked on free school books, just as we were blocked on longer state-supported common school terms, just as we were blocked on a general appropriation bill, and just as we were blocked on other constructive and progressive measures to co-operate with President Roosevelt in bringing more federal money into Georgia to help the masses of our people.

"Despite this blocking, however, we did go ahead as far as we could, and authorized the State Highway Board to take over much of this mileage into the state system.

"If these rural routes were placed in the state highway system, we would not only have the opportunity to bring more federal money into Georgia for their construction as United States post roads, but we would relieve the counties of a part of their heavy tax burden of county road maintenance.

Lower School Cost.

"Most of the rural routes are school bus routes. By taking them into the state system and getting an additional program of federal construction for them, we would reduce the cost of gasoline, oil, repairs and depreciation of busses in transporting our children to and from school. We would reduce the accident hazard to our rural school children. We would serve both rural routes and school bus routes. All of these rural routes are the main rural roads over which our farmers haul their products to town, and their guano to the farms. There is every reason why they should be made a part of the state highway system.

"We have an exorbitant gasoline tax. We are getting millions and millions more dollars from the federal government each year that we had not anticipated when we put on this heavy gasoline tax. We are seeing our revenue from the gas tax increase by leaps and bounds each year, yet we are but meagerly, if at all expanding our state highway system, and what roads we have in the system, as a whole, in a most deplorable condition.

Cut County Burden.

"I do not believe the placing of our rural routes in the state highway system would eventually cost the state much money, because we would finally, in my judgment, be able to get the extra money, thereby, from the federal government for their construction as United States post roads. We would certainly relieve the local taxpayers in our counties of a tremendous part of their already too heavy burden."

"There is much extra highway mileage which the legislature authorized the state highway board to take over that is not rural routes. There is no valid reason why all this mileage, too, should not be immediately taken over by the state, since we are getting all these millions of extra federal road funds.

"The people should force the state administration to expand the state highway system and take advantage of these extra millions to reduce taxes in the counties, or should force a reduction in the gasoline tax or at least a temporary suspension of part of it.

Keep School Funds.

"We should not, however, reduce or partially suspend the gasoline tax to the extent of taking any part of the three cents now allocated to schools, counties and bond retirements. It is an outrage for us to be paying this high gasoline tax, with the amount of revenue from it constantly increasing, and millions upon millions of extra road money being sent in by the federal government, yet not expanding our state highway system to relieve our local county tax burden, or even keeping the roads we already have in the state system in proper condition.

"The people should raise such a row about this state highway, rural route, and gasoline tax situation that we will 'smoke out' the state administration and get relief.

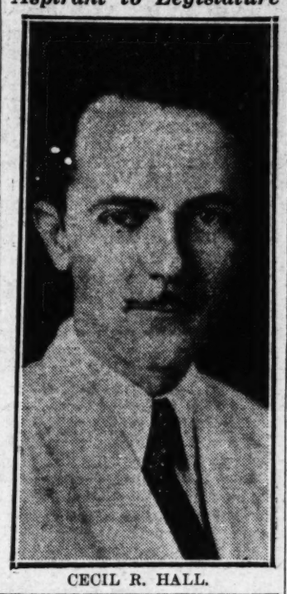

"The proprieties of this occasion will not permit me to say more, but I am glad to say enough to let you know how I stand."

HOWELL SAYS PEOPLE FAVOR ONE-MAN RULE

Indorsement of Governor's Control of Finances Is Predicted.

GOSHEN, Ga., May 30.—(AP)—Hugh Howell, chairman of the state democratiic executive committee and lieutenant of Governor Talmadge, in a political speech here today predicted the people will indorse the Governor's actions during his one-man control of state finances.

Howell said the issue in the campaigns this summer "is not whether you hate Talmadge or love him." Howell has been mentioned in some quarters as a possible candidate for Governor with Talmadge's indorsement.

The real issues of the approaching campaign, Howell said, will be:

"The taxpayers versus the officeholders and people on the pay roll. The workers against the shirkers. The thrifty and the savers versus the spenders. Shall the gimme crowd rule this state? Shall the people control the government or shall the government control the people?

"Shall the government support the army of people in luxury or shall the people support the government? Shall we maintain an army of officeholders who are living off the fat of the land at the expense of the workers and taxpayers? Shall we crucify the taxpayers and property owners to give fine automobiles, radios, electric refrigerators and fine clothes to an army of officeholders?

"Shall we continue this wild spending spree for everything conceivable in the mind of an officeholder instead of allowing people to work and save something for themselves and their families?"

Howell classified himself as one of the Talmadge "henchmen."

He added: "Hugh Howell, for the past several years, has been denounced because he was a Talmadge henchman and one of the red suspender crowd. Hugh Howell is for Talmadge.

"Those Talmadge principles are Hugh Howell principles which he is proud to have had a part in formulating and which he has supported, and wherever you find a Talmadge principle of government Hugh Howell will back it up 100 per cent, because it is for the good of the people of Georgia."

CONFERENCE IS HELD ON PLAN OF WELTNER

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 30.—(AP)—A conference of those interested in the plan of Dr. Philip Weltner that the governorship should seek the man and not vice versa, was held here this morning, the personnel of the gathering, a small one, not being announced.

It was reported that a subsequent meeting would be held in Macon on July 4, at which time it is expected some declaration will be made as to whom Dr. Weltner will support.

Dr. Weltner was not available tonight for any further divulging of his plan.

GEORGE LAYS WREATH ON TOMB OF WILSON

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Senator Walter F. George and Representatives Brown and Castellow, of Georgia, today laid a poppy wreath on the tomb of former President Woodrow Wilson at the National Episcopal cathedral here.

For a number of years before going to Princeton University at New Jersey, as its president, Woodrow Wilson practiced law in Atlanta.

BREWER IS CANDIDATE FOR EDUCATION BOARD

Former President Announces He Will Qualify for 4th Ward Nomination.

Ernest J. Brewer, former president of the Atlanta Board of Education, yesterday announced his candidacy as school commissioner from the new fourth ward, comprising the old tenth and seventh wards of the city. Brewer will qualify for the September 2 city primary. He has represented the tenth ward on the board for the past four years.

"I shall offer on my record," Brewer said yesterday. "It is my purpose to continue my efforts to prevent board members from placing their relatives on the payrolls of the board of education. Under my term as president of the board teachers and other employes were recognized and salary increases and adjustments were voted to eliminate inequalities.

"I will co-operate with the administration in any and all matters which I think are right and for the best interests of the educational program and for the children of Atlanta, but I reserve the right to vote my own convictions. I have no fight against any individual or group, and am in a position to represent the children, patrons, taxpayers and school employes without bias or prejudice. I shall issue a complete statement of my platform at a latter date."

Brewer was elected president of the board after only two years' service as a member of that body. He is one of the youngest men ever to serve in that capacity. He now has three children in school.

For the past several months, he has been engaged in a bitter but futile battle to bar nepotism, he asserted yesterday.

'STRATO AIRPLANE. SEEN BY STROMPL

Ship Forecast Which Will Travel From N. Y. to Paris in 6 Hours.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., May 30.—(AP)—Construction within four years of giant air transports with a cruising radius of 10,000 miles was predicted today by George Strompl, factory superintendent of the Douglas Aircraft Company here.

He predicted the completion within five years of a stratosphere airplane capable of flying from New York to Paris in six hours.

At present, Strompl said the company is working on a four-motored "sleeper" transport that will have berths for 30 passengers and cross the continent in 11 and a half hours with one stop.

In keeping with the advance in air transport construction is the secret work going on in the mystery rooms of the big plant on military aircraft, under the supervision of army and navy officials.

The only public revelations of the development are the launching and trials of the new aircraft. One of the most recent of these was the early morning trekking through Santa Monica streets to the ocean front of the remodeled navy mystery battleship of the air.

This giant armored sky patrol was launched first last year for experimental work by the navy. Early this year it was returned to the factory here for complete rebuilding. Last week it made its first emergence in new form from the plant.

DONALD KEITH, ACTOR, HURT IN AUTO CRASH

LOS ANGELES, May 30.—(AP)—Donald Keith, screen actor, was seriously injured today when his car turned over several times and pinned him under, it after crashing into another machine.

After the accident it was some time before police could extricate Keith from the wreckage.

JOHN J. POOLE.

JOHN POOLE IN RACE FOR STATE ASSEMBLY

Attorney Announces Candidacy for Place in DeKalb Delegation.

John J. Poole qualified Wednesday as a candidate in the democratic primary to succeed David Ansley in the house of representatives from DeKalb county. The candidate has been a resident of DeKalb county for the past 10 years and resides in Decatur district. He is a lawyer and a member of the firm of Poole & Graham. He graduated with honors in the 1929 class of the Lamar School of Law of Emory University, and for the past seven years has been engaged in the practice of law in the various civil courts of the state. In making his announcement, Mr. Poole issued the following statement:

"DeKalb county, which is one of the larger counties of Georgia, is the home of distinguished educational institutions and many of the state's outstanding citizens. The people of our county have elected to its various offices men of integrity and ability and I consider the position as representative of such a county, one of great honor and responsibility.

"If nominated and elected as a representative, I will favor:

"Co-operation by the state with the federal government in establishing an old age pension system limited to persons unable and without means of supporting themselves.

"Conservative use of all tax money to the end, that taxpayers shall get a fair return for their money expended.

"Improvement of educational facilities in rural communities.

"I will oppose:

"Sales tax on the necessities of life, which would fall heaviest on those citizens least able to pay and have the effect of raising the bulk of the state's revenue in the few larger counties, to be distributed for the purpose of keeping in office unnecessary officials in the courthouses of the too numerous small counties of our state.

"All forms of extravagance."

FRANK DENIES HINTING CORPORATIONS' DOOM

Former AAA Head Declares He Didn't Aid in Drafting SEC Bill.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Jerome N. Frank, former legal highlight of the old AAA and prominent member of the then so-called Roosevelt brain trust, emphatically denied here today reports from Illinois that in private conversation with a friend he had predicted extinction of private corporations as the result of the enactment of the securities exchange act.

In a letter addressed to Senator James Couzens, influential minority member of the senate committee on finance, under date of May 11, David J. Evans, of Evansville, Ill., charged that in conversation with Mr. Frank, at the time a leading attorney for the AAA under the administration of George Peek, a friend of Evans had observed: "This law (the SEC) is going to be very burdensome on corporations," to which Frank is alleged to have replied: "You forget, this is a New Deal. In a few years there will be no corporations."

Shown Letter.

When shown a copy of the letter, Mr. Frank, who is now devoting part of his time to representing the government in its presentation of PWA power cases before the United States and District of Columbia supreme courts, declared:

"This is all news to me, but I can say that it is an unqualified falsehood, made from whole cloth and, to use the language of the street, just a lot of horse feathers."

Mr. Frank further stated that he had nothing whatever to do with drafting the securities exchange act, that he was too busy at the time trying to keep the AAA afloat and intact. It will be recalled that Frank had a serious break with Administrator Peek over the application of marketing agreements to processors, and that he shortly thereafter left the AAA, about the time Peek was succeeded by Chester Davis as administrator.

Former Corporation Lawyer.

"I have been a corporation lawyer for some 20-odd years," said the youthful looking Frank. "I am sure I would not have survived if I held to the belief that corporations were useless. As a matter of fact, corporations are as much a part of our business and economic system as the government itself and, I believe, will always be with us, and rightfully so."

Mr. Evans termed the pending tax bill as not only "absurd" in its assessment of excessive corporation profits but, he wrote, "it is villainous and in direct line with the expressed purpose of the brain trust administration."

While Mr. Frank made no mention of his designation as a "brain truster" by certain elements in the country, he did explain that he was now, and had been for some time, a member of a prominent corporation firm of New York city attorneys and had made corporation law a study for a great many years.

SALES OF HEROIN 'PARALYZED' HERE

Cleanup of Alleged Peddlers Said To Have Cut Supply.

Illegal sales of heroin, a deadly drug, were declared "partially paralyzed" yesterday by T. E. Middlebrooks, chief of the federal narcotics agents in Atlanta.

"We have Joe Tom Fink under lock and key in Fulton tower," commented Middlebrooks yesterday, "and we believe that he is the most active heroin peddler in the city."

United States Commissioner Ed S. Griffith yesterday assessed a $2,000 bond against Fink. Elizabeth Lancaster, arrested with Fink, was put under $500 bond.

Chaptie G. Upchurch, another accused peddler of heroin, was held under $5,000 bond.

The drive against the alleged heroin peddlers has lasted a week. City detectives and federal narcotic agents co-operated in the drive which has resulted in the arrest of the Lancaster woman, Fink, Upchurch and I. M. Topp, whose bond has been fixed at $1,000.

DRIVE ON LAWYERS

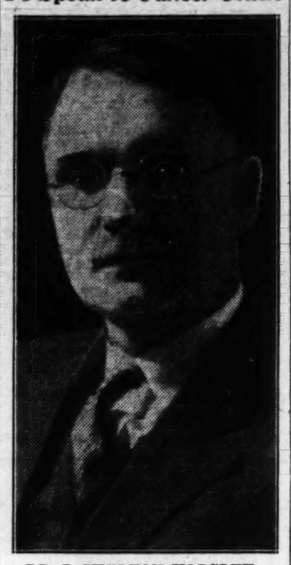

Tax Fi Fas. Will Be Served Immediately.

Fi. fas. against 200 Atlanta lawyers are going to be served immediately, Chief Deputy Sheriff Emmett L. Quinn said yesterday.

The State Revenue Commission recently turned over the 200 fi. fas. against lawyers for professional taxes and an additional 100 fi. fas., against Atlantans for income taxes.

Quinn said many of the lawyers are waiting until payment of the bonus before settling their professional taxes. The sheriff was enjoined last week from collecting fi. fas., against L. H. Coy and Louis Frankel, oleomargarine dealers, for $17,250 each. Judge Virlyn I. Moore ordered that they put up bond by Tuesday or else the fi. fas. will be served.

F. D. R. JOINS NATION IN WAR DEAD TRIBUTE

American people and is gratefully appreciated by me."

"It is almost axiomatic," said General Pershing, "to say that a people who complaisantly submit to unreasonable demands of a glamorous minority will certainly become the prey of a dictator.

"It is likewise axiomatic that there can be no permanence for a nation whose people have only a selfish interest in its welfare; and again that people who fail to govern themselves are destined one day to become a subject people."

"We must have peace," the general said at another point.

"These holy rites should arouse a new consciousness of the responsibility that rests upon us to serve the nation for which our comrades fought and died."

Roper said that, despite efforts to remove world antagonisms "not enough has been accomplished toward preventing the use of force and aggression."

The purpose, he added should be to "dedicate our individual attitude and combined efforts to the cause of peace with the same spirit of sacrifice, that these men and women we honor today so unselfishly portrayed in devoting their lives to the principles for which they fought.

Again he said:

"Evidently we have not given sufficient thought to the causes behind the desire of nations for power and expansion.

"There has been a definite trend toward nationalism and self-containment in all parts of the world . . . properly established and wisely guided international trade should lead to peaceful relations among nations.

"If modern civilization is not to be endangered by another destructive catastrophe, there must be an unremitting attempt to inculcate among peoples and among nations a broader understanding of these economic relationships, which, if not properly guided, may become causes of international conflict."

BUSINESS IN DISTRICT ON BOOM, SAYS BANK

Bank loans, deposits and money in circulation all were greater than in the prior month and year. Life insurance sales slid off 1.6 per cent.

Mills Active.

Cotton consumption in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee increased along with greater activity in coton mills. Alabama and Tennesee coal and pig iron production also was far ahead of last year.

A shadow on the bright picture was cast by drouth conditions which has cut crops throughout the sixth district which also includes Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi.

"Most parts of the district have had a lack of moisture which at the middle of May was becoming serious," the board said. "yields of truck crops have been cut. Watermelons have suffered."

The clearings for the week were $44,200,000, a gain of $10,800,000 over the same week in 1935.

Clearings for Saturday were $7,300,000, an increase of $2,300,000 over the corresponding day last year.

'JOHN D.' IS READY FOR RETURN HOME

Persons at Casements Decline to Give Exact Departure Date.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., May 30. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller's trunks are packed. Next week the 96-year-old oil millionaire will travel by air-conditioned railroad coach to his "golf house" home in Lakewood, N. J.

This afternoon a large consignment of trunks and other baggage from "the Casements," his home in near-by Ormond Beach, was loaded into a baggage car. Some of it bore the initials, "J. D. R." Others were the property of Mrs. Fannie Evans, the Casements' hostess, and some was consigned to John Yordi, Rockefeller's valet. All were addressed to Lakewood, N. J.

It is the Rockefeller custom to send baggage on several days before his departure so that his household in the northern home may have everything unpacked and ready for the master when he arrives, fatigued from the long journey.

Persons at the Casements declined to tell the exact departure date. Some of the towns folk say it will be Tuesday afternoon. Other sources say it will be Thursday afternoon. Rockefeller is most likely to leave on the 5 o'clock afternoon train which in the past has stopped to couple in the Rockefeller private car at a siding near the Ormond railroad station.

by the President, to be put in the position of competing with or conflicting with the broadcasting of the convention proceedings in Cleveland.

"In all probability, the Cleveland convention will have adjourned before June 14, and there is no possibility of a conflict between the broadcasting of the convention proceedings and the President's address in Vincennes."

The memorandum to the two officials supported Mr. Roosevelt's response to a question at a recent press conference as to whether he "planned to steal the show" from the republicans.

He replied his addresses would have no political significance but would be confined to recitations of early historical developments that led to the creation of Arkansas and Texas as states. The same applied to Vincennes where he will participate in the dedication of a memorial to George Rogers Clark.

TWENTY ENTER RACES FOR DEKALB OFFICES

and A. R. Almon, secretary of the DeKalb county democratic executive committee, asserted the local committee anticipated similar action this year. If, however, the state committee should not assess a fee, the DeKalb committee will fix one later, he said.

Judge James C. Davis, who now holds the judgeship of the circuit, will be opposed by Judge Frank Guess, and Claude C. Smith, incumbent solicitor, is to have opposition by Roy C. Leathers, former member of the legislature from DeKalb.

Unopposed Incumbents.

Following is the list of incumbents who are unopposed:

Tax Commissioner Homer H. Howard, Clerk of Superior Court Ben B. Burgess, Ordinary V. S. Morgan, Sheriff Jake Hall, and Surveyor T. C. Jackson.

Mrs. Quarles has been active in women's organizations and is an avowed supporter of the New Deal.

Carter, who opposes Lindsay, is an attorney, having engaged in practice in Fulton and DeKalb counties since 1921. He asserted yesterday he will announce his platform at a later date.

been started illegally by the President and asked his democratic colleagues if "that was the kind of picture," they wanted to have presented to the American people.

Bitter Debate.

The Michigan senator said the "Quoddy" had been turned down by the Public Works Administration and the Federal Power Commission and that the commerce department had indicated disapproval of the canal.

"There never was any justification for these projects and there isn't any now."

Fletcher warned unless congress acts, work on the two projects will stop about July 1, throwing 5,000 or 6,000 relief workers out of employment on the canal alone.

If carried forward, he said, the canal would provide jobs for 20,000 for five or six years.

He said the board to be created under the admendment could easily report by July 20, as proposed, because studies had been made of the project for many years.

HOUSE WILL CONTINUE PENSION INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Leaving the district attorney to worry over the contempt proceedings against Dr. F. E. Townsend, a house investigating committee today arranged to make a further study next week of the old-age pension plan.

Leslie C. Garnett, the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, assembled documents and records regarding Dr. Townsend's defiance of the committee and said he would submit the case to a grand jury the first of the week. He reiterated, however, his doubt it could be brought to trial before next fall if an indictment were returned.

FAMILY HOLDS PARLEY ON FREDDIE'S CUSTODY

HOLLYWOOD, May 30.—(AP)—Members of the Bartholomew family met today in a private conference aimed at settlement of the guardianship of 12-year-old Freddie, $1,000-a-week film actor.

Freddie, the family's chief money-earner, was the only Bartholomew not taking an active part.

Conferees were Freddie's father, Cecil Lewellyn Bartholomew, who arrived Friday from England; his mother, Mrs. Lilian May Bartholomew, who has been here six weeks seeking to wrest custody of the boy from his aunt, Miss Myllicent Mary Bartholomew; the aunt, and Freddie's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Robert Bartholomew.

TALMADGE UNLIKELY TO GO TO CONVENTION

his best friends do not know whether he will seek the senate or ask a third term as governor and then seek to p[ass] over his constitutional amendment by which his friends hope he could get around the constitutional barriers.

In any given five minutes' talk, public or private, Talmadge will give his hearers the indication he is still running for president, or he will attempt to unseat Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., or he will pitch himself into the yet unsolidified gubernatorial race.

Whatever office Talmadge seeks he will find opposition aplenty. The Russell lines are being laid and laid strong. Speaker E. D. Rivers and Judge W. W. Larsen, both active campaigners for the governorship, are alert to every situation.

Larsen Fires Thursday.

Larsen is ready to fire his opening salute at Swainsboro Thursday and the Rivers forces plan a gigantic opening July 4 at Gainesville. Since his Washington announcement several weeks ago the state has been waiting for the platform of Judge Larsen, announcement of the management of his campaign, and other details of his race.

If it does not come before, the Larsen program doubtless will be laid out to the voters in his Thursday speech at Swainsboro, where his friends from Dublin and other cities of the old district he served so long in congress are giving a barbecue in his honor.

Rivers Platform.

The Rivers platform was pretty well laid out in his recent Atlanta speech in which he advocated old age pensions, free schoolbooks, a seven-month school term and a restoration of orderly civil government. There will be other planks in the Rivers platform to be enunciated at Gainesville July 4, but the speaker's campaign also may be marked by developments like that which came from Cairo yesterday, when he outlined his views on the future of the state's high gasoline levy.

Of course by July 4 there may be other candidates in the field, some of whom already have made it known publicly they are considering entering the race.

Depends on Talmadge.

Doubtless Talmadge will indirectly determine how many will seek the governorship.

Should he run for re-election to that office others who aspire may not enter, but should he turn his attention to the senate and get behind a lieutenant of his for governor—and all of the lieutenants mentioned are weaker than Talmadge himself—it might have a tendency to open the race wide, very wide.

In the Talmadge camp the yearning to be governor of the commonwealth is beating strongly in the breast of more than one and, although on the surface the Talmadgeites belong to just one big happy family where everyone does as papa says do, down underneath there is a keen spirit of rivalry for the big boss' political affections and when the candidate is chosen there will be sulking on the part of some who, while they won't fight the Talmadge standard-bearer, won't break their necks drumming up support for him.

Howell in Spotlight.

Because he has been in the front line trench longer than any other Talmadge stalwart, Hugh Howell, the state chairman, is heard oftenest in discussions of the governorship from the Talmadge side of the picture. "Cousin Hugh," as Talmadge calls him, has his friends who are busy telling the Governor just what a fine candidate Hugh would make.

Senate President Charles D. Redwine, of Fayetteville, was next most prominently mentioned until several weeks ago, but recently the Redwine talk has died down, chiefly because it received no tonics from Redwine himself. Of all the people mentioned, the Fayetteville banker has probably done less to toot his own horn than anyone.

Boom for Camp.

Considered at first by only a few of his Cobb county friends and officers serving under him in the national guard, Adjutant General Lindley W. Camp now finds himself the center of a good-sized boom. General Camp himself is not taking the matter overly serious, but there are numbers of followers of the Talmadge credo who will take you in a fight if you take the Camp matter as a joke.

Tom Linder was considered a prospect for a time but since Columbus Roberts announced for Linder's commissionership of agriculture and there appears to be a growing tendency on the part of others to let Roberts oppose him alone, the "Linder for governor" talk has died down.

It is not only so in Linder's case but in others. The booms to send a man higher up deflate right quickly when some one starts to eye the job the boomee has.

Daily Announcements.

Almost every day finds someone new announcing a projected candidacy for statehouse offices. Some of these doubtless will drop out after the entries open, but even if the fields are cut in half there'll be lots of folks running for office in Georgia and lots of barbecue and oratory for those who enjoy the state's biggest biennial pastime.

Entries in all the state races are to close July 3, unless the state democratic executive committee sees fit to decline to follow the recommendations of Chairman Howell.

Until that time, it is an open season for speculation and announcements.

Governorship Possibilities.

Almost daily there are published reports of some man being a possible candidate for the governorship. During the past week Walter McDonald, blind member of the Public Service Commission, has been added to the long list of possibilities.

Others listed as probabilities include William Y. Atkinson, of Newnan, superior court solicitor; R. E. Matheson, deposed by Talmadge as a member of the State Revenue Commission; Judge Ogden Persons, of Forsyth; Abit Nix, of Athens; Blanton Fortson, of Athens; Zach Arnold, secretary of the Georgia Municipal Association.

The Rev. Caleb Watson, of Ocilla, and C. O. Trammell, a farmer of Durand, publicly have announced their candidacies for the governorship.

Many Seek Board Posts.

Up to date the most-sought-after state posts are those of the three public service commissioners to run this year and the place on the court of appeals to be vacated by Judge Frank Jenkins, candidate for the supreme court.

Two candidates—James A. Perry, of Lawrenceville, and Charles D. Rountree, of Wrightsville—are opposing Ben T. Huiet, of Atlanta. Huiet's formal announcement is expected in a few days.

J. L. Haralson, of Donalsonville, is opposing Commissioner Tom K. Davis, of Meigs, and M. L. McWhorter, of Stephens, is against Commissioner J. J. E. Anderson, of Statesboro.

Perry T. Knight, a former public service commissioner, announced today he would be a candidate this fall. Knight probably will oppose Davis.

Six Seek Bench.

There are six seeking the court of appeals job:

Jule Felton, of Montezuma; J. D. Bradwell, of Athens; Sam Mathews, of Fort Valley; E. S. Ault, of Cedartown; Joe Quillian, of Winder, and Dave M. Parker, of Waycross.

Judge Jenkins is now without opposition for the supreme court post which Justice Price Gilbert is giving up to retire.

Attorney General M. J. Yeomans, who has not announced his future plans but is expected by his friends to seek re-election, has opposition from F. E. Strickland, of Bainbridge, and Reuben Garland, of Atlanta.

William B. Harrison, deposed as comptroller general by Governor Talmadge, has announced his candidacy for the post. G. B. Carreker, named by the Governor to succeed Harrison, has not announced his plans.

Seeking "Vindication."

George B. Hamilton, ousted on the same day as Harrison as treasurer, also is making the race for "vindication." J. B. Daniel, his Talmadge-selected successor, is expected by his friends to be a candidate.

Another sought-after office is that of lieutenant governor, although the people won't decide whether they will create such an office until the November general election by balloting on a proposed constitutional amendment.

DeLacey Allen, of Albany, former state Legion commander; State Senator J. M. Simmons, of Bainbridge, and State Senator J. S. Pope, of Lyons, are actively campaigning for lieutenant governor, a job Governor Talmadge wants created.

All of the state's 10 congressmen, members of the general assembly and all statehouse offices are to be voted on in the primary.

FULTON CANDIDATES MAPPING CAMPAIGNS

Fulton this year, since important issues are to be decided as well as important offices filled. Tax Collector T. Earl Suttles said that more than 45,000 persons are eligible to vote in the fall elections, which is the largest number ever known in the history of Fulton county.

Fulton voters will not get to cast ballots in the state senatorship race this year, as the rotation system gives that privilege to Clayton county in 1936 and to Henry county the following year. G. Everett Millican, mentioned as a possible candidate for Atlanta mayor, now holds that legislative office.

A three-cornered race for the senatorship looms this year, with W. V. Whaley, mayor of Jonesboro; E. J. Wells, of Forest Park, and T. Q. Sullivan, of near College Park, already campaigning for the position. Whaley served one term in the legislature and Wells is a former member of the Clayton county commission. Sullivan is a grocer. An active interest in this race is being taken by residents of Atlanta and Fulton county, because of important legislation scheduled for the next session.

Two Legislators Doubtful.

Probability that two present legislators will not offer for re-election this year is being strongly talked but as in most political palaver, there is still an element of doubt.

It is almost certain that Almand will not run again, because of his position as assistant city attorney. If he should, however, it was understood that Hastings will not offer against him.

The race for Ramsey's position is likewise extremely unsettled due to uncertainty as to whether he will be a candidate to succeed himself.

As a member of the teachers' union, in the last election Ramsey received the support of labor but this year it is not known just what laborites will plan, as Luther Still is a veteran of the typographical union, being an employe of The Constitution.

Only Two in Field.

Except for the assurances of McRae that he will be in the race against Boykin, there seems at present to be no other opposition in prospect for the solicitor general. Boykin defeated McRae in the last general election and subsequently won a suit for libel from his opponent. Several lawyers have their eyes cocked on Boykin's place but it was considered doubtful that any will enter this year except McRae.

Judge Howard has repeatedly announced that he will not attempt to succeed himself in the superior court if he had opposition. Recently, however, five panels of petit jurymen passed a resolution lamenting the fact he plans to retire from the bench and urging him to run again. The judge replied that on no account would he enter another race for his judgeship.

Interesting Race Seen.

Those redoubtable political observers, who are invariably inveterate stump-sitters and sideline remark makers, declare also that Judge Dorsey and Hudson will supply an interesting race for the superior court judgeship now held by the former governor of Georgia and former solicitor general, Dorsey.

Hudson, a Carroll county school teacher who was assistant solicitor with Boykin for 10 years, has definitely announced he will seek Dorsey's position. Dorsey has never run for the seat he now holds, having been appointed to that bench when the city civil court was abolished by legislative action and a new superior court judgeship created.

All in all, even though the gubernatorial races and the thus far secret campaign of Governor Talmadge hold the state spotlight in September, candidates in Fulton county for offices will certainly command attention when they open up barages with big guns just as soon as the state and county executive committees fix closing entrance dates.

This means a great deal to you as a motorist. It is our way of safeguarding the interests of every purchaser and it leads to this—"The mechanical depreciation on a Ford is less than most cars, especially after the first year."

This is one sign of the extra value in the Ford V-8. Accuracy in manufacturing is another. (The Ford is made to unusually close precision limits.)

And there is a long list of fine-car features that are exclusive with Ford in the popular field.

Let's check over a few of these:

Have you a V-8 engine in your car? You pay at least $1645 for it in any other car but the Ford.

Does your car have Center-Poise Riding? Ford gives you this modern feature—"a front-seat ride for back-seat passengers."

Does your car have reliable, fool-proof Super-Safety Mechanical Brakes? The Ford V-8 gives you this proved, dependable design, with 186 square inches of braking surface.

OFFICERS ARE SHIFTED BY STURDIVANT ORDER

Captains and Lieutenants Change Watches; Eligibility Committee Named.

Routine shifts in the official personnel of the Atlanta police department involving three captains and five lieutenants were ordered yesterday by Police Chief T. O. Sturdivant.

Captain George T. Butler, who has commanded the morning watch for the past several months, goes to the day watch; Captain Neal Ellis, who has been in charge of the evening watch, succeeds Butler, and Captain S. J. Roberts, formerly on day duty, goes to the evening shift.

Lieutenant Fred Tippen is transferred from the morning to the day watch. Lieutenant E. E. Callaway, formerly on day duty, succeeds Tippen.

Station lieutenants were shifted as follows:

Jack Williams and his assistant, Patrolman Claude Carroll, from evening to morning watch.

M. A. Hornsby and his assistant, Patrolman George Caldwell, from morning to day.

Luther J. Caroll and his assistant, Patrolman S. B. Satterfield, from day to evening.

Sturdivant also designated Lieutenants E. W. Ginn, W. M. (Buck) Weaver and M. B. Petty as a committee to investigate the character and eligibility of aspirants for policemen's jobs to election. The chief stipulated that the report should be filed in time for submission at the June 12 meeting of the safety committee.

In compliance with orders of the committee at its regular meeting Friday night, the chief instructed policemen to co-operate with the health department in enforcement of ordinances requiring owners of dogs to have them inoculated against rabies and to procure city licenses. In addition, officers of the department were ordered to issue copies against persons violating the ordinances against thumbing rides within the limits of the municipality.

The shift in the official personnel is a routine matter, according to Chiefs Sturdivant and A. Lamar Poole.

ANNIVERSARY PLANNED AT LOG CABIN SCHOOL

Martha Berry To Speak at June 7 Exercises of Institution.

The Log Cabin Community Sunday school, on Log Cabin drive, near Atlanta, will celebrate the 24th anniversary of its founding at 11 o'clock next Sunday morning, June 7, with a varied program including addresses by Martha Berry, head of the Berry schools, and Mrs. Inez Henry, her executive secretary, and numbers by the Berry schools quartet, an accordion sextet and an orchestra composed of Atlanta musicians.

The Sunday school was one of the first interdenominational institutions in this part of the country and was established 24 years ago by a small group of parents of the section who wanted a Sunday school for their children entirely free of sectarian limitations.

Beginning in a small log cabin already standing, the Sunday school has grown to an enrollment of more than 200, and occupies a large log house built adjacent to the original structure. The original log cabin was built about 70 years ago and, according to legend, was first used as a roadside tavern or saloon.

The anniversary celebration program is expected to attract a large number of members and friends of the Sunday school. Following the main addresses and numerous musical selections, dinner will be spread on the grounds.

The orchestra is under the direction of Professor George F. Lindner and includes Professor Charles W. M. Johnson, Laura Thompson, Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, Mrs. Cecil Stockard, J. P. Wilhoit, C. L. Fox, Rose Thompson, C. S. Crofoot, Clarence Marbut, Robert Logan, Mrs. Geraldin Baldwin, Dr. Lewis Ray and Erwin Morgan.

CANDLER FIELD SMASH LEAVES FLYER UNHURT

A quick-thinking flyer's plane was smashed, but he cheated death at the Candler airport at about 9.45 o'clock yesterday morning.

The pilot, Carl Voellter, of Miami, had taken off in a cabin monoplane when the motor stalled at a height of 30 feet. The ship plunged eartnward toward an embankment at the far end of the north-s th runway.

Voellter maneuvered rapidly and turned the plane away from the embankment and toward the garage of the army air corps detachment. A wing was crushed and the landing gear demolished, but the cabin and its occupant were unhurt.

The pilot had come to Atlanta Friday and was returning to Miami when the crash occurred.

Georgia Bicentennial Tablet Will Be Unveiled Tomorrow

A massive bronze tablet, bearing the image of General Oglethorpe and inscribed with the names of distinguished Georgians since 1733, will be unveiled here Monday morning, June 15, at impressive ceremonies celebrating Georgia's bicentennial. The ceremonies, to be held in the rotunda of the state capitol, beginning at 11 o'clock, will be attended by many leading Georgians and by the descendants of many of the most famous soldiers and statesmen of the state.

The tablet celebrating Georgia's progress since 1733 was prepared by a committee appointed by the bicentennial commission. Members of the committee are Ivan Allen, chairman; J. Bulow Campbell, Robert L. Foreman, Dr. Willis A. Sutton and T. Guy Woolford.

It is a large bronze tablet about eight feet wide and six feet high, bearing a bas relief of General Oglethorpe at the top, with the colonial seal on the left and the seal of the state of Georgia on the right. The year 1733 appears on the left and 1933 appears on the right.

Under the bas relief is the memorial inscription in raised letters, with James Edward Oglethorpe in large type.

Below the inscription are the names of eminent Georgians from Oglethorpe to those of today. Names of all the governors of the state are listed. Inscribed in large bronze type, the names can be readily read at a distance of 40 feet. An ornamental border, composed of leaves of the cotton plant and four-leaf clovers, surrounds the tablet.

At the exercises, Dr. Sutton will present the tablet to the Governor, for official acceptance in behalf of the state. Mr. Allen will preside. The invocation and the benediction will be pronounced by Bishop H. J. Mikell, of the Episcopal church.

Dr. Sutton was selected to make the presentation following the death of Pleasant A. Stovall, former president of the bicentennial commission, who died before the tablet was completed.

Palmer To Make Housing Study On Tour of European Countries

C. F. Palmer, regarded as one of the south's best informed men on slum clearance and low cost housing, will leave Atlanta today, accompanied by Mrs. Palmer, for a new tour of Europe and on his return will file a semi-official study of his observations with Washington housing officials.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer will drive to New York and will take their car with them aboard the Queen Mary as it returns to Southampton, England, after its maiden voyage to America.

Several weeks will be spent in a survey of England's latest private capital developments as the pair drive through the country. Southampton, Canterbury and other cities en route will be visited. Photographs of the enterprises will be made.

To Visit Netherlands.

The Netherlands will be given especial attention and Amsterdam and The Hague will be visited and outstanding recent undertakings will be given minute study.

Denmark and Sweden will be next on the itinerary and there is a probability that Leningrad will be included.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer will leave Southampton on August 8 for the return trip, but will land in Canada and make a survey of the most recent developments in the eastern section the United States.

To Report Findings.

En route home, Palmer will make a semi-official report of conditions, developments and the method of financing them to Washington housing officials.

Palmer has been closely identified with Techwood and University low cost housing developments made in Atlanta by the federal government. It was due largely to his initiative and interest that the Atlanta projects were among the first of the nation to be undertaken. He is a member of the board of directors of the developments. He has made one trip to Europe in which he surveyed housing projects being prosecuted by various governments and also by private corporations. On his last trip, he gave especial attention to Germany's remarkable strides in establishment of better housing facilities.

Eleanor Powell Drops Nelson Eddy For Tall, Handsome Southerner

Actress Brings John Payne From New York for Movie Contract.

HOLLYWOOD, May 30.—(AP)—Movie colony gossip bared a four-month-old secret "romance" today that linked the names of Eleanor Powell, beautiful tap dancer, and John Payne, of Richmond, Va.

It was Samuel Goldwyn, movie producer, who filled in the name for the stranger with whom Miss Powell has been seen since her return to Hollywood from New York a week ago. Payne is the grandson of John Howard Payne, composer of "Home, Sweet Home."

When the dancer returned from New York, one of the first persons she met on the "lot" was Nelson Eddy, the singer. There was a quick embrace. "Well, well, well," said the movie colony.

Then, on three consecutive occasions, the dancer was seen a-nights dining with a dark-haired stranger, six-feet-two, and handsome. Nobody knew him, but he wasn't Nelson Eddy.

Yesterday Miss Powell made a hurry-up trip across town, entered the gates of another studio and soon was walking, arm-in-arm, around the second-stage with the same stranger.

"His name is John Payne and he's been here four months preparing for a role in "Dodsworth," " finally admitted Goldwyn. "He came from New York. That's where he met Miss Powell. They were in the same show.

"He was a little chilly when we first offered him a contract. I understood she convinced him that he ought to take the opportunity. So he came on ahead of her. Since then she has been coaching him, giving him little tips about working in front of the cameras. I understand they're together most of the time.

"Romance? Well—," Goldwyn winked. "You'd better ask them."

ATHENS, ALA., TO CUT POWER RATES MONDAY

ATHENS, Ala., May 30.—(UP)—The City of Athens will observe the second anniversary of its use of Tennessee Valley Authority power by reducing electric rates to commercial and industrial consumers 10 per cent Monday.

The TVA was notified of the reduction today in a letter from Mayor R. H. Richardson Jr., of Athens, to David E. Lilienthal, TVA power director.

Since Athens started using TVA power from Wilson dam on June 1, 1934, electric rates have been cut in half, the use of power has trebled and revenues have increased 30 per cent, officials said. The tax rate has been unchanged and reductions have made in the city's bonded debt, Richardson said.

58 DIE SUDDEN DEATH ON DAY OF WAR DEAD

Autos Account for 43 of Victims, Water 8, and Planes 3.

By the Associated Press.

A mounting list of dead marred the nation's holiday last (Saturday) night, with motor, train and plane accidents claiming at least 58 lives. Drowning added its grim quota of Memorial Day victims.

Automobile accidents on highways in more than 16 states brought death to 43 persons. Airplane crashes in Illinois and Massachusetts added three dead to the list, and there were six drowned and two more missing in waters.

Near Guthrie, Okla., the baggage car of a Santa Fe passenger train plunged 35 feet into a river, and the body of one of the men feared drowned was recovered.

Three persons met death near Youngstown, Ohio, when a passenger train struck an automobile at a crossing.

Scores were injured throughout the country as families observed the patriotic holiday.

Worst tragedy of the day occurred near Richmond, Va., where six or seven riders in an automobile were impaled on lumber from a truck their car smashed into. All six died.

Two women were burned to death after a motor collision at Indianapolis.

Flood waters of the Republican river carried off two persons in Colorado, one of whom was given up for dead. Two Missouri boys drowned, one in a swimming pool and another in a fall into a cistern.

Reported motor accidents by states: California, 2; Colorado, 1; Illinois, 3; Indiana, 2; Iowa and Kansas 1 each; Michigan, 4; Minnesota, 1; Nebraska, 3; New Jersey, 1; New York, 6; Ohio, 4; Oklahoma, 1; Pennsylvania, 3; Virginia, 7; New England, 3.

PEDESTRIAN HURT BY GLASS IN CRASH.

BALTIMORE, May 30.—(AP)—Miss Ilona Sprouse, 16, a pedestrian, was cut by flying glass when two automobiles collided here today. The machines knocked down a street lamp within a few feet of her.

Police said the automobiles were driven by Charles H. Middlecamp, 35, Clarendon, Va., and Miss Mary V. Wetzelberger, of Baltimore. Middlecamp was charged with failure to give right of way, Miss Wetzelberger with reckless driving.

PRIVATE EMPLOYERS FIRING CULT MEMBERS

alleged purveyor of a revolver used in the legion slaying of Charles A. Poole, no longer serves the city as a milk inspector. The Governor's staff of investigators, it was said, has several state employes under surveillance.

All of this developed from what police had believed to be a routine "gang shooting" on the night of May 12. The body of Poole, 32-year-old WPA worker, lay in a ditch on the west side of the city.

Someone had heard the "Black Legion" mentioned with the name of Poole. Homicide squad detectives rounded up 12 members; charged them with murder when a few confessed that Poole had been killed because he had beaten his wife, an expectant mother.

Then came denials, repudiations and conflicting stories. Harvey Davis was named as "colonel" f the black-robed and hooded legion which dashed around the countryside in automobiles to inflict its penalties on those of Catholic or Jewish faith; of negro blood; whose activities stamped them as un-American.

Forced to Join.

Members, forced to join the terroristic band through fear of the blood oath, were shown to exist in almost every state. Vergil F. Effinger, of Lima, Ohio, was named as the man to whom money from the sale of robes, dues and the like went. Dr. William Shepherd, of Bellaire, Ohio, was alleged to be the national commander of this band fashioned along lines of the Ku Klux Klan.

Among the 12 Detroit Black Legionnaires, charged with the murder of Poole, were those who confessed he was shot because the rope for his hanging did not arrive in time. Dayton Dean, police said, confessed he had fired at the victim as he stood only a foot away. Dean told authorities that the death gun had been purchased from Lupp, a charge the self-styled "recruiting officer" of the Legion denied.

Action Monday.

Inquiry in Oakland, Jackson and Genesee counties revealed the existence of strong Legion bands there. At Jackson, four prison guards were suspended for Legion activities as a grand jury went into the matter of frequent floggings, enforced initiations and arson.

Today weary investigators for Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea enjoyed a holiday respite from their almost ceaseless endeavors. After the weekend, they planned to redouble their efforts with the aid of the state. The 12 charged with Poole's slaying will be examined in court on Tuesday; on the same day the Jackson county grand jury will resume with the testimony of a man who was flogged by the Legion and dared to talk about it.

CELEBRATION HELD.

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn., May 30. (AP)—Speaking on the final program of Johnson City's semi-centennial celebration, General Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans' Administration, said he hoped America would never have another war, "but if such a time comes, I know our country will be in the right and I hope it will be adequately prepared."

Mrs. Zioncheck Emulates Her Husband

gin Islands, and from Washington to Pittsburgh and points south, including four arrests since last January 1.

Moaning in Hall.

Police and ambulance attendants, answering an early call to Zioncheck's apartment this morning, found Mrs. Young lying moaning in the hall, just outside the congressman's door.

"They threw me out five or six times," she sobbed hysterically. "They broke my hip and left my lying here most of the night. Don't take me to the hospital. Take me to the police station so I can swear out a warrant."

As Dr. George Lemeshewsky put an emergency splint on Mrs. Young's right leg, Zioncheck thrust his head through a crack in the door and said: "Why should we let her stay here? This isn't a charitable institution."

Dr. Lemeshewsky reported to police that Mrs. Young showed signs of having a fractured hip. The injury at that time had not been verified by X-ray.

Law on My Side.

Going to his office at the capitol during the afternoon, Zioncheck gave this as part of his version:

"I asked her to leave several times, each time in a decent manner. She refused each time to leave.

"Under the law and under my lease this apartment is my home and she was legally and properly ejected."

After describing her side of various events during the night, Mrs. Young said that early this morning the congressman hit her with a broom, shouting, "I'm a witch and my broom won't behave." He capered around the room, she said, riding the broomstick and waving his beret.

After Mrs. Young had been taken to the hospital, Zioncheck invited bystanders into his apartment. There he played with his pet terrapins, poured generous drinks for the crowd and posed for pictures.

Pantry Was Bare.

Mrs. Zioncheck tried to get breakfast but could find no food in the pantry. She repeatedly asked her husband's "guests" to leave the apartment.

Later she walked angrily out of the room and into another apartment down the hall, refusing to say whether she and her husband had quarelled.

When Zioncheck returned to the apartment from his office, his bride was still absent.

At about the same time the congressman's attorney, L. Q. C. Lamar, said he had consulted Zioncheck about the possibility of bringing a charge of illegal entry against Mrs. Young.

at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard, one of the busiest intersections in the city, and turned a corner of Highland and Greenwood avenues on "one wheel," the detectives said.

Charges of reckless driving, passing a red light, possession of whisky and speeding were placed against Woodruff. He was released under bonds totalling $400. Ninety-four pints of fine imported and domestic whisky and 39 pints of gin were allegedly found in the car.

No serious damage resulted when the liquor car struck the other machine, driven by a negro, and was then hit by the police car.

DIRIGIBLE HINDENBURG.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, May 30.—(UP)—Germany's super-dirigible Hindenburg began its return journey to Frankfort-on-Main today. The huge airship left Santa Cruz airport at 5:40 a. m. (Atlanta time), on the homeward flight of its second South American visit. Upon arrival at its base it will resume its scheduled service to the United States.

S. S. QUEEN MARY TOPS S. S. NORMANDIE SCORE

member of the passenger list and great Olympic hurdler, set a record of 58 seconds in a run around the promenade deck, a distance of a little less than a third of a mile. He ran the distance, after some cajoling by friends, without any warming up and in his regular deck wearing apparel, for a record that certainly will stand up on this trip.

So steady and lacking in vibrations is the Queen Mary that passengers have practically no sensation of being at sea while strolling through the glittering shops of a large central open space called "Piccadilly Circus." There is no doubt about it. This is essentially an English ship. While the circus shops draw continuously large crowds, the bars are the most universally patronized spots on the ship. Notwithstanding this, there is no evidence of drunkenness.

"Wooden Derby."

Many passengers find consolation in the Derby they missed at Epsom Downs in backing wooden horses of strange lineage that move backwards and forward over waterjumps in obedience to the throw of the dice.

No decision has yet been reached as to what will happen to our stowaway, Frank Gardiner, an unemployed shipbuilding laborer from Cardiff. He will be turned over to United States immigration officials at New York, but it is said he has friends at court. Many aboard have asked a fellow passenger, Robert W. Bingham, United States ambassador to the court of St. James, to intercede with immigration officials in behalf of the stowaway, who hopes to find employment and happiness in the United States.

Collection for Stowaway.

Gardiner will not be paid for his work in the ship's pantries, where he was placed following his discovery, but passengers have taken up a substantial collection for him. He has become something of a mascot or protege of the passengers in spite of his 41 years and grizzled appearance. He got aboard the ship at Southampton with the engine room crew by posing as a greaser. The master at arms found him hiding in the fan room.

"I decided to stay on board on the spur of the moment," he said by way of apology. "I am tired of not having a job. I wanted to make a voyage on the world's greatest ship."

We were told today that the Queen Mary and the French Normandie, contenders for trans-Atlantic crossing honors, passed on the high seas and exchanged wireless greetings. The Normandie did not come in sight of the Queen Mary but every passenger, British or otherwise, seemed to feel the presence of a personal rival in a great trans-oceanic race.

SENATE EXTENDS TIME TO PAY FOR BRIDGES

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The senate passed today and sent to the house a bill extending by 10 years the time in which to amortize the cost of bridges built by the Alabama State Bridge Corporation across the Tennessee, Tombigbee, Warrior, Alabama and Coosa rivers, in Alabama.

Congressional consent to build the bridges was given in 1928 with the stipulation that the amortization be completed in 1946. Under the amendment approved today the time limit would be extended to 1956.

DALLAS CAB SERVICE IS TIED UP BY STRIKE

DALLAS, Texas, May 30.—(AP)—Calls for taxicabs went unheeded here today as 600 drivers stood firm in their demands for a third instead of a quarter of the gross receipts.

Every taxicab in the city was out of service.

"Until this thing is settled no taxicabs are going to roll," declared Buddy Dyer, the strike leader. "We're going to stay out until we get a living wage."

Operators contended they were unable to meet the demands.

ARAB FORCES ENGAGE ENGLISH IN CLASHES

Pacification Declared Impossible Unless Demand for Cessation Is Met.

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)

JERUSALEM, May 30.—(UP)—Arabs waging guerilla warfare to enforce their demands for cessation of Jewish immigration to Palestine today turned to battle with British military forces while harassed Jews engaged in their traditional Sabbath observances.

Arab ambuscades which for three weeks have poured rifle fire into Jewish settlements were moved to important highways for night and day attacks on British troops acting as military escorts for motor convoys.

Firing from ambush was reported in various sectors.

A large force of Arabs, hidden in ambush on wild mountains on the lonely road to Jericho, fired on British forces convoying Anglo-Jewish owned potash from the Dead sea.

The British forces deployed and attacked the Arab hillside defenses. Numerous heavily armed Arabs were killed and wounded and several were captured.

Arabs attacked a British armored car sent out to patrol the Jericho road after the ambuscade. They also attacked a patrol on the Hebron road. The British returned the fire.

Rebellious acts by Arabs were reported from all parts of the country.

They included attacks on orange groves in Jewish settlements.

Arson, pillage, blocking of road culverts and disruption of telephone and telegraph communication were attributed to roving bands of Arabs apparently acting under a central direction.

At Jaffa a lumberyard owned by the Bulgarian consul in the Jewish city of Tel Aviv was set afire.

British troops fought a band of Arabs at Rumleh where new attempts were made to bomb the postoffice and the office of the British district commissioner.

After a conference which lasted only 15 minutes Lieutenant General Sir Arthur Wauchope, British high commissioner to Palestine, and the Arab mayors of Palestine were deadlocked in their efforts to effect a settlement of the crisis which has plunged the entire country into turmoil.

The mayors said the pacification of Arabs in Palestine is impossible until their demands for a cessation of Jewish immigration are met.

The British, under the Balfour declaration, are pledged to maintain Palestine as a homeland for the Jews of the world.

KAISER'S BANNER RAISED BY HITLER

German Navy Celebrates Anniversary of Battle of Jutland.

KIEL, Germany, May 30.—(AP)—The phantom flag of the kaisers was raised over Germany's new navy today by order of Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Despite the fact that, legally, the old imperial banner is non-existent, it whipped high above Hitler's head from the top mast of his dispatch ship, his trim, White Grille.

This was the day of Germany's naval celebration, and a day of memorial. It was the twentieth anniversary of the Battle of Jutland, celebrated as a victory in Germany.

Der Fuehrer, flanked by Admiral Erich Raeder, chief of the admiralty, and General Werner Von Blomberg, chief of the army general staff, dedicated a great monument to the memory of the men and ships which went down off Jutland.

The monument, a gigantic structure of brick and cement, overlooks the sea. In it were placed, as a permanent exhibit, the battle flags of the Jutland engagement.

Hitler himself did not speak during the ceremonies. Instead, he listened to Admiral Raeder, Vice Admiral Wolf, and Admiral Von Prother, who was chief of staff during the Jutland fight.

EDITORIAL WORKERS VOTE TO JOIN A. F. OF L.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—The American Newspaper Guild, at its third annual convention, voted 84 to 5, to apply immediately to the A. F. of L. for affiliation as "an international union."

Voting on the resolution was preceded by sharp debate over a majority report and two minority reports.

The majority report said that "the interests of newspapermen are bound up with the welfare of all workers in the nation" and added that the A. F. of L. could best serve these interests.

A minority report opposed affiliation, contending the A. F. of L. is a "crumbling institution which in its present set-up may not survive another six months."

A second minority report opposed a final vote on affiliation at the present time and suggested that the question be submitted to a referendum "as a way to avoid embarrassment in the Green-Lewis dilemma." The report said the present A. F. of L. controversy might reach a climax by the time the referendum was completed and that even if affiliation were approved national officers of the guild could defer action if the labor split appeared serious.

BODY OF PILOT STARK REPORTED DISCOVERED

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 30. (UP)—The plane and body of Howard Stark, author and department of commerce aviator missing since he disappeared in a blinding snow storm on January 16, was reported found tonight in Little Cottonwood Canyon, north of here.

An unidentified man rushed into police headquarters and told of finding a plane buried in a snowbank. The body of a man was inside, he said.

Police and sheriff's department officers immediately started for the canyon.

Stark disappeared January 16 while enroute to Salt Lake City from Rock Springs, Wyoming.

WHITE HOUSE FORCES GIRD FOR TAX BATTLE

Stiff Fight To Again Revise Bill, as F. D. R. Wishes, Set Monday.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Clashing opinions sounded today over the senate finance committee's revised bill to boost income surtaxes and levy heavily on corporations with battle lines forming on three fronts.

Senate republicans were called to confer before the opening of floor debate next week to determine their attitude toward the bill.

Senators who forced committee approval of the compromise bill which ignored President Roosevelt's call for higher taxes on undistributed corporation income predicted it would be passed by the senate.

On a third front, administration forces served notice that they would fight on the floor to shove the bill back into line with White House wishes.

Senator Black, democrat, Alabama, spent the morning writing a minority report and said he would attempt to insert more drastic taxes on undistributed corporation profits when the bill comes before the senate for consideration.

The senate committee bill would increase surtaxes on individual income surtax brackets between $6,000 and $50,000; tax corporation income at 15 1-2 to 18 per cent; levy on undistributed corporate earnings at a flat 7 per cent rate, and subject dividends in the hands of shareholders to the 4 per cent normal income tax.

The acting finance committee chairman, Senator King, democrat, Utah, said he hoped to start the bill through debate Monday and obtain final action on it in two days.

But with the measure far afield both from that passed by the house and that urged by President Roosevelt, a sharp and prolonged conference fight with the house apparently was assured unless the senate makes wholesale revisions.

FLOODS NOW COVER DUST BOWL SECTION

Two Drowned as Waters Sweep Over Colorado and Kansas.

GRANADA, Col., May 30.—(AP)—Flood waters swirled over portions of the southwest dust bowl tonight, leaving two persons dead, a third missing and several towns inundated.

Just one year ago one of the worst floods into the west's history took more than 100 lives in Colorado, Nebraska and Kansas.

The dead in today's flood were Don Gates, 27, of Denver, drowned near Straton, Col., and Mrs. John Dyatt, caught in flood waters near Goodland, Kas. An unidentified youth was missing at Carlton, Col.

The high waters poured down the Arkansas and overflowed the Republican river 100 miles to the north. The Republican was one of those whose waters, a year ago, caused $13,000,000 damage and heavy loss of life in the three states. It was receding today.

A week of rain saturated eastern Colorado prairie lands, and heavy storms last night brought precipitation that ran off almost as fast as it fell, filling dry gulches and stream beds to overflowing.

The 400 residents of Granada fled from their homes, recalling a flood last July 12 on Wolf and Granada creeks in which nine persons drowned, water was 18 inches deep in streets. Holly, east of here: Wiley, northwest of Lamar, and Carlton were flooded.

COUNTER-REVOLUTION NIPPED IN PARAGUAY

ASUNCION, Paraguay, May 30.—(AP)—Officials revealed today that an attempted counter-revolution plot was thwarted last night with the arrest of several politicians.

Officials of the government of President Rafael Franco claim those arrested were adherents of the former regime of President Eusebio Ayala which was overthrown by those last February.

Dispatches last night reported from Buenos Aires there had been an armed insurrection.

The newspaper El Diario, war veterans' association organ, said the Franco government had been thoroughly aware of the plotting and made the arrests at the opportune moment.

Those arrested were affiliated with the liberal (Ayala's) party. Liberal party activities as well as those of other old parties had been banned for a year under the totalitarian decree issued by President Franco February 17.

THREE MEN ARRESTED IN BARROOM SLAYING

LANCASTER, Pa., May 30.—(AP) Police arrested three men today, charging them with the slaying of Harry W. Shank, 40-year-old cafe worker, in a barroom free-for-all.

A blow on the jaw felled Shank and his head struck a brass rail in front of the bar. The impact broke his neck.

Sergeant Ray Charles filed formal charges of murder against Joseph Martella, 30; Francis Gerstly, 28, and Ralph Gill, 21, accusing them of starting the general fight, in the rooms of the Third Ward Republican Club. Charles said they had been drinking.

The Constitution's Stamp Corner

By Albert C. Leitch

Some interesting figures on stamps and stamp collecting are given in Stamp Collectors' Hand Book, by Kent B. Stiles, published by the National Scientific Publications, Inc., 142 West Twenty-fourth street, New York city.

Mr. Stiles writes that more than 90,000 stamps have been issued since Great Britain issued the first adhesive in 1840. Of this number one stamp is valued at $50,000, this being the 1-cent magenta issued by British Guiana in 1856 and of which only one copy is known to exist today.

There are nine stamps worth from $10,000 to $20,000 each, numerous ones valued at between $1,000 and $10,000, and a great many which would bring, if placed on sale, hundreds of dollars apiece.

To possess all of the varieties of stamps which have ever been issued would require an expenditure running into the millions of dollars. No one has ever possessed such a collection and probably no one ever will.

The Stamp Collectors' Hand Book is a desirable and informative book for the beginner. Its price is 25 cents.

Another publication sent for review and which should prove of considerable value to the philatelist is Hammond's Stamp Collectors' Atlas. There are many places named on stamps which no longer appear in ordinary atlases. The maps contained in this book, which is 8 1-2 by 11 inches, show every past or present stamp issuing country or place. The price is 25 cents. The publishers are C. S. Hammond & Company, New York city.

Covers should be sent unstuffed and unsealed to George D. Houchin, 405 East Washington street, Bloomington, Ill. Air mail postage is required. Place address well to the right side. Commemoratives on outside envelope appreciated.

The postmaster at Bloomington is also applying a cachet different from the society cachet.

Postmasters and employes of the postal service have been notified of the issuance of a special postage stamp in commemoration of the centennial anniversary of Arkansas statehood.

The stamp is the same size as the special delivery stamp, 84-100 by 1 44-100 inches in dimensions, arranged horizontally. It is enclosed in a double line border and is printed in purple. The central design of the stamp is a view of the old state house, showing the portico of the central building, and portion of the right wing, enclosed in a circular panel. On a white ribbon panel along the lower edge of the circle is the title "Old State House" in solid gothic. At the left, partly below the central design, is a representation of the first settlement in Arkansas, above which appears the name "Arkansas Post" in solid gothic arranged in two lines. In a corresponding position at the right is pictured the present state capitol with the name above in dark gothic in two lines. In each lower corner within circular panels with double line borders and solid ground is the denomination numberal "3" in white architectural roman. At the center of the lower edge of the stamp in a narrow horizontal panel with white edges and ornamental ends is the inscription "U. S. Postage," and directly underneath "Three Cents" in white roman lettering. Arranged in solid gothic lettering in the upper corners is the wording "Arkansas" at the left with the date "1836" below, and "Centennial" at the right with the date "1936" underneath. The stamp is being printed by the rotary process without straight edges and will be issued in sheets containing 50 stamps.

The new stamp will be first offered for sale at the postoffice in Little Rock, Ark., on June 15, 1936. It will be available for sale at other postoffices beginning June 16, or as soon thereafter as production will permit.

Stamp collectors desiring first-day cancellations on June 15 may send a limited number of addressed covers, not to exceed a total of 10, with cash or postal money order remittance payable to the postmaster, Little Rock, Ark., covering the value of the stamps required for affixing. Personal checks, or other postage stamps will positively not be accepted in payment. To receive the June 15 postmark, covers must reach the postmaster, Little Rock, before the close of business on that date. Covers will be accepted from individual subscribers only and shall be legibly addressed by typewriter or pen. Compliance can not be made with unusual requests, such as for the affixing of stamps bearing plate numbers or the irregular placing of the stamps on the covers, etc. To facilitate handling and to prevent damage in transit, covers should be of the ordinary letter size.

Requests for a supply of uncanceled Arkansas Centennial commemorative stamps must not be included with orders for first-day covers to the postmaster, Little Rock. Stamps desired for postage purposes should be purchased at the local postoffices as soon as available.

For the benefit of collectors desiring selected stamps for philatelic use, the Arkansas Centennial stamp will be placed on sale at the Philatelic Agency, Postoffice Department, June 16, but the agency will not prepare covers for mailing on that date. To insure prompt shipment, separate mail orders must be submitted for the Arkansas Centennial stamp, excluding all other varieties of stamp stock.

Postmasters at direct and central-accounting postoffices may obtain a limited supply only of the new stamp on separate requisition to the department on form 3201-A, indorsed "Arkansas Centennial." Postmasters at district-accounting postoffices may obtain small quantities of these stamps by requisition on the central-accounting postmaster.

In order that the Arkansas Centennial stamp may be placed on sale at postoffices as widely as possible on June 16, shipments may be made in advance. Postmasters who receive a supply of this stamp before the close of business on June 15 are hereby directed to postively not allow any of the stamps to be placed on sale before June 16.

Unique plans are being made for the first day sale at Little Rock on Arkansas Statehood Day, June 15, of the Arkansas three-cent commemorative stamp.

The Arkansas Centennial Commission will hold special exercises at the postoffice the morning of the sale in which the following will participate: Roy M. North, assistant to the third assistant postmaster general, representing the Postoffice Department, and guest of the commission, who spent a number of years in this postoffice before he went to Washington; Governor J. M. Futrell; H. C. Couch, chairman of the Arkansas Centennial Commission; members of the executive committee, and C. C. Kavanaugh, postmaster at Little Rock.

The postmaster is arranging to have placed in the corridors of the postoffice a large number of tables with chairs and sponge cups to accommodate the many stamp dealers who will come from all over the United States with their thousands of first-day covers and also for use of collectors.

At the request of the Arkansas Centennial collectors' advisory committee, the commission has had designed by skilled artists 10 special, copyrighted, Arkansas Centennial Commission official first-day covers. This is believed to be the first time an official first-day cover has been issued by a state commission and is expected to enhance the value of these covers very much. The covers are now on sale at the office of the Arkansas Centennial Commission, War Memorial building, Little Rock, Ark., at 10 cents each. A total of 13 cents should be sent if collectors desire the commission to address, stamp and mail these special first-day cover envelopes on June 15, the first day of sale. These commemorative first-day covers will also be sold in the corridor of the postoffice on June 15.

A limited number of first-day covers will be autographed by Governor Futrell, Mr. Couch, chairman of the commission, or Colonel A. R. Rogers, di- These will be sold by the commission rector of celebration, A. P. S. No. 21. at $1 each.

WIFE'S CHARGE LEADS TO SHOOTING OF MATE

Woman's Father Held; Husband in Critical Condition at Grady.

A domestic quarrel in which a husband slapped his wife ended with the wife's father shooting and critically wounding his son-in-law with a .44-caliber pistol in the kitchen of their home at 334 Georgia avenue, S. W., at about 6:30 o'clock last night, according to police reports.

The wounded man, W. S. Jones, 30, a bricklayer, was taken to Grady hospital. A single bullet struck him in the right side, near the shoulder blade, causing internal hemorrhages, doctors said.

The father-in-law, R. A. Johnson, 55, who operates a grocery store at 336 Georgia avenue, S. W., was arrested on a charge of suspicion of shooting another. His wife was a witness to the incident, police said.

According to the report of Radio Patrolmen H. R. McCurley and M. Y. Rutherford, the shooting occurred when Jones' 24-year-old wife told her father her husband struck her.

Violations of Traffic Rules

REPORTER TAKES NOTE OF INFRACTIONS AT PEACHTREE-BROAD-LUCKIE INTERSECTION.

Peachtree, Broad and Luckie Streets.

An open season on pedestrians for careless and discourteous motorists has evidently been declared at the junction of Peachtree and Broad streets, shown in the above photograph. With no traffic control present at the busy downtown spot, a Constitution reporter, representing The Constitution Safety Council, noted the following examples of discourtesy and carelessness by drivers during a short period Friday afternoon:

12:45 o'clock: Sedan made a left turn from Peachtree to Luckie street without signal.

12:48 o'clock: Sedan made left turn from Luckie into Peachtree without signal.

1:07 o'clock: Sedan made a sharp right turn from Broad street, reversing direction into Peachtree at the point of the junction at a speed too fast for safety to other cars and pedestrians.

1:11 o'clock: Sedan made left turn from Peachtree into Luckie without signal.

1:12 o'clock: Roadster caught by lines of cars while trying to make left turn from Peachtree into Luckie. Traffic tied up.

1:15 o'clock: Sedan made left turn from Broad into Luckie without signal.

The reporter, finding no signal lights nor traffic signs to guide motorists and no crosswalks remaining at the busy junction, searched the block for a policeman to ascertain if there are any city ordinances to govern vehicle and pedestrian traffic at that location.

No policeman could be found within a radius of a block from the junction.

A call to police headquarters brought the information that if there are no traffic lights or yellow signs to instruct traffic no ordinance exists to govern the downtown junction.

With that, it appears a game of every man for himself, with pedestrians carrying the short end of the odds. This junction is a spot where human life must be considered by the driver.

A man was killed at this scene a short time ago by a negro on a motorcycle. That was the only traffic death in some time at that location. But that does not mean more cannot follow.

It's up to the motorists. Drive carefully.

PLAY PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Truly the most fascinating card game ever invented. Just out. This deck plays all the games the usual cards play and in addition plays the most remarkable game known—PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES. Based on the fundamental operation of our Government. Pictures of 13 form-er presidents in the Spade, Heart, Diamond, and Club suits (in Red, White and Blue, with White House on Backs) simulate the usual 52 playing cards. Washington ranking as the 4 Aces, Lincoln as the 4 Kings, etc. Then there are three new members: the President, the Supreme Court, and the Constitution. The President by virtue of the NRA suit can supersede any card in the deck. That is, you can make the President an Ace, a Deuce, a Ten or Jack, whatever you need; but if the Supreme Court be played, the NRA is canceled and the President is rendered powerless. However, if the proposed amended Constitution be played, the Supreme Court is thereby unauthorized to govern Congress. Accordingly the President is re-empowered and in addition becomes an independent point "the EAGLE." If a citizen between the ages of 5 (the number of points on the Star) and 13 (the number of stripes on the Flag) wins this contest he (or should we say SHE?) will be (tiny) President of the United States. There is a Child's Declaration of Independence officially asserting the Junior Citizenry's right to have an Independent Political System. This Document may be signed by the child July the 4th, 1936, and mailed to the Junior United States of America, Independence Hall, Philadelphia, to be preserved. A modern game for a modern nation. Highly entertaining for the adult, and highly educational for the child. An honor to any American home. Who will be the first (tiny) President of the United States in your vicinity? Prepaid $1.

SOUTHERN ENGRAVING MOVES TO NEW PLANT

Most Modern Equipment Installed at Forsyth and Alabama Location.

An Atlanta firm in business here for nearly 40 years recently moved into a new and larger location, acquired extensive new equipment and placed itself as one of the leading concerns of its kind in the south.

The Southern Engraving Company, formerly at 160 Alabama street, S. W., is now located at the corner of Forsyth and Alabama streets, where the most modern equipment has been installed in the 6,000 square feet of well-lighted floor space.

Henry W. Grady, manager of the engraving concern for 24 years, invites the public to visit the plant any hour of the day or night and have explained to them the interesting processes of the latest methods of engraving.

Best Motto for Success.

Looking back over the years of successful business, Mr. Grady yesterday declared the present enviable position of the firm is due to giving the customer exactly what he wants exactly when he wants it. No mistakes and no delay, said Mr. Grady, is the best motto for a successful engraver.

Since the time of rather crude engraving processes of nearly half a century ago, the Southern Engraving Company has kept abreast of the newest methods and was the first Atlanta engraving plant to install the latest Chemco strip film and Chemco accessories.

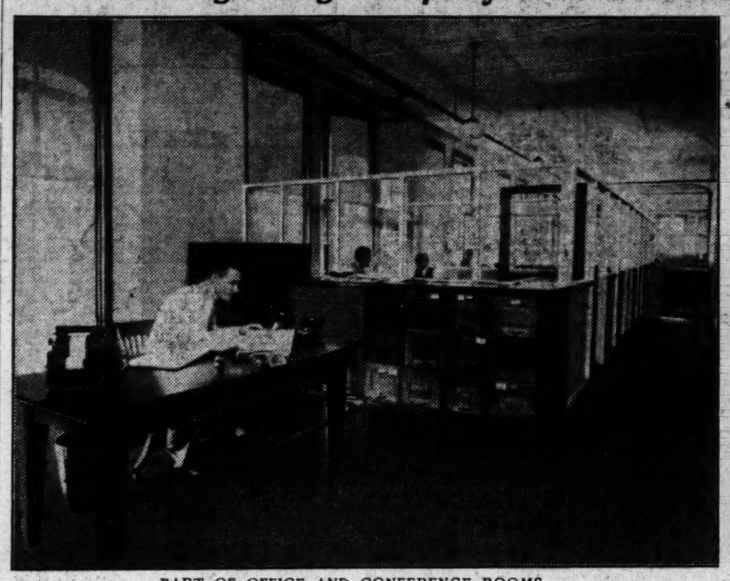

The Chemco equipment is designed not only to produce a better plate for all classes of work, but to do so in much less time and at considerable saving to purchasers on many types of work, according to Mr. Grady.

Experienced Craftsmen.

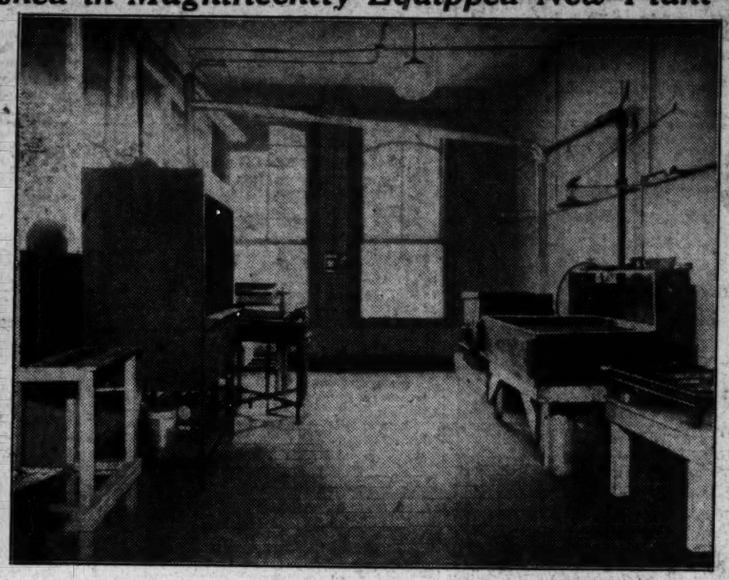

The highest type of work is also made possible by thoroughly experienced craftsmen, many of whom have been with the concern for more than a dozen years, the manager pointed out.

An engraving expert from New York recently visited the new plant of the Southern Engraving Company and declared it to be one of the most efficient and best arranged plants in the United States, giving Atlanta purchasers of engraving work the assurance of the best obtainable.

'I Wish I Was Dead' Grieves Widow Of Worker Killed by Black Legion

Mrs. Poole Looks at Her 3-Week-Old Baby Tearfully and Reveals She Has Only $10; "The Insurance People Will Have To Pay Me?" She Asks.

By HARRY FERGUSON.
(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)

DETROIT, May 30.—(UP)—The widow of Charles Poole pulled a faded red wrapper closer around her shoulders tonight and said she wanted to die.

"If wishing could do it," she said, "I guess I would be dead."

This is the girl—pale, thin and 22—who was lying in a hospital maternity ward on the night of May 12 when word was brought to her that her husband had been killed. A few days later the nation began to hear about the Black Legion and how Charles Poole fell a victim to its vengeance. The sullen file of men who were arrested and charged with the murder said Poole was killed because he had beat his wife just before she gave birth to her child.

The baby, now threes weeks old, lay on a bed.

"Her name's Nancy," Mrs. Poole said. "She's having her bottle now. I mix syrup in with the milk. My other girl's name is Mary Lou. She's 18 months."

It's not easy to get in to see Mrs. Poole. She now lives with her sister, Mrs. Owen Rushing, in a small duplex. Mrs. Rushing keeps double bolts on the door. On top of a bookcase is a 12-inch section of lead pipe, covered with black tape.

Got to Keep It Handy.

"We got to keep the weapon handy," Mrs. Rushing said.

"Nancy looks like a healthy kid." I said to Mrs. Poole. "Is there anything to that story about your husband beating you?"

"There's not a word of truth in it," she replied. "They said he broke a couple of my ribs, but you know I wouldn't be alive now if he'd done that. Charlie never beat me."

"Then why did they kill him?"

"I figure some of the Black Legion had a personal fight with Charlie. One of these fellows went around to the rest of them and got them to help. Charlie didn't know anything about the Legion. I never heard of it until all this happened. I wonder why all this had to happen to me? I keep wishing I could die, but my sister tells me to forget it. She told me to go out to a movie and forget my troubles for a while so I went but I didn't stay through the double bill. I forget the name of the picture I saw, but Gene Raymond was in it. If wishing could do it I guess I would be dead."

"Have you any money at all?" I asked her.

"I guess about $10," she said. "There's the insurance money, but there's going to be some trouble about that. I got to write to Charlie's mother—she's in Newark—to get his birth certificate. The insurance man says I can't get the $1,000 until they get Charlie's age straightened out. Some say he was 29 and some say 32. I'm not sure.

"We never made much money. Charlie was on the relief and was getting $8 a week. Then the relief gave him a job, but they didn't give us any more money. I hope to get the insurance. They'll have to pay it to me, won't they?"

"They'll Have to Pay It."

"Sure they'll have to pay it," said Mrs. Rushing, "but you got to write to Charlie's mother."

"I wrote today," Mrs. Poole said, "but I still got to mail it."

She wept. Mrs. Rushing picked up a mop, stepped through the door into the kitchen and began to scrub the linoleum.

"I'm still sort of weak," Mrs. Poole said. "I'm not long out of the hospital."

"You better rest up in bed a while," Mrs. Rushing called from the kitchen.

"I guess I better," said Mrs. Poole. "What are you going to do for money to buy food and milk for the babies when the $10 is gone?" I asked.

"I don't know. My sister can't help me much. I got to get the insurance and then when I get stronger I can look for a job. I had a job before I got married. I worked in a factory. I don't want people to think I'm begging for money. But they will have to pay me the insurance, won't they?"

"Sure they will," said Mrs. Rushing, coming back into the room. "They'll have to pay you, but you better go rest up in bed a while now."

"Guess I will," Mrs. Poole said. "Good-bye."

RECREATION PROJECTS NEARING COMPLETION

4,500 Acres in Morgan County To Be Available to Atlantans.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Approximately 8,900 acres of land unsuited for agriculture are bing purchased and developed for public recreation by the Resettlement Administration in three counties in Georgia, it was announced here today by resettlement officials.

At Hard Labor creek, near Atlanta, in Morgan county, 4,500 acres are being developed; 900 acres at Alexander Stepehens memorial, near Augusta, in Taliaferro county, and 3,500 acres at Pine mountain, near Columbus, in Harris county. Development of these areas is now under way, officials said, and practically all of them will be opened to public use during the summer months.

Located for the most part within 50 miles of large Georgia industrial centers, these recreational projects will provide opportunities for camping, hiking, picnicking and outdoor sports of all kinds.

Approximately $4,000,000 has been made available for the purchase of land for similar purposes in all states of the Union. The land in Georgia, now being purchased, is either lying idle or devoted to unsuccessful farming, officials declared.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other outdoor organizations will be accommodated with cabins, together with central lodges or recreation buildings, central kitchen and dining rooms and outdoor fireplaces. Other types of development work also will include roads, trails, dams and picnic grounds.

The Kings Mountain project, a 10,000-acre tract in South Carolina, adjoins the site of the famous battle of Kings Mountain, where American troops won a notable victory during the revolution.

POETRY BY MCKIBBEN PICKED FOR ANTHOLOGY

John T. McKibben, Atlanta poet whose work has appeared on numerous occasions in The Constitution during the last several years, has been notified that his verses, "Dual Personality," published recently in The Poetry World, has been selected for publication in "The Paebar Anthology of Verse."

The purpose of the anthology, of which the coming edition will be the sixth, is to preserve the most significant works of American poets. McKibben is an employe of the postoffice department here.

RESERVOIR PROJECTS CUT FROM FLOOD BILL

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Representative Whittington, democrat, Mississippi, a member of the committee seeking to adjust house and senate differences on the Overton flood control bill, said today provision for 26 reservoirs on the Arkansas and White rivers had been eliminated from the measure by the committee.

Authorization for construction of the reservoirs was written into the bill by the house, which later failed to put an additional $126,000,000, needed to construct them, in the measure. Army engineers disapproved the reservoir program.

Senate and house conferees failed to reach a final agreement.

TWELVE TO FACE TRIAL IN LOAN INTEREST CASE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 30.—(AP)—Twelve individuals from seven loan companies will face trial in criminal court the week of June 8 on charges of collecting illegal interest.

Indictments of the 12 followed an investigation by W. T. McLain, district attorney general, of alleged illegal practices of what he termed "the loan shark element here."

Republican Platform Prospects Are Beclouded as Opening Nears

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Another week of teeming politics has illustrated the explosive possibilities of the republican convention but left the prospects for the presidential ticket and platform still beclouded.

On the surface, the developments did not appear highly significant. Aside from a trickle of delegates to Governor Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, among the uninstructed 90 from New York, the situation of the various candidates changed relatively little.

But the presence of strong undercurrents was indicated. A final formal protest against the regular leadership in the party by Senator Borah, of Idaho, led to new queries about what he would do, if frustrated at Cleveland. He would not say.

The decision by former President Hoover to attend the convention, and probably make an address as titular leader of the party, was accepted as of great potential importance. On what he may say on the second day of the convention, June 10, may hinge whether the party will demand uprooting of the New Deal in practical entirety or—as some leaders favor—agree with some basic principles.

The presence of Hoover and Borah on the scene at the same time presents the possibility of a clash over their opposing convictions. Although Borah would not comment, it was indicated today that he did not contemplate a speech to the convention. Instead, it was said, his views will be followed through by the Borah delegates.

The quickness with which managers for Landon and for Colonel Frank Knox, of Illinois, welcomed the Hoover appearance did not escape notice. Nothing of the sort was said on Borah's behalf.

The organizations of the candidates gradually were being shaped up for the big showdown. Governor Landon picked John D. M. Hamilton, who has been looking after his interests in the east, to make the nominating speech for him. Hamilton will transfer his offices to Cleveland early next week.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, who had been working closely with Representative Snell as assistant floor leader of the house, was picked to be the Landon manager on the floor of the convention. If Snell presides as expected, their association will make Martin easily recognizable despite any hubbub on the convention floor.

An attempt to prevent Snell's election to the permanent chairmanship was started by Robert H. Lucas, an uninstructed delegates from Kentucky, who formerly headed the republican headquarters here. He proposed, instead of accepting the recommendation of the arrangements committee, that the delegates take matters "into their own hands" and entrust the gavel to former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois.

Lowden, who returned this week from Europe to find his name also being mentioned for the presidential nomination itself, said he would not even attend at Cleveland. He went back to his Illinois farm to work on the farm plank for the platform.

Eight votes were picked up by Landon in New York during recent days. The delegation leaders insisted the great majority would not commit themselves until they reach Ohio.

Representative Martin set up a claim of 375 votes for Landon on the first ballot against the "minimum of 230" which Edward A. Hayes has claimed for Knox. Martin contended the Kansan could "not be stopped because there is nobody with a strong working organization who can stop him."

He and Hamilton both said no consideration had been given to a vice presidential nominee by the Landon forces. Should their predictions of success be borne out, Martin said further, the second-place choice need not necessarily be an easterner.

Although evidently remote, there was still the possibilty of selecting a democrat for the vice presidential nomination to present a "coalition ticket." Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, proposed former Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York.

Colonel Knox, in the speech expected to be his last prior to the convention, advocated in Chicago "generous recognition of the necessity of obtaining the support of not less than 3,000,000 democrats in the battle to be waged."

SOVIET ABOLISHES DISCRIMINATIONS

Moscow Moves Step Along Road to Classless Society.

MOSCOW, May 30.—(AP)—The all-union soviet control committee today abolished employment discrimination against classes privileged under the czarist regime.

The order removes bars to employment former members of the Russian nobility and merchants and was described as a sign of the growth of "soviet democracy."

It also puts a halt to discriminations against persons with criminal records.

The decision gives the former privileged classes equal rights with the proletariat under the communist administration. It is generally regarded as a major step in the soviet program of building a classless society as a foundation for future pure communism.

MARJORIE EASTABROOK WEDS HENRY CUSHING

MARION, Mass., May 30.—(AP)—Miss Marjorie Eastabrook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Reed Eastabrook, of Boston and Marion, was married here today to Henry K. Cushing, son of Dr. Harvey Cushing, celebrated brain surgeon.

The matron of honor was the groom's sister, Mrs. James Roosevelt, the former Betsy Cushing, wife of the President's eldest son, who was best man. Miss Elizabeth Nichols, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor.

U. S. SUPREME COURT INCLINING TO 'RIGHT'

Distinct Trend Away From 'Liberalism' Shown in Recent Decisions.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—The supreme court which five years ago was hailed as showing a tendency to go "liberal" was regarded as showing a distinct inclination to turn to the "right" as its turbulent 1935 termed neared its end tonight.

Only one major test of the court's "liberalism" remains. It is the decision on validity of the New York state wage law for women and children. Direct comparison of the new opinion with the court's decision on a District of Columbia wage law in 1923 is expected to reveal definitely its present tendency.

Speculation on the court's tendency to become more liberal was begun five years ago after Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes was accepted by a protesting senate to succeed Chief Justice William Howard Taft and Justice Owen J. Roberts took the seat of Edward Terry Sanford.

Hughes and Roberts soon sided on several occasions with the acknowledged "liberals" of the bench to write majority opinions. With the depression still in its infancy and little new legislation being written, the cases involved did not reach to the heart of constitutional questions.

Freedom of the Press.

A decision upholding freedom of the press under a Minnesota statute was one of the early important opinions. Later Hughes and Roberts joined the liberals to uphold the Minnesota mortgage moratorium and the New York state milk control law.

The strength of the court's "liberals" has remained constant during the period since 1930. The famous "liberal" Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes has been succeeded by Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo. Cardozo has voted as consistently with the other "liberals," Louis D. Brandeis and Harlan F. Stone, as did Holmes in his famous dissents.

The "conservative" strength of the court has undergone almost no change in over a decade. Justices Willis Van Denvanter, James C. McReynolds, George Sutherland and Pierce Butler have voted almost as a unit since they took the bench. Butler, the junior, was seated in 1922.

The balance of the court, therefore, rests almost entirely in the hands of Hughes and Roberts and both have given indications since the New Deal of siding more with the "conservatives" than with the liberals.

New Deal Decisions.

In only two major New Deal cases have both Hughes and Roberts joined the "liberals." Those were the only two cases which the New Deal won—TVA and the gold clause.

Occasionally there have been five-to-four votes such as that in the municipal bankruptcy law test of last Monday. In those instances Hughes has generally been the one to side with the "liberals" in dissenting and Roberts has gone with the "conservatives" to control the court.

It was this tendency alone which permitted the court to hold that the Guffey coal control act must fall in all its phases because the labor provisions were invalid.

Hughes held that the court should have permitted the marketing agreement and price-fixing provisions to stand because congress had specifically intended they should stand.

For the most part, however, the past term has seen the court divided on a six-to-three basis between "conservatives" and "liberals."

Observers have been somewhat surprised at Roberts' tendency to part with his chief as it was known before he took the bench that he had the deepest regard for Hughes as one of the keenest minds of the country.

In the past two years he has been more inclined to side with Justice Butler, the staunch "conservative" beside whom he sits on the bench and with whom he often engages in animated conversation during the argument of cases.

'OUR GANG' COMEDIAN DIES IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, May 30.—(AP)—Norman "Chubby" Chaney, the fat boy of "Our Gang" comedies, is dead.

The boy returned here in 1932 after two years in Hollywood. He became ill last year and went to the Johns-Hopkins hospital for treatment of a glandular ailment. He failed to rally after an operation and died yesterday at the home of his parents.

Chaney was 17. Funeral services will be held Monday.

HOLLAND CONFIRMED TO REPLACE RITTER

THOUSANDS OF ATLANTANS AWAIT ACTION OF CONGRESS TO ALLOW TECHWOOD OCCUPANCY

TABLET UNVEILING IN HONOR OF ALLEN SET FOR JUNE 13

Fort Mountain Park Exercises Will Be Tribute to Donor of Acreage, Including Top of Scenic Peak.

Many prominent Georgians are expected to attend the unveiling of a bronze tablet on Saturday, June 13, honoring Ivan Allen, widely known Atlanta businessman and donor of the first plot of land leading to the development of Fort Mountain State park, beautiful preservation in Murray county. Ceremonies will be held on the mountain by the State Department of Forestry and Geological Development.

The park, surrounded by some of the most beautiful mountain country in the state, is the site of an old Spanish fort which for many years has attracted archaeologists from all sections of the country. It is 90 miles from Atlanta, with a paved highway all the way. Parking spaces and all the accoutrement necessary for outdoor recreation have been installed for the convenience of the hundreds attracted by the beauty and the history of the site.

Gave 125 Acres.

The preservation was started as a result of 125 acres given by Mr. Allen, who, as a youngster attending grammar school in Dalton, often neglected his lessons to gaze out the school window at the mountain tops 15 miles away, and decided then and there he some day would own the top of Fort mountain.

Many years later Mr. Allen, recalling his boyhood resolution, bought the top of the mountain as a matter of sentiment. When the Chatsworth-Elijay highway was started, it was proposed to make Fort Mountain into a state park. Hearing the proposal, Mr. Allen donated his plot of land. Since then, several others have given tracts which made the development of the park possible.

The park was developed under the supervision of the State Park Department, with the co-operation of the National Park Service and members of the Civilian Conservation Corps stationed in Gilmer and Murray counties.

Highway to Peak.

A beautiful highway, 30 feet wide, has been constructed from the state highway to the mountain top. From the summit can be seen some of the most beautiful scenery in the south.

The Spanish fort, which frequently has been studied by archaeologists, is said to have been built by a lieutenant of DeSoto. It is from this fort that the mountain and the highway gets its name.

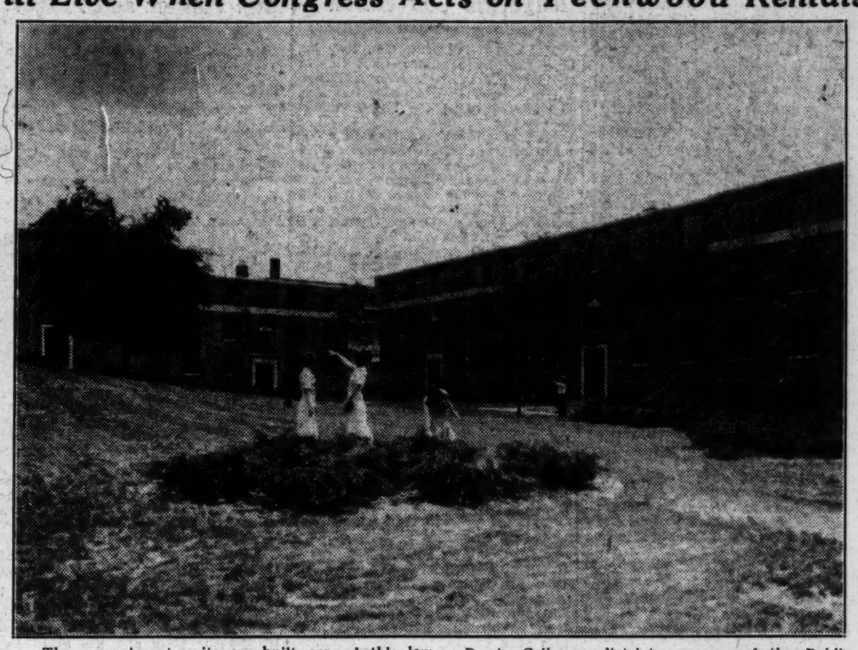

Ceremonies honoring Mr. Allen will begin at 3:30 o'clock (Atlanta time) Saturday afternoon. Many Atlantans, including Mayor Key, have indicated they will attend the exercises. In addition, delegations from Dalton, Ellijay, Cartersville, Rome and other near-by towns are expected to be present.

The exercises will be under the supervision of the Chatsworth Lions Club, of which Earl C. Foster is president, with the aid of the State Park Department; J. H. Gadsby, regional officer of National Park Service; Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, chairman of the state park committee, and W. B. Hartsfield, chairman of the Atlanta committee.

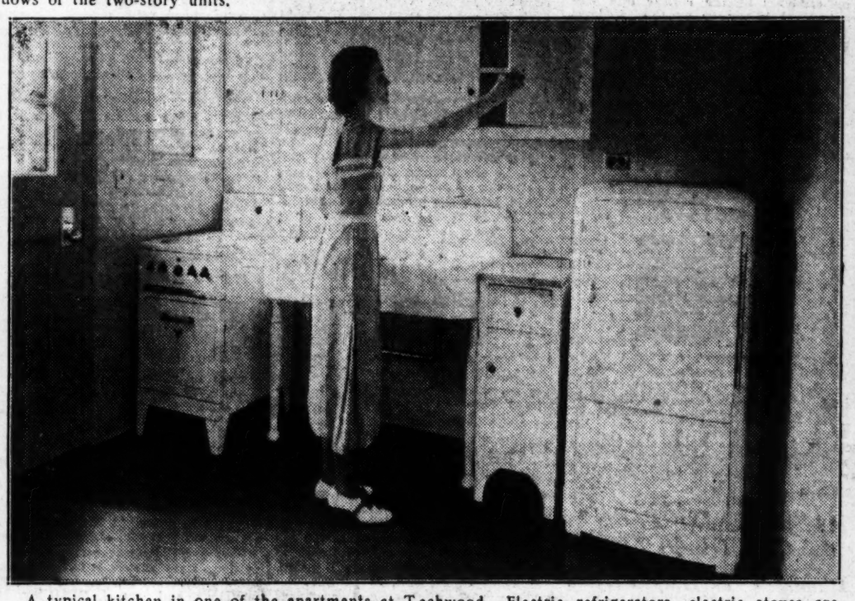

Where Atlanta's Fortunate Low Income Families Will Live When Congress Acts on Techwood Rentals

A typical entrance to one of the two-story row houses in the Techwood housing project that has been built by the government on Techwood drive, just south of Georgia School of Technology, in Atlanta. The houses are built on the fashion of duplex dwellings. To either side of the entrance may be seen the windows of the two-story units.

Three apartment units are built around this lawn. D. A. Calhoun, district manager of the Public Works Administration housing division, who is supervisor of the housing project, has spent thousands of federal dollars to landscape these grounds and within a few years they will be accepted as some of the classic beauty spots of the city.

A typical kitchen in one of the apartments at Techwood. Electric refrigerators, electric stoves are just part of the complete equipment installed by the government. The power will be bought at wholesale prices and the savings from these reduced prices passed on to the tenant. Miss Ailene Kenerson, of the project office, is shown inspecting this kitchen.

In the basement of every building at Techwood is a completely equipped laundry, as shown here. Miss Frances Darby, of the project office, is shown examining an ironing board, while Miss Ailene Kennerson stoops over a tub. Hot and cold water will be provided by the government and the power for the stoves in the center and for the electric irons will be furnished free of charge.

HOMES TO PROVIDE FOR 603 FAMILIES NEAR COMPLETION

Solons Must Set Rentals Before Occupancy Will Be Permitted; Tenants To Be Carefully Chosen.

Thousands of restless applicants are awaiting today action by congress that will permit approximately 2,500 or 3,000 Atlantans to move into the Techwood housing project.

Construction work on the apartments, houses and stores is practically completed.

"We're ready to go," announced D. A. Calhoun, supervisor of the project, yesterday as he awaited some word as to the amount of rentals that must be fixed by congress.

When congress announces just what rents may be charged, it will be the task of Calhoun and his office staff to begin then to weed out the many thousands of applications that are piled up in his office and to determine just what persons will be the lucky tenants in the 603 apartment and house units in the project.

May Stand Unoccupied.

Congress will adjourn at the end of this week. It will not meet again until next January. Unless some action is taken between now and the adjournment of the present congress, the completed buildings at Techwood will stand unoccupied until next January.

Atlanta's Techwood and University slum clearance projects are two of the first of 51 to be completed throughout the country.

The Techwood project, which has been built on Techwood drive just south of the Georgia School of Technology, is the first to be completed. The University project, constructed for negroes, is adjacent to Atlanta University in South Atlanta, and is nearing completion.

Each apartment and each house in both projects in Atlanta has been planned, constructed and equipped with an eye to the comfort, sanitation and privacy of each tenant.

Apartments and houses are soundproof. Each room has been built so that furniture can be cleared out and a hose turned on to clean up the place without any worry of water dripping down into the floors below. Each kitchen has complete electrical equipment—refrigerators and stoves. Each building has a laundry in the basement, where tenants may gather on washdays with electric stoves for the boiling of clothes, sockets for electric irons, washtubs with running hot and cold water and ironing boards that can be folded up into the walls. Electricity in the laundries will be supplied free of charge to tenants.

Cheap Electric Service.

Electric service for the apartments and the houses is being bought at wholesale prices. The tenants will share in this saving. Heat and hot water are furnished free of charge.

Apartments are in units of from two to five rooms. Houses are two-story affairs of the duplex type and there are six rooms to each.

Tenants will be selected with care. The background of each family will be carefully investigated. No one who could afford to rent from a private individual or company will be admitted. No favoritism will be shown. No influence will get anyone into one of these apartments or houses.

The projects are being erected as a slum-clearance program. It will be the government's policy to put into these apartments persons who by reason of low incomes are forced to live in slums.

Fire Hazards Abolished.

In the two housing projects in Atlanta, according to O. J. Parker, chief of the Atlanta fire department, the government has wiped out two areas capable of causing conflagrations equal to that of the 1917 fire in Atlanta, the worst the city has ever suffered.

Chief Parker said yesterday:

"It is not only a great thing from a standpoint of health and sanitary conditions, but because of the great fire hazard that existed in those two areas.

"There have been removed 342 old ramshackle negro houses covering about 40 acres. Both of these areas were in low swampy places and the fire department called on different occasions in case of heavy rains when the sewers would overflow and the negroes were marooned in the houses. Firemen would have to carry them to safety."

If congress does not act on the rental charges between now and the time of adjournment, it was declared yesterday that the government would let the completed buildings stand vacant until the congress can act next January.

Both projects cost approximately $2,000,000 each. They are being used as models for similar projects in other cities throughout the country.

RAILROADS FIGHT CROSSING DEATHS

Association Launches Annual Campaign To Slash Appalling Loss of Life.

Death at railroad crossings, that ghastly, terrifying experience which has occurred to far too many people of the country, is being fought by railroads as well as by organizations engaged in safe driving campaigns, such as The Constitution Safety Council.

The Association of American Railroads tomorrow begins it annual summer carful crossing campaign, which will extend through September 30. Summer is the time when railroad crossings are busiest. More motorists leave the cities for the highways and train schedules are heavier.

There are more possibilities of a disastrous meeting between trains and automobiles.

Time for Caution.

It is the time to exercise added precaution.

That is the reason the Association of American Railroads chooses the four summer months to impress on motorists the necessity of safe driving.

The effectiveness of the campaign is shown by records kept since it began in 1922. During that year 1,810 persons were killed over the country in crossing accidents. Last year, although the number of automobiles in the United States had more than doubled, only 1,680 fatal accidents occurred at crossings. The reduction in the number of people killed is ap-

Marker on Site of First Reunion Of Gray Will Be Unveiled Today

A bronze marker commemorating the first reunion of Confederate veterans will be unveiled this afternoon before many leading Georgians and representatives of U. D. C. organizations throughout the south, at impressive ceremonies to be held at Campbellton, Ga., under the direction of Mrs. M. P. Word, president of the Campbell county chapter of U. D. C., and Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, state president.

The marker also will distinguish the site of the old Campbellton courthouse, which survived the fire of Sherman's troops, but came to an undignified end in 1875, when it was sold, converted into a barroom and storehouse, and later wrecked and the material used for farm buildings.

This afternoon's ceremony, which will begin at 3:30 o'clock, will pay special tribute to Mrs. Elizabeth Camp Glover, who has been credited by the U. D. C. with originating the reunions of southern soldiers.

Leaders to Speak.

Principal speaker will be Mrs. Dennis. Other addresses are to be made by George F. Longino, Fulton county commissioner; McWhorter Milner, of Atlanta, commander of the southeast division of the Sons of Confederate Veterans; Dr. M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, and A. S. Perry, of Cuthbert.

Mayor Guy Hearn will welcome the visitors and Mrs. Word will preside. Mrs. Frank Lee, of Campbellton, will be formally thanked for her donation of the site for the tablet, and residents present at the first reunion will be introduced. Dr. L. A. Roberts, pastor of the Fairburn Baptist church, will offer the invocation.

The tablet will be unveiled by Miss Elizabeth Camp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Gaither Camp, assisted by other grand nieces and nephews of Mrs. Camp.

Marker Through Tech.

The marker, one of many to be placed at historic Georgia sites, was secured with the aid of Dr. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, through

STATE DEMOCRATS WILL HONOR ALLEN

Testimonial Dinner for Roosevelt Drive Leader Will Be Held Tuesday.

Marion H. Allen, Georgia Roosevelt campaign manager, and Mrs. Allen will be honored at a testimonial dinner at 8 o'clock Tuesday night at the Henry Grady hotel with leading Roosevelt supporters of the state attending.

All former chairmen of the state democratic executive committee have been extended special invitations, according to Alton Cogdell, chairman of the arrangements committee, who declared that loyal democrats from all parts of the state are expected to attend the dinner.

Mr. Cogdell will be toastmaster and several Georgia democratic leaders will make short testimonial talks.

"The thorough and efficient job done by Mr. Allen deserves a gesture of recognition and appreciation," Mr. Cogdell said yesterday. "Not only has his work been effective in raising funds for President Roosevelt's entry fee in the Georgia primary, but he has brought out a state-wide response that shows firm loyalty to our President.

"Both he and Mrs. Allen have worked unceasingly and unselfishly on the important job given them and loyal democrats of Georgia will find pleasure in honoring them at a testimonial dinner."

Reservations for the dinner may be made through Mr. Cogdell's office, 514 First National Bank building, or through representatives in the various towns of the state.

'SAVE COLUMBIA' DRIVE LAUNCHED

More Than Third of Fund of $300,000 Subscribed at Preliminary Meeting.

With more than $100,000 of a $300,000 development fund raised at a dinner meeting Friday night, Atlanta Presbyterians are enthusiastically lining up in the campaign to prevent the removal of Columbia Seminary from Decatur, according to Scott Candler, chairman of the campaign's citizens' committee.

Preliminary plans for general solicitation of funds in the Presbyterian churches of the city, as announced by Candler, include a general committee meeting on Tuesday, a meeting of the officers of the women's auxiliaries of each of the churches on Friday and the designation of next Sunday as "Columbia Seminary Day" by each of the Presbyterian churches in the city.

At the dinner meeting Friday night, called by a committee headed by J. K. Ottley, it was pointed out that unless additional endowment could be raised for the seminary, Atlanta was in imminent danger of losing Columbia. Upon motion by H. Lane Young, unanimously adopted, a campaign was launched to raise $300,000, with Candler heading the citizen workers.

"It is unthinkable that southeastern Presbyterians should permit Columbia to be removed from Atlanta," said Candler. "It saved Presbyterianism in Georgia and it would be a colossal blunder to consider such a thought as giving it up. It stands in the geographical and population center of the church. I feel certain every member

MUSEUM CLASSES IN ANNUAL EXHIBIT

Junior Classes To Open Show With Preview and Tea Today.

The annual exhibition of the junior classes of the High Museum of Art will open this afternoon with a preview and tea from 3 until 5 o'clock. Representative work from the six junior classes will be shown, produced by children between the ages of 6 and 16. Prizes will be given for outstanding work. These have been donated by J. J. Haverty.

The exhibition of the advanced school of the museum, which opened Friday, is creating a great deal of favorable comment. During the graduation exercises held Friday morning the following prize winners were announced: First year, Ernest DeVane; second year, Russom Cooper; third year, Dorothy Jean Alexander, and evening school, LeRoy Jackson.

These exhibitions will continue through the month of June.

The High Museum School of Art will conduct a summer session for both adult and junior students. The renovated building, with its modern equipment and the attractive museum grounds, offer a most conducive atmosphere for profitable and enjoyable study. The museum hours are from 9 to 5 week days and from 2 until 5 on Sundays.

TRIP TO CHAMPIONSHIP FOR BRIDGE WINNERS

Henry Chanin, a director of the American Bridge League, announced yesterday the highest ranking pair in the Georgia bridge championships will be awarded a free trip to Asbury Park, N. J., to play in the national championships. The state tournament will be held at Atlanta June 19, 20 and 21.

The American Bridge league is sponsoring the state championship in which open pair and team-of-four contests will be staged. Play will be at the Standard Club.

Chanin said the highest ranking pair will be decided on the number of national master points awarded by the American Bridge League.

Southern Views Sharply Divided On Joint North-South Memorial

By the Associated Press.

Public leaders below the Mason-Dixon line differed yesterday over a Georgia editor's proposal for a common north-south memorial observance.

"Confederates never would agree to it," commented General Harry Rene Lee, chief of the United Confederate Veterans. "I'm satisfied of that."

Thomas J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, forecast the union, declaring the nation eventually will "join in honoring all our heroes." He spoke in dedication of a tablet at Liberty Hall, the Crawfordville, Ga., home of Alexander Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy.

Many Proponents.

Proponents of the plan, however, were plentiful.

"It ought to obtain," said Judge Leon McCord, past national commander of the United Spanish War Veterans and Alabama democratic national committeeman.

Earl Hurt, Texas commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, said the suggestion "should meet with hearty approval."

Joe J. Murray, past national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, said he was "heartily in accord."

'DOUBLE JEOPARDY' PLEA IN U. S. COURT

Self-Confessed Criminal Contends Government "Ought To Act Square."

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

Self-confessed safeblower, automobile thief, escaped convict and utilitarian burglar, Bryan Schwab, stood before Judge E. Marvin Underwood in United States district court yesterday and argued his own case.

"Your honor," reasoned the well-dressed Schwab, "I've blowed safes, I've stolen automobiles. I'm guilty of all the charges they mention. But I do believe the load I got from the state was a-plenty and I believe the federal government ought to be square about all this."

As a result, Judge Underwood delayed until next Saturday his decision as to what to do with Schwab. Meanwhile city police and state officers wait impatiently to get Schwab into their hands.

Easy to Trail.

G-men picked up Schwab May 8 at Ogden, Utah. He had escaped from the Laurens county chain gang and had robbed a Western Union office in Atlanta of $1,000 in travelers' checks on April 2. Schwab is not a hard man to find. He is a walking picture gallery. He has himself tattooed from his neck to his feet and down

Rerouting of Through Auto Traffic To Avoid Congested Areas Sought

Proposed rerouting of through traffic around the heart of the congested business areas of the city in order to prevent traffic congestion and to enable persons wishing to shop here to have added conveniences in clearer streets will be studied at a special called meeting of the joint council-citizens safety commission at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at the city hall.

Councilman John A. White, chairman of the safety group, called the session after Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary of the city planning commission, drafted the proposal on orders of city council.

White yesterday invited the public to attend the hearing and said the proposal is still in the tentative stage.

Under the proposal traffic coming towards Atlanta from Lee street and not wishing to visit the city's congested area, could proceed out Ashby street to Bankhead avenue or traverse Northside drive, Piedmont avenue, Ponce de Leon avenue, Briarcliff road, North Decatur road and thence northward. Traffic coming from the north or west could continue southward by reversing the order. Stewart avenue traffic could follow the same course, or cut off on Lakewood avenue, McDonough road southward, or traverse Moreland avenue northward.

Under the plan, the city would be skirted principally by four major thoroughfares, thus obviating the necessity for all cars to go through the center of the city to find highways to other points.

ALEX. W. SMITH JR., OF ATLANTA, HEADS BAR ASSOCIATION

GOVERNMENT NEED OF WOMEN IS SEEN BY MRS. M'MILLIN

Prominent Tennesseean at Wesleyan Exercises Tells of Rapid Rise of Women in Public Work.

MACON, Ga., May 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, United States civil service commissioner, said today women, as relative newcomers in the field of government, realize they must perform outstanding service "in justice to themselves and women to follow."

"There are outstanding reasons," said Mrs. McMillin, "why women are useful in the government service, more than that, they are needed."

Mrs. McMillin, who addressed the national alumnae association of Wesleyan College at exercises commemorating the centennial of the college, is one of three members of the Civil Service Commission in Washington. She is the widow of Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, who served as governor of that state, was former Unted States minister to Peru and former chairman of the ways and means committee while serving as a member of congress.

Introduced by Howell.

She was introduced by Clark Howell, editor and president of The Atlanta Constitution.

Mrs. McMillin quoted Helen Hamilton Gardner, first woman civil service commissioner, as saying: "When a man fails, it is not news; when a woman fails, it retards the progress of all women."

She said that while women have been holding office in government so long their presence is no cause for comment, "the presence of women in government is a new development."

"No woman signed our declaration of independence," she said. "No woman participated in the framing of the federal constitution; until relatively recent times women were not cordially welcomed as employes of the government.

An elaborate pageant presenting a symbolical history of Wesleyan College was presented tonight as a part of the alumnae celebration of the centennial of the chartering of the oldest women's college in the nation.

A prologue based on an eloquent appeal for women's education, made by Daniel Chandler, a student, during a debate at the University of Georgia, explained the pantomime, that traced the history of the pioneer college from its founding in 1836 until the present time. The pageant, held on the campus, was staged by hundreds of Wesleyan students and alumnae members and was witnessed by an immense throng.

Bishop William F. McDowell will preach the baccalaureate sermon tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the Macon auditorium and graduating exercises will be held Monday morning in the conservatory chapel, jointly by the conservatory and college students. Dr. Harry W. Chase, chancellor of New York University, will deliver the address.

Useful in Government.

Mrs. McMillin said, in part:

"There are outstanding reasons why women are useful in the government service, more than that, why they are needed.

"Women as a rule are inclined to accept individual responsibility and there is a reason for that: since time was, men have hunted and fished together, foregathered, pitched their tents in the pioneer days, defended their families together. The woman was, until comparatively recent times, living within the four walls of the house, but what was she doing? She was representing within herself all three branches of government—legislative, administrative and judicial. She made the laws, she enforced the laws, she was the court of last appeal. She was obliged to accept individual responsibility.

"Women are the natural economists of a nation. Many of them marry at an early age and become the purse-bearers of the home, the disbursers of the family monies. Thus they learn to give attention to detail and become economy minded. This leads inevitably to an interest in economy and efficiency in government.

"Women realize that they must perform outstanding service in justice to themselves and women to follow, because, as relative newcomers in the field, they are closely watched. As the brilliant Helen Hamilton Gardener, the first woman United States civil service commissioner, expressed it: 'When a man fails it is not news; when a woman fails, it retards the progress of all women.'

"A decade ago we were constantly hearing about the first woman to hold some particular position; we do not hear this today. There have been too many 'firsts' among women to attract further attention. Many of those illustrious women have already passed into history. Their successors now face the task of maintaining the high standards of the pioneers.

"Women have been holding office in government so long that their presence is no cause for comment, having reached the happy situation of being regarded as human beings of varying degrees of ability and equipment rather than as belonging to a certain sex.

Not Welcomed.

"The presence of women in government, however, is a new development. No woman signed our Declaration of Independence; no woman participated in the framing of the federal constitution; until relatively recent times women were not cordially welcomed as employes of the government.

"Today is a far cry from the status of women as defined in an 18th Century dictionary. Under the caption, 'Woman' are found five words: Female of man. See man. However, for a happy contradistinction we may go back to 400 years before the birth of Christ, and find Plato's answer to the question, Should a woman ever be allowed to administer government? entirely satisfactory. She should, said Plato, provided she is equipped. It all depends upon equipment. That is as true today as it was in Plato's time.

"I have the honor to represent the United States Civil Service Commission. We are housed in what once was called the Old Patent office. It was in this very building, in 1854, that a young woman received an appointment as clerk. Despite her outstanding ability, her employment in the government service was marked by much lifting of eyebrows and frowns of disapproval.

"Her name was Clara Barton. Later she was to found the American Red Cross. In her biography she is quoted as saying: I was placed equally with male clerks of $1,400 a year, which called for some criticism and no little denuncitation on the part of those who foresaw a dangerous precedent.

"We read from a report of a New York round-table discussion in 1867: The profession of teaching is smypathetic to women . . . but the task of female copyists in the departments of Washington is of a far less elevating character. However, if women are overtaken by property in Washington, there is little choice between keeping a boarding house, going to the treasury or to the poor house.

"In 1868 a questionnaire was sent out to heads of departments. I quote from the commissioner of customs: No female employes. They are less reliable than males and more difficult to govern.

"But the postmaster at Boston said: As to females, I employ three. They are superior to men in diligence and efficiency.

"In the same building where Clara Barton worked 80 years ago there are now employed more than 500 women. Their presence is taken for granted. Among them are attorneys, scientists, members of many professional groups. All of them enjoy equal opportunity for advancement with men.

Long Climb.

"It took many years to reach this situation of equality. In reaching the goal, women discovered that they have certain assets which they have learned to capitalize. In early days the principal qualification of women seems to have been that they had nimble fingers. They were employed to cut and trim paper money, an operation then performed by hand, and hitherto, exclusively by men. From their first days in the service they proved their worth. The annual dexterity which they displayed has long since been recognized as a feminine talent.

"It was thus by their skill and by their relative inexpensiveness that women found their way into the federal service. In 1870 they received official recognition when by act of congress they were allowed, at the discretion of the head of the department, to be appointed to clerkships under the same conditions and with the same compensation as men. The mercy of this discretion, however, was sometimes tempered by prejudice or tradition. While the women gradually increased in numbers they commonly did the "hewing of wood and drawing of water, while the men drew the more attractive salaries.

"Contrary to popular belief, the World War did not mark any immediate advancement of women to the better paying positions, although their appointment in such numbers did pave the way for later progress. A survey by the Women's Bureau revealed the fact that of the positions to which women were appointed in Washington, D. C., in January and February, 1919, 91 per cent were clerical, and the great majority paid salaries under $1,300 per annum.

"Soon after the World War came the passage of the nineteenth amendment. Partly because of its influence there began a steady advancement of the position of women in the government service. Today examinations for practically all positions are open to men and women alike. The result is that women eligibles are now found in almost all professional and scientific registers maintained by the Civil Service Commission. True, there are still certain fields in government in which women have not entered. We have still to hear of our first 'G-woman' in the Department of Justice, but the Department of Labor has appointed a great many women as investigators with happy results, particularly in such work as studies of cost of living, a subject in which women have had a long and painful experience.

Lead in Office Work.

"With the World War, the influx of women stenographers, typists and clerical employes was as great in the federal service as in private employment. Women began to demonstrate their superior ability on many office devices, such as the typewriter and the adding machine. It is said that the symbol of man's progress is the sword. The symbol of woman's early progress in the government service was the typewriter. The typewriter has proved to be the door opening to higher positions. Today women have somewhat monopolized work on office machines. Illustrative of this is the fact that in the last country-wide stenographer and typist examination held by the United States Civil Service Commission there were 65,000 applicants, and of these the women numbered 55,000.

"In 1923 the classification act was passed. Among its provisions was one which read: 'In administering the rate of compensation which an employe shall receive, the principle of equal compensation for equal work, irrespective of sex, shall be followed.'

"Both the legal and moral effect of this regulation was salutary. When, in 1925, two years later, the Women's Bureau understook a survey of the government service, it found that women's activities had broadened. There were women chemists, women physicists, women nematologists, women doctors and dentists, women economic analysts, women lawyers examining claims, and in addition, numerous women were engaged in those fields in which they had been experts for long periods of time, such as in library and educational work. Equally impressive was the fact that a much larger percentage of women were receiving salaries in the higher brackets.

"The precedent of appointing a woman member of the United States Civil Service Commission was inaugurated by President Wilson, when he appointed Mrs. Helen Hamilton Gardener in 1920. For the first time in the history of civil service, a woman was appointed district manager in January of 1935. There are 13 civil service district offices in the United States, each a miniature civil service commission, and the position of district manager is the most important one in the commission's field work.

"Formerly it was argued that few women had professional training. This was all too true. They had been admitted, but rarely to graduate, in professional schools. Today, on the contrary, such schools are open to hundreds of ambitious young women who, by their training, will break down the final barriers in the struggle for economic equality.

Standards Maintained.

"Some had feared that the depression would retard the progress of women, because of the great increase in the number of persons ready to take any kind of a job at any price. Nevertheless, so far as the federal service is concerned, the provisions of the classification act and civil service examinations have tended to maintain high standards helpful to men and women alike. In the government service, both have sustained nothing like the economic losses they have felt in private enterprise, and in some public service both here and abroad.

"Impressive as are the achievements of women in the more publicized positions, equally revealing would be a list of women who have entered the service through competitive examinations and who have advanced by merit to positions of trust and importance, both administrative and professional, in the competitive classified service. Their numbers are not, it is true, equal to those of men who have made such advancement, but their progress has been both steady and impressive."

Graham Wright, of Rome, was chairman of the nominating committee.

The bar association advanced today its fight for legislation to give the profession broader powers to discipline incompetent or dishonest lawyers.

The association approved the draft of a bill to incorporate the bar. The bar will be presented at the next session of the legislation.

The state house of representatives approved a similar measure last year but the bill was caught in a legislative jam in the senate.

Judge Blanton Fortson, of Athens, said today he regarded the proposal to incorporate the Georgia bar as the "only way" to purge the legal profession of undesirable members and restore it to a position of public confidence and respect.

In an analysis of the organization measure before the state bar association, Judge Fortson presented the judicial viewpoint on the suggested reforms.

Judge Fortson said criticism of lawyers is directed at "our archaic methods of procedure, our failure to purge our ranks of the unfit and the vicious, and the subservient attitude many of our leaders adopt toward those who control great wealth or political power."

Big Attendance.

Attendance at the convention broke all records and approached 500 registrations, John B. Harris, secretary, stated. The convention met at a hotel on Wilmington island, 10 miles out of Savannah.

W. E. Kay, formerly of Brunswick, and now of Jacksonville, was elected an honorary member.

The play depicted the "Dances of the Seasons" and was written by Miss Mayrelle Cronic, one of the teachers at the Chicopee school, other teachers aiding in coaching the players. The pageant was under the direction of Professor Thomas Paris, superintendent of the school. "Father Time," shown on left, was played by William Hatfield; the dancers shown in center group include Dora Allen, Wilma Willis and Emily Brown. On right is little Ann Purvis, who represented "Miss 1936." This is an annual event at Chicopee mill. Staff photos by Turner Hiers.

DIXIE OPINION DIVIDED ON JOINT MEMORIAL

South Carolina Palmetto camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, said "I do not believe" the south would change dates.

Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi observe Memorial Day April 26. Kentucky and the Carolinas choose May 10. Virginia's Confederate Memorial Day is May 30, coinciding with the national observance.

Tennessee observes June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy.

Opponents of a common memorial advanced two reasons in addition to tradition.

General W. McK. Evans, past commander of the Virginia division of the U. C. V., said he thought many southern states would prefer their local dates because many of the south's spring flowers, including jonquils, dogwood and violets have bloomed and died by May 30.

A. S. Salley Jr., secretary of the South Carolina Historical Commission, explained that the Carolinas have sentimental reasons for the choice of May 10 "since it was the day Stonewall Jackson was killed and Jefferson Davis was captured."

Honor All Veterans.

Mrs. John Huske Anderson, of Raleigh, N. C., past historian general of the U. D. C., pointed out that "The Daughters of the Confederacy here join the American Legion in honoring all veterans of all wars on May 30."

Mrs. Emma R. Hoeltzel, of Little Rock, Ark., past president of the Arkansas Spanish-American War Veterans' Auxiliary, said "We are in accord with the May 30 observance."

"Fine," said State Auditor L. B. Baynard, of Louisiana, ex-officio member of the Louisiana board which pays Confederate pensions.

Mrs. Dubar Rowland, Mississippi U. D. C. official and author of "The Life of Jefferson Davis," said, "I think it would be well to submit the matter to the various chapters of the U. D. C. for a vote."

U. S. COURT HEARS PLEA OF 'DOUBLE JEOPARDY'

both arms. On each hand is a recognizable tattoo mark. As a result, he was trailed across the country and picked up in a little more than a month.

The federal government brought him back to Atlanta on a charge of having stolen an automobile in Atlanta on July 7, 1934, and having driven it to Birmingham, across a state line. He had been convicted in state courts of having stolen the automobile and had been sentenced to the Laurens county chain gang for seven years. He escaped from the chain gang on March 16, 1936.

Judge Underwood's contention yesterday was that the federal government was technically placing Schwab in double jeopardy. The judge argued that Schwab's action in taking the automobile across a state line was merely a continuance of his crime in stealing the automobile for which he has been tried and convicted.

Excuse for Arrest.

Actually, however, Schwab is an escaped convict. The G-men have brought him back to Georgia although it is not up to the G-men to hunt escaped convicts for any state. The G-men, consequently, used the transportation of the stolen automobile across a state line as a means of arresting the fleeing Schwab.

Schwab arrived in Atlanta Friday night from Utah. He is six feet tall, slender, tanned and well-dressed. When Assistant United States Attorney I. K. Hay brought him before Judge Underwood, Hay outlined the federal government's case of driving the stolen automobile across the state line into Alabama.

Judge Underwood listened to Hay's explanation of the case and asked:

"Is it the policy of the United States government to prosecute a man for an offense for which he has already been convicted and sentenced in a state court?"

"Same Transaction."

Hay argued that double jeopardy was not involved: that the theft of the automobile had nothing to do with Schwab's interstate transportation of the stolen car.

"I know," said Judge Underwood, "but it was the same act and the same transaction. I know it is technically possible for the United States to try him on your charge but I do not believe it is proper."

Schwab stepped forward and made his argument that he had confessed to his crimes and believed "the government ought to be square."

"I shall pass this case until next Saturday," said Judge Underwood.

State Delayed.

In the hallway outside the courtroom stood City Detective Leo Nahlik, who was waiting to take Schwab before state courts where he has promised to plead guilty to state charges of robbing the Western Union offices of the travelers' checks. Nahlik, however, will be forced now to wait until Judge Underwood passes on the case next Saturday.

Schwab has been in and around Georgia since 1932 and his crime record is this:

July 7, 1934, he stolen an automobile from the Anthony-Buick Company in Atlanta. He has confessed to this in a written statement.

July 19, 1934, he was sentenced in Fulton county superior court to a term of seven to 11 years.

Escaped From Gang.

March 16, 1936, the night before he was to be tried in United States court for having taken the stolen automobile across the state line into Alabama, he escaped from the Laurens county chain gang where he was serving his term.

April 2, 1936, he robbed the Western Union office of the travelers' checks and he has confessed this crime to G-men.

May 1, 1936, he robbed the Western Union office in Los Angeles of another $1,000 batch of checks and blank money orders and he has confessed this to G-men.

Captured in Utah.

May 8, 1936, he was captured by G-men in Ogden, Utah. He was riding a transcontinental train from Los Angeles. In his possession federal agents found burglary tools and a large amount of dynamite.

Prior to this, however, Schwab had been arrested for the theft of an automobile in Chattanooga and had been placed on probation for three years.

July 10, 1931, he was arrested in Jersey City, N. J., for carrying concealed weapons.

May 31, 1932, he was convicted of burglary in Atlanta and sentenced to 12 months in jail.

May 15, 1934, he was sentenced to 30 days in jail at Pensacola, Fla., on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

Mrs. Glover, to be honored by the marker, lost her husband, Dr. Thomas C. Glover, in action at Winchester, Va. He was a first lieutenant of the 21st Georgia regiment and had fought in 107 battles.

His wife called members of Company A, of the 21st regiment, to a reunion at Campbellton in June, 1867, according to records of the U. D. C. Though only 12 attended, these arranged to hold an annual reunion as long as any two of them lived. Attendance at the reunions increased for many years following the first meeting.

RAILROADS TO FIGHT CROSSING CRASH TOLL

preciated more when the vast increase in the number of automobiles using the streets and highways is considered.

Railroads are trying to teach safety. Some drivers are learning safety.

Impressive Facts.

Allan A. Heidenreich, of Atlanta, member of the national committee on prevention of railroad accidents, disclosed the following impressive facts in a recent radio address in Macon:

"Last year," he told the radio audience, "in grade crossing accidents there was an average of six persons killed and 15 persons injured every day.

"In the past five years, approximately 11,000 persons lost their lives in railroad-highway crossing accidents. Twenty-five thousand were injured. Ninety per cent of these accidents involved occupants of automobiles. This appalling casualty rate occurred in our United States and gives us a basis upon which to compute the tremendous world cost in pain, in sorrow and in money that is the consequence of heedless driving.

Study of Causes.

"In studying the causes of these accidents we are surprised to find that 70 per cent occur during daylight hours and 63 per cent occur at crossing where the view is entirely unobstructed. Furthermore, the majority of the accidents occur at crossings with which the driver is thoroughly familiar. And, as incredible as it may seem, one out of every three crossing accidents is caused by the driver running deliberately into the side of the train.

"The railroads have learned the value of organized effort for safety. During the past 15 years they have reduced deaths to employes 70 per cent and fatalities to passengers 80 per cent."

Roads Make Suggestions.

Railroads have no control over the actions of individual automobile drivers, Mr. Heidenreich points out, but he makes these suggestions for the motorist who wishes to avoid a horrible catastrophe at the hands of a 200-ton locomotive:

1. Slow down when approaching any railroad highway grade crossing.
2. Look both ways and listen to ascertain if a train is approaching.
3. Be particularly careful when there are two or more tracks because of trains moving in opposite directions.
4. Shift into lower gear to prevent stalling on tracks.
5. Consistently observe all danger signals.
6. Exercise conservative judgment at crossings.
7. In case of doubt, take the safe course and stop before reaching the track.

Driver Can Be Safe.

These suggestions, in the opinion of The Constitution Safety Council, point the way for elimination of death and injury at railroad crossings. The driver who follows them is safe. The driver who does not has no right to feel assured of his life.

The Safety Council takes occasion to congratulate the railroads for their effective and intelligent work in saving lives and every citizen of Georgia should co-operate in the work which is being done in his behalf.

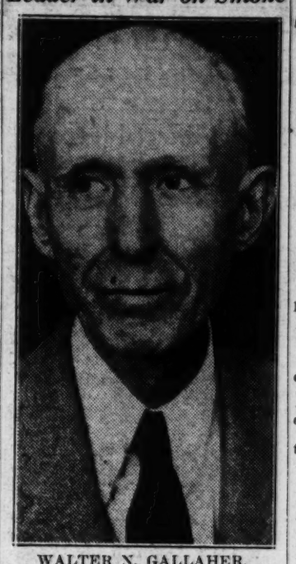

Cross crossings cautiously!

There are two ways to build a motor car. It can be built to sell at a certain price—and the quality brought within that predetermined range. Or, it can be built as finely as possible, letting the price fall where it may. La Salle is built to this latter formula. It is built as finely as Cadillac knows how—and priced as low as the quality will permit. That is what makes La Salle so unique—for no car built to a price formula could possibly compete with La Salle.

BOOKS and Their AUTHORS

Polish Hero.

PILSUDSKI. By Grace Humphrey. Scott & Moore, New York. $3.25. 301 pp.

To thoroughly understand a man like Pilsudski one must weigh all his actions and analyze all his deeds from the patriotic viewpoint. This is exactly how the author has treated the subject and in fact it is the only basis upon which one can approve the actions of this man. At times he was an irreproachably upright patriot clinging steadfastly to an ideal; then he was a bandit who robbed mail trains—justified by the author in the name of patriotism. More important than anything else it is necessary to place Pilsudski in his proper historical background. This was done by the author in a sketchy manner which I feel was insufficient, and which, if it had been lengthened would have contributed considerably to a proper appraisal and understanding of the man.

General Pilsudski was born in the year 1863 just after the third partition of Poland. This date represents the disappearance of Poland from the map of Europe. She was divided and annexed by her more powerful neighbors, Russia, Prussia and Austria. The Polish people suffered severe persecutions and enforced military service, prison sentences and executions were all too common.

Pilsudski was born into a noble Polish family which was not exempt from the cruelties that were being inflicted around them. His mother, an upright and patriotic woman, imbued in her son the spirit of revolt and revenge. At an early age he moved to Wilno and in this city attended the Russian gymnasium at which there was a law absolutely forbidding the use of any language but Russian, the violation of which was punished severely. This was the atmosphere in which Pilsudski received his early schooling. After the completion of his courses he went to the University of Kharkow. It was in this school that he made his contacts with the socialist party.

The schooling of Pilsudski ends abruptly at this point and the next we hear of him is when he is under arrest for being implicated in the plot to kill Alexander III of Russia. Among the group arrested was a young chap named Oulianoff whose younger brother later changed his name to Lenin and revenged himself upon the Romanoff family for their tyranny over the Russian people. Several in the group that was arrested were executed; some sentenced to long prison terms in Siberia. As for Pilsudski, nothing could be proved against him and he received the comparatively lenient sentence of five years in northern Siberia.

From here on Pilsudski led the life very similar to most revolutionaries. He spent some time in this prison and then some time in that one, and between incarcerations he was either publishing a radical paper or organizing a radical group.

His periodi jail sentences came to an end with the beginning of the World War. Pilsudski organized the Polish legions and by skillful generalship and politics succeeded in finally have the independence of Poland recognized and her position on the map of Europe guaranteed.

After Pilsudski accomplished what he was after he disassociated himself from the very groups that were responsible for his success. To a socialist delegation that greeted him as Comrade Pilsudski, soon after his appointment as chief of state, he replied: "Gentlemen, I am no longer your comrade. In the beginning we followed the same direction and together took a tramway painted red. But I left it at the station marked 'Poland's independence' while you are continuing as far as the station 'socialism.' My good wishes accompany you, but be so good as to call me 'sir.'"

Now to some people such an act as this would be patriotic. Included in this group is Grace Humphrey. Then there are some people who might say (with Johnson, I believe) that "patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

On another occasion the mayor of Warsaw visited Pilsudski and complained that the workers had presented a list of demands, included in which was the request for a raise in wages. This was Pilsudski's answer: "I can't give you soldiers to use against the strikers. I haven't any soldiers. If I did how do you know that they won't side with the strikers? That would be the end of the government. . . . Organize the citizens against the strikers and the communists."

Here we see one of the glaring inconsistencies of Grace Humphrey's book. We were continually assured that the soldiers were behind Pilsudski with a burning patriotic fervor and suddenly we find that he was afraid to offer troops to break a strike for fear that they would turn against him and side with the strikers.

With the establishment, or rather the re-establishment, of Poland on the map of Europe, Pilsudski's main task was completed. The rest of his energies were devoted to halting the advance of the bolshevists on the western frontier and maintenance of internal peace.

Could Have Happened

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART. By Priscilla Wayne. John H. Hopkins & Son. New York. 254 pp. $2.00.

If you like excitement you will like "Substitute Sweetheart," by Priscilla Wayne. The very first pages start off with a fast move and this is kept up to the last.

A love story in which you find two of the cleverest crooks and their associates. Every kind of surprise awaits the reader. Murder, marriage, police and many other exciting things weave a story that will hold you spell-bound until the last page.

Ruth, a shop girl is hired to pose as the step-sister of a sick man. Jim has been in an accident and will not be able to see again, so the doctor tells them. Ruth, posing as his stepsister, finds herself a prisoner in the home of Jim by his aunt and uncle, who have gained entire charge of Jim's home by having Ruth pose as June, his stepsister. She is forced to play the part and does so very cleverly by aid and threats of his aunt and uncle.

The way those two crooks work to gain the fortune of Jim and do away with him, and the way Ruth goes about trying to save him, and the part Jerry, Ruth's brother, plays, makes this story very good reading. Jim finds himself in love with Ruth and he also knows she is not his sister.

After you have finished you will wonder how the author was able to put so much and so many things in to such a few pages.

One of the most striking things about this story is that it could have happened—not one of those impossible affairs that could not happen in real life. Very interesting and very good reading if you like a fast-moving, snappy story.

Story About Negroes.

MINNIE HITE MOODY,
Author of "Death Is a Little Man."

Distinguished Book.

DEATH IS A LITTLE MAN, by Minnie Hite Moody. Julius Messner Co., New York. 274 pp. $2.50.

Minnie Hite Moody has spent a good portion of her life traveling about and making a home in various sections of the country. Possibly that fact has made possible the deep understanding of a woman's efforts to build a home under adverse circumstances which makes her new novel of negro life, "Death Is a Little Man," a distinguished book.

From the countryside below Macon, Ga., Eenie Coade moves to Atlanta with her shiftless husband, Weaver. A little shack in the bottom, with a vegetable garden and a well to remind Eenie of her country upbringing, falls to their lot and with something of the heroism of Caroline Miller's pioneer Sean, Eenie struggles against poverty and disease and Weaver's faithlessness until she claims her own.

Except for the incidental introduction of "white folks' at odd intervals, Mrs. Moody has written her story entirely from the negro angle and has held to her point of view with singular clarity and consistency. Without falling victim to the urge which betrays so many writers dealing with this theme—the urge to raise a sociological cry against injustice—the author yet carries her point. By simply painting, without comment, but with vivid truthfulness, the lot of the average negro in a southern city, Mrs. Moody has brought out clearly the problems facing both white and colored races in the long process of readjustment.

Almost biographical in its richness of incident and the leisurely thread of its story, "Death Is a Little Man" covers almost the entire period of Eenie Coade's life, from her early childhood under the roof of her pastor-father, when crops were good and life was comparatively simple, through the long years in Atlanta after Weaver stabbed Jay Wheat in a jealous rage over another woman, through childbirth and sickness until middle years when she finally wins Weaver back from his philandering by saving him from an angry mob who deserved to kill him.

Most striking of the many portraits in this book is that of Weaver, whose prototype may be found all too often. Devoted to his wife, he is none the less a prey to every woman who makes a pass at him and finally gets into trouble with Mamie, daughter of his friend, Sim, who lives across the road. The reactions of Eenie and the other inhabitants of the Bottom to the affair between Weaver and Mamie is one of the finest passages in Mrs. Moody's volume. Within the circle they disapprove completely, but when outside influences enter in, they present a solid front of patient loyalty and help Mamie through her illness with a sort of hopeless philosophy, mingled with kindness.

The loyalty of these people to each other, the ease with which social veneer is sloughed off in moments of stress, leaving the instincts; the close familiarity with murder and violence and sudden death, the fear of "the law" and the all-pervading trust in "Kine Gawd" which moves hand-in-hand with trust in conjure—all these curious qualities which make up the almost childlike character of these ignorant people, Mrs. Moody has caught with an intensely sympathetic and understanding pen. "Death Is a Little Man" will take a high place in the rank of southern negro stories.

Plastic Surgery.

NEW FACES. NEW FUTURES. Maxwell Maltz, M. D. Richard B. Smith, N. Y., 311 pp. $3.00.

How far-reaching can be the effect of plastic surgery on the re-building of character? New York's plan of rehabilating a selected number of criminals, fostered by Commissioner Austin H. MacCormick, through the medium of reconstructive surgery should settle the question within the next few years Mr. MacCormack's scheme is as follows in his own words, "When our hospital facilities are improved we hope to do some plastic surgery with a view toward correcting disfigurements which are a handicap to a released prisoner who wants to go straight."

Many of us associate plastic surgery as having began in a great degree during the days of the World War, however, this fact is not true as there are numerous successful cases on record dating as far back as 500 B. C., these operations having been performed by the Hindus of that time.

The entire field of plastic surgery is covered in this book. Its history and the discussions of the various types of reconstructive surgical cases are intensely interesting and are illustrated by numerous "before and after" photographs of patients.

The author, Dr. Maxwell Maltz, is one of the leading plastic surgeons of the country, having recently been president of the American Society of Plastic Surgeons. He has also lectured on the subject at the University of Berlin and Amsterdam and at the Rolay Institute of Surgery at Rome. He is at present head of one of the recently established municipal clinics for plastic surgery in the city of New York.

General readers will find themselves as keenly interested in the work of reconstructive surgery as any of the subjects to be found in the field of popular non-fiction. The author's treat is non-technical throughout and definitely intended for the layman as well as the physician.

OLIN SNEED.

Thought Stimulator.

WHO OWNS AMERICA? Edited by Herbert Agar and Allen Tate. Houghton Mifflin Co., New York. 342 pp. $3.

Whether one views this work as a new declaration of independence for the citizens of the United States, or the antithesis of such, it is worthy of consideration and should be approached with an open mind. If it does nothing more than make one think about the many problems it presents, it will have served a worthy mission; and think, one must, who reads it. It is a thought stimulator and will make one ponder the how and why of government and the social and economic problems of the day.

The book is a symposium on conditions in the United States and of Europe in general. It is not a book to be read by one with a limited background. The authors have endeavored to point out a path leading away from both fascism and communism, away from centralization and economic slavery to small-scale production and independence of property ownership.

That the United States is confronted with difficult sectional problems is recognized and so dealt with by the authors. Treating these problems from a sectional and national point of view, the authors have not lost sight of the fact, that after all is said and done, the only permanent thing is change, and they have endeavored to apply what they believe the basic principles of American doctrine of government.

The authors believe that there are moral and widespread virtues in the institution of widespread property, "and that monopoly-capitalism is morally ugly as well as economically unsound," and propose the establishment of a genuine property state—that is, a state in which a considerable majority of the families participate in real ownership.

"The problem of property can be divided, for convenience, into the problem of property in land and the problem of property in industry and the distributive trades," they declare.

There is much food for thought in the chapters devoted to the agrarian south and west. The chapter devoted to foreign trade is directly applicable to the south.

The chapter on the emancipated woman is among the finest in the book.

The flavor of "Who Owns America?" might be summed up briefly:

"Unless the people are aroused, monopoly will go its way, not because it is efficient and therefore fated to triumph, but simply because it is fun for the monopolists.

"A man can love the land, and I suppose men love the small vineclad factories of early New England. The man who loves the United States Steel Corporation would make a good living in a side-show.

"Corporate business is peculiarly vulnerable to attack because it is primarily an eastern instrument preying on the west and south.

"It should be clear to anyone who will think lucidly and coldly upon the direction in which all this must move that it is moving toward the re-establishment of slavery.

"Under the present arrangements a national policy that means wealth for the northeast may well mean poverty for the sister regions.

"Big-business is a parasitic disease of capitalism which, if not checked by proper legal safeguards will necessarily be fatal.

"The basis of liberty is economic independence.

"Fascism is not a creed but an act of revolt. It answers no problems.

"Ironically enough the most vociferous defenders of 'free competitive enterprise' are big industrialists and their lawyers.

"The decisions of the United States supreme court are a constitutional tower of Babel. Yet these 15,000 pages of decisions are the working constitution of the United States."

He Loved Paris.

FROM A PARIS GARRETT, by Richard Le Gallienne, Ives Washburn, New York. 329 pp. $2.50.

The great love of Richard Le Gallienne for Paris has been fruitful in many ways. Here it was that the poet spent much of his life and wrote a great deal of his poetry. But even greater than his poetry is this book telling of the love of a man for a city that he knows and cherishes. Mr. Le Gallienne's Paris is not similar to the lusty New York that O'Henry loved and wrote about. Rather it is the sound, the colors, the odors, the people, both living and dead, the past and the present. All these are bound together by this American poet who loves the twisted streets and broad thoroughfares much as they must have been loved by Victor Hugo.

"From a Paris Garrett" we are given a view of the city that will linger long with any reader whose reveries and dreams have often turned to the city on the Seine. Here between these covers is the Paris that hurried tourists miss. This Paris is not the one found in history books or guides, or an occasional story. Yet it contains all these, and more a permeating poetical passion flowing into by one who knows the thousand facts of the Paris world.

This book is one that the armchair voyager, pipe in hand, will delight in having on his table. For one who wishes to go to Paris it gives the most understanding lover of the city as a guide through its streets. For one who has seen Paris it will be a delightful revery, perhaps a little tinged with sadness at the thought of things missed. Mr. Le Gallienne has written a book worth having and worth reading. A grand book!

Flower Lovers' Guide.

FLOWER ARRANGEMENT, by F. F. Rockwell and Esther C. Grayson. Jacket and line drawings by Esther C. Grayson. MacMillan Company, New York. 137 pp. $3.00.

The growth of interest during the last few years in what has come to be popularly known as "flower arrangement" has been phenomenal. The authors of this practical guide to the selection and use of flowers and other materials for home decoration believe that too much stress is being placed upon hard-and-fast rules as against underlying principles, and upon the bizarre as against the beautiful.

In this book their purpose is to make clearer and easier for the amateur the methods and means by which pleasing flower and foliage decorations in her own home may be achieved, and to foster a realization of the fact that such decorations may well play a much more importnt part in adding character, distinction and cheerfulness to the home than at present they do.

Garden and flower devotees of Atlanta and this section, whether they belong to one of the numerous clubs, or just raise a few flowers in their yards and gardens for the pleasure they derive from this pleasant diversion, will find in this little book numerous suggestions that will act to make their love of flowers greater.

Saga of Rural America.

ROOTS OF AMERICA, by Charles Mororw Wilson. Funk & Wagnalls Co. New York, N. Y. 316 pp. Profusely illustrated. $3.00.

If you are a city dweller and your physical horizons are painfully limited; if in springtime your vacant stare falls upon stony skyscrapers; if you wistfully sigh for open spaces and air laden with the scent of mowed grass; if you long for the companionship of the unsophisticated but utterly sincere folk, "Roots of America" will appease your spiritual hunger and acquaint you with wholesome America, the tranquil land of your sturdy fathers.

Climb aboard Mr. Wilson's flivver and see the great nation that we call the United States of America and meet the people who compose its population. They are not the ones whose names are findable in "Who's Who" and they might not be the kind you expect to see in smart drawing rooms, yet you will, somehow, like their realistic outlook on life, their humility and their homespun philosophy.

If the reader is not hopelessly detached from the soil and not completely enslaved by the dubious urban glamour, he is bound to feel some sort of kinship to the plain folks who toil from sunrise to sunset. You may not want to share their frugal mode of living and you may deplore the lack of wonted comforts afforded by household gadgets (and adequate incomes), yet your respect for these humble and honest people will be heightened nevertheless.

The author writes with warm understanding and observant eye, and what otherwise might have been a dull account of the country life, becomes a swiftly moving panaroma of rural places pervaded with bucolic charm and peopled with picturesque personalities.

There is something fine and noble in Mr. Wilson's attitude toward the folks and places he so masterfully describes in his "Roots of America."

There are numercus types, like the New England auctioneer with his keen wit, ready repartee and business sagacity. There is the hotelkeeper in Misouri who says: "A while ago I was talkin' about the old-fashioned roadside stand, where common folks lives and let 'extry' rooms and fare to the passin' public. That there was the real taproot of the American hotel business. It was old. Newer and more regular hotels crowded out the stands. But look at the country today! Stands is back again."

And also the man who edits and publishes a country newspaper in Arkansas, whose formula for newsgathering is "Keep listening and never do more than half the talking." The sheep and cattle herders of the south and southwest to whom grass is life. The ex-pugilist and ex-politician who admires Jeff Davis' methods of rousing the voters—"Carry the farmers and the town-fringers, take a slim half of the laboring vote and put with 'em . . . Keep 'em together, and you can elect nine-tenths of the congressmen, five-sixth of the governors, at least 90 of the United States senators and any damned president, besides giving the boys and girls a good show."

Mr. Wilson has written a saga of American rural life and, although the scenes and characters may change with the pasing of time, one feels that without the sturdy roots beneath the fertile soil, there could not have been that astounding growth and amazing progress which we broadly call American civilization.

Satire, Comedy, Romance.

ADAM AND EVELYN, by Cosmo Hamilton. New York. Dodd, Mead & Company, Inc. pp. 269. $2.00.

TOO MANY BEAUS, by Alma Sioux Scarberry. New York. John H. Hopkins & Son. pp. 225. $2.00.

Here is an enchanting satire, comedy, romance; what you will. Cosmo Hamilton has put Adam and Eve complete with garden and apple tree into a modern setting. If you read the surface, it is a delightful story. But in the first of the book every now and then there is a broad hint that here is something subtler. And when you begin to read deeper there is no end of fun. Keep your eyes open, you will be amply repaid.

It is unfortunate that a very excellent beginning grows tiresome, and it is just too difficult to keep your eyes open. Evelyn is almost inhumanly good and understanding. I can't help feeling that if the original Eve had been so admirable, we would all be living in Eden today. She, the Evelyn of the story, is a renowned singer with the world at her feet and several very amusing suitors. But she persists in loving her accompanists, Adam Carr, whose only thought is of the symphony he is writing. Her love and tact win out in the good old-fashioned way; and even the fact that she marries Adam early in the book as a good publicity stunt fails to add much piquancy to the story.

Another amusing and typical romance is "Too Many Beaus." In fact it is so blatantly the Cinderella story in this year's setting that you will wonder if the author isn't laughing at our gullibility while keeping a very serious mien. Indeed one irreverent character (the newspaper man, of course) says: "It reads like a story book—your life, Lollypop. Maybe I'll write. The world never tires of a Cinderella yarn. Even if the high-browns don't consider it brain fodder.

Sugar Friddle is the foundling child of an orphanage turned out to earn her own living. The quaint mixture of education and unworldliness leads her into many scrapes but her beauty makes her captivating, and her intelligence saves her from repeating her blunders. The denouement equips her with an excellent and wealthy family and the handsome young man of her dreams.

ATLANTA MUSIC NOTES

by Mozelle Horton Young

With the last days of May and the advent of June things continue to hum merrily and musically in and about the recital halls and studios. The list of recitals is long, but continues to be interesting, and the great number of students who are performing in the closing events of the year bespeaks the intensified interest that music study has enjoyed during the season about to be concluded. Much has been accomplished this season, and teachers are all glowing with pride over the showing their pupils are making.

First Appearance.

Preceding their first Atlanta concert by decidedly successful concerts at G. S. C. W. in Milledgeville, at the University of Georgia at Athens, and at Bessie Tift in Forsyth, the Glee Club of the University System of Georgia Evening School will be presented at Egleston hall, corner West Peachtree and North Avenue, at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night. The public is invited, there being no admission charge. John D. Hoffman is the director of the club. Soloists in the club are Robert Guy, baritone; Paul Overbay, tenor, and Richard Holtzclaw, baritone. Mrs. D. C. Adams, soprano, will be the guest soloist. J. T. Pittman is the accompanist. Numbers to be sung by the club include "Soldiers' Chorus," from Gounod's "Faust;" "In Luxembourg Gardens," Manning-Nash; "Rolling Down to Rio," German; "The Moon Drops Low," Cadman; "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Dvorak; "Have Mercy, O Lord," Lvovsky; a group of negro spirituals, and a group of light opera selections with Mrs. Adams as the soloist. Pittman will play a piano solo, the "Moonlight Sonata," by Beethoven. Holtzclaw will sing as his solo, "Danny Deever," Damrosch; Mrs. Adams will sing "Spirit Flower," Campbell-Tipton; Overbay "Ah, Moon of My Delight," from Lehman's "In a Persian Garden," and Guy "Over the Steppe," by Gretchaninov.

Commencement Program.

The Atlanta Conservatory of Music will hold the annual commencement program in Cable hall at 8:15 o'clock Friday night. The public is invited. Certificates in piano will be received by Frances Lewis, Melba Carter and Charles Snow; Elise Jamieson will receive a diploma in voice; Edgar Evans a certificate in public school music, and Mrs. G. E. Daniel and Martha Sandifer diplomas in public school music. A musical program will be offered by Elizabeth Allen, Charles Johnson and J. T. Pittman, pianists; Patricia Makinson, soprano; Rose Thompson and Robert Harrison, violinists, and a quartet composed of Robert Harrison and Bowen David, violinists; Georg Lindner, viola, and Thomas Hutcheson, 'cellist. The following afternoon a tea will be given in honor of those receiving diplomas and certificates.

Piano Recital.

Mary G. Kehrer Cartledge, pianist, gave a recital Saturday night in the North Avenue Activities building. She was assisted by Mary Lou Blinov, soprano. Mrs. Cartledge opened her program with "Solfeggietto," by Philipp Emanuel Bach, followed by a Mozart "Sonata" with Elizabeth Young at the second piano for the last number. She played a group of four numbers by Grieg and her last group included "Aragonaise," by Massenet; "Romance," Raff, and "Cider Press," Russell Wragg. Mrs. Blinov's songs included "Florians' Song," Godard; "In the Time of Roses," Reichardt; "I've Been Roaming," Horn, and "Happy Birds," Holst. Elizette Reed Barley accompanied Mrs. Blinov.

Philharmonic Broadcast.

The Atlanta Philharmonic Society will conclude its season with a one-hour broadcast over WGST at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

The Philharmonic Symphony orchestra will be conducted by Georg Lindner, and will play a symphonic program for the first 30 minutes of the broadcast, which will include the following numbers: The "Egmont Overture," by Beethoven; the "Intermezzo" from "Cavalleria Rusticana," by Mascagni; incidental music from "Herod," by Hadley.

The last part of the broadcast will be given over to the complete philharmonic society, which includes the symphony orchestra and large chorus, with soloists. They will do the "Temple Scene" from "Aida," with Minna Hecker singing the role of the priestess, and the second scene from the second act of the "Triumphal Scene," from "Aida," which will have as soloists Bernice Johnson as Aida; Bertha Simms as Amneris, Richard Holtzclaw as Ramfis, Coleman Kimbro as Amanasro, and Paul Overby as Rhadames. The second section of this concert will be conducted by Lawrence G. Nilson.

First Reunion.

Alumni members of the Emory Glee Club, many of whom have not been together since their college days, will hold the first reunion in the club's history on Saturday in conjunction with the annual homecoming day of the Emory Alumni Association.

Plans for the occasion are under the direction of a committee of young businessmen of Atlanta, all of whom are former members of the club. The committee consists of Edgar James, chairman; Hunter Bell, Billy Hunter, Chess Lagomarsino and Ernest Rogers.

Feature of the celebration will be a banquet Saturday night, at which the alumni will join voices with present club members in familiar songs. Sunday morning, according to Dr. M. H. Dewey, director, several of the visiting alumni will sing in the choir of Glenn Memorial church with the regular club members for the baccalaureate sermon of the university's graduating classes.

Group singing Saturday afternoon as a part of the alumni day program and a tentatively planned concert for Sunday afternoon will make up the remainder of the activity for the homecoming singers.

Alton O'Steen, assistant organist at Riverside church in New York city, is among the former members who have definitely signified their intention of returning to the campus for the day.

Retiring and incoming presidents of the club, Chester Kitchings and Milton Campbell, respectively, are in charge of arrangements for the day, working with Wharton Mitchell, manager-elect, and Dick Brumby, manager for the past year.

Visits Cincinnati.

Lucille Duncan, prominent musician of College Park, will be an honor guest at commencement at Cincinnati Conservatory, where she was a former student and member of Sigma Alpha Iota sorority.

2 GEORGIA CONTESTS FOR G.O.P. CONVENTION

Atlanta and Savannah Districts, Split in Factions, Name Two Delegations.

By GLENN RAMSEY,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Rival republican factions in Savannah and Atlanta will appear before the national committee at Cleveland June 8 to contest the seating of delegates from the first and fifth Georgia congressional districts.

In the district conventions, held April 25, the supporters of opposing leaders named delegates and alternates to the national meeting. The state convention had no control over the district delegates and the contests go to Cleveland.

From the Atlanta district Harry Sommers, wealthy automobile man, was elected a delegate by the Clint W. Hager faction, now in control of the party in Georgia. W. R. Watson, of Lithonia, is Sommers' alternate.

Another Group.

At the same time and in the same room, the Josiah T. Rose group selected A. T. Walden, Atlanta negro attorney, delegate, and Norman Miller, a white man, alternate. Negroes were in the majority at the Rose meeting.

Sommers is to appear before the national committee in his own interest, and supported by State Chairman Hager, Ben J. Davis, a delegate from the state at large, and Watson. Davis is a negro.

Walden is to be present along with Miller. Miller is expected to present Walden's case. Rose will aid him.

Others to Attend.

Mrs. Bertha Field, of Marietta, national committeewoman from Georgia and James W. Arnold, of Athens, national committeeman, are to attend the committee sessions. Wilson Williams, of Woodbury, secretary of the state central committee, also is to attend the contest hearings.

In the contest from the Savannah district E. K. Overstreet, of Sylvania, was selected delegate by the Ben H. McLarty faction and Charles E. Donnelly is the delegate of the St. James D. Alexander group.

Overstreet's alternate is Morris Horowitz, of Savannah, and Dr. H. Van Beuren, of Statesboro, the alternate for Donnelly.

Under republican party procedure, the contests will be heard first by the contest committee of the republican national committee.

To National Committee.

After the contest committee has made its decision, the national committee reviews the ruling and may either agree to or reverse the contest committee. Whatever delegate the national committee decides upon will have his name placed upon the temporary roll of the convention.

If the contestants still wish to continue the fight an appeal can be taken to the credentials committee of the convention which makes up the permanent roll. The credentials committee has the right to approve or disagree with the findings of the national committee.

Final appeal is to the floor of the convention. Georgia republican leaders said, however, few contests ever go further than the credentials committee.

BUDDY POPPY SALE PLANNED TUESDAY

Annual Event for Veterans' Relief To Be Held in 3,000 Cities.

Atlanta's annual Buddy Poppy Sale will be held Tuesday for the benefit of veterans of foreign wars, according to Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, general chairman of the sale. The sale is sponsored by Post No. 390, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the auxiliary.

Funds received from the sale of buddy poppies will be used for veterans' relief and rehabiiitation and in the Americanization program of the organization. Poppy sales will be held during the week in 3,000 cities of the country. Disabled veterans in hospitals and homes have made the poppies to be sold and will receive one cent for each poppy made by them.

Representatives of various women's organizations of Atlanta will sell the poppies during the day.

FULTON FIRE COVERAGE CHANGE IS SUGGESTED

Agents' Association Urges Distribution To 'Eliminate Politics,' Reduce Cost.

A proposal to "eliminate politics" from the distribution of Fulton county fire insurance and to place all contracts in the hands of the Atlanta Association of Fire Insurance Agents will be taken up for study at the June meeting of the county commissioners Wednesday, Dr. Charles R. Adams, board chairman, announced yesterday.

Lower premium costs and more adequate coverage will result if the agents' association is allowed to distribute the insurance on a pro rata basis among its members, H. J. Haas, Milton Dargan Jr. and Irwin Wootten, business committee of the organization, informed the commissioners in a letter detailing the association's plan.

At present the county carries a total of $1,688,680 of insurance, of which amount members of the association wrote 70 per cent. Non-members now carry the remaining 30 per cent.

Pointing out that the distribution in the past has occasioned "dissatisfaction" among insurance men in Fulton county, the association's committee said the plan they propose will eliminate "politics." By reducing the number of policies, the premium cost will be cut materially, representatives said.

Frank R. Fling, clerk of the commission, said the matter is to be considered at the meeting Wednesday but that commissioners so far have not announced their decision in the matter.

The method of distributing insurance on county property was criticized last year by a grand jury and it was understood that some change in the policies and procedure will be made this year.

The fire insurance agents declared also that fire hazards will be eliminated and general conditions improved if their plan of insuring is adopted by the board.

They said that the method has been found entirely satisfactory in a number of counties in Florida, California, Washington and other states.

Through 1934 no one company was given more than $50,000 in policies but in 1935 several received contracts for more than that amount, Spratlin, Harrington & Thomas, for instance, writing policies totaling nearly $500,000.

Wearisome Steps to Mt. Everest's Summit

This picture of mighty Mt. Everest, the world's highest peak, still unscaled by man, shows the approximate route being taken by the 1936 British expedition, led by Hugh Ruttledge, in its present attempt to climb to the top. Two of the 12 British climbers will make the final dash to the summit from camp No. 7.

'He-Men' Declared Less Suitable Than Sybarites for Everest Climb

This dispatch from the British Mt. Everest expedition was written just before the advance party left the base camp and climbed as high as camp No. 4, at 23,000 feet, when a snowstorm and the danger of avalanches forced it back to camp No. 1. On May 26 the climbers had again ascended to camp No. 3, at the 21,500-foot level. The expedition hopes to scale the 29,141-foot summit before June 10, when the monsoon is expected to break in full fury.

BASE CAMP, MT. EVEREST, TIBET, May 11.—(By Air Mail via London.)—Sybarites, not "he-men," are most likely to succeed in climbing Mount Everest. By "sybarites" I mean men who assess comfort as something desirable and who are well fed and warmly clothed and housed, and by "he-men" those who affect an indifference in these matters to the detriment of their strength and stamina; such cannot overcome the trying conditions imposed by the highest of mountains.

It has been said that if climbers could reside at a Ritz hotel on the North Col before attempting to reach the summit, their task would be greatly simplified. Failing such a luxurious amenity, no effort must be spread to maintain the party from civilization to summit in the greatest possible comfort, both externally and internally.

In this respect, as in some other respects, it is true to say that Everest is climbed in London, for it is only as the result of much forethought that men can be got into position high enough on the mountain and fit enough to make the effort of climbing the last 1,200 feet.

Effect on Appetite.

As regards food, the problem is not merely one of providing good food containing the essential vitamins and calories of heat. Oxygen lack at high altitudes has a pernicious effect on the whole system, physical and mental, and by wilting the appetite soon reduces the climber to the dimensions of a "living skeleton." Acclimatization and deterioration are now time-honored terms in connection with the Everest problem.

A man's heart, lungs and blood continue to adapt themselves to the oxygen lack, but at the same time this oxygen lack reduces his flesh and substance, rendering him more and more susceptible to fatigue and cold. Stave off this deterioration, if only for a time, while acclimatization proceeds, and the chances of climbing Everest are enormously increased.

High Altitude Foods.

We have transported some 460 boxes, containing a net weight of nearly five tons, of food in containers varying from tinned hams weighing 12 pounds to 'picnic' tins of condensed milk weighing 4 ounces, intended for the highest camps. The food supply has to allow not only for the elasticity of the stomachs it benefits but also for the idiosyncrasies of those stomachs and also for such fresh food as has been procurable during the march across Tibet to the base camp.

"Pickles!" Wyn Harris had wailed at 21,000 feet in 1,935. "Why can't I have more pickles?" "Eggs!" Eric Shipton hoarsely declaimed at 27,400 feet. "Oh for a few dozen eggs!" Therefore, pickles and eggs—3,900 of the latter. Not, it may be mentioned, all for Shipton.

Above the base camp, climbers will do most of their own cooking. We know from experience the foods most likely to tickle the palates of climbers in varying stages of acclimatization and deterioration when tastes and appetites are semi-atrophied by oxygen lack and discomfort—foods that slip easily down sore throats at 23,000 feet, that need no preparation other than heating for a more or less unspecified period, that are rich in warming carbohydrates.

Appetite by Altitude.

Broadly speaking, the scheme is simple enough. It allows for plenty of good food on the march, even better food on the glacier, and specially palatable and easily assimilated foods at the high camps. An element of surprise is of vital importance. Never should meals be allowed to sink to a dead level of sameness.

"Army rations," very occasionally, may do for the march (preferably the return march), but chicken brists, asparagus tips, Swiss black cherry jam, stuffed olives and "vintage" sardines (some gourmets "lay down" sardines like wine) are the sort of foods likely to assist, in the assimilation of the more solid and numerous calories and vitamins which the scientists assure us must on no account be neglected if Everest is to be climbed.

Soup is another standby, and there is nothing calculated to put the mess in a better temper than a plateful of steaming mushroom puree or mock turtle. It is possible also in Tibet to obtain fresh food in the form of sheep and chickens.

THREE MILLIONTH FORD V-8 PRODUCED AT ROUGE PLANT

Event Celebrated by Officials And British Manufacturers

Car Put on Exhibition in Ford's Rotunda; Visits Texas Centennial Later.

DEARBORN, Mich., May 30.—The 3,000,000th V-8 Ford came off the famous final assembly line at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company this morning under the eyes of Henry Ford and Edsel Ford and a group of British cement manufacturers headed by Viscount Wolmer.

The car, which mark.. another milestone in Ford production, was immediately driven to the new Ford rotunda after it had been inspected by the Fords and their guests. There it will remain on display for a few days, after which it will be started overland to Dallas for exhibition during the summer in the Ford Exposition building at the Texas Centennial exposition.

The 3,000,000th V-8 unit was the one-millionth Ford to be built since June 13, 1935, a year less 18 days. Its production was hailed by Ford executives as further public justification of the new principles of motor car engineering introduced when the V-8 Ford was first presented to the public four years ago. It added one more unit to the more than 24,000,000 Fords which have been built since the Ford Motor Company was established June 16, 1903. The 25,000,000th Ford will be built early in 1937.

The first V-8 Ford was produced March 9, 1932. It was the first motor car below the expensive fine-car field to be powere with a V-type engine. The 1,000,000th V-8 Ford was built June 19, 1934 and driven that afternoon to Chicago, where it was at once placed on exhibition in the Ford Exposition building at the World's Fair.

The 2,000,000th V-8 Ford, manufactured last June was driven to San Diego, where it was on display all summer at the Ford Exposition building at the California Pacific International exposition.

The 3,000,000th V-8 Ford is a Fordor touring sedan, finished in the new armory green and lettered in yellow to set it off from the hundreds of thousands of Ford V-8s built this year.

U. S. RUBBER OFFERS MASTER AIRSEAL TUBE

New Product Said To Hold Air Two and One-Half Times Longer.

The Royal Master Airseal, a new tube which is said to hold air two and one-half times longer than the ordinary tube, is announced by United States Rubber Products, Inc.

Developed especially for use with the super-safe, long-wearing United States Royal Master tire, the Airseal tube is ultra modern in design and in the many advantages which it offers.

Foremost among its qualities is its extraordinary ability to hold air. Explanation of this feature lies in the fact that the tube is treated on the inside with an exclusive new process known a Airseal. This process, technically secret, acts to reduce the seepage of air through the tube walls, a condition common to all tubes because all rubber is naturally porous. So successful is the process in checking the flow of air, engineers claim, that the tube actually holds air two and one-half times longer than ordinary inner tubes.

From the motorist's viewpoint, this means that he will not have to stop as often to have air put in his tires. More important than this convenience feature, it means that the danger of running on under-inflated tires is greatly lessened and that mileage expectancy is increased. One pound of under-inflation takes 600 miles from the life of a tire, automobile engineers have proved.

The new tube is also safer. One reason cited for this is the fact that it is made 50 per cent heavier on the rim side to eliminate tube pinching and rim chafing. A second reason, equally important, is that it is constructed with the tried and proved "U. S." air-venting feature, which eliminates sidewall blisters and blowouts caused by air trapped between tube and casing.

STUDEBAKER TOURISTS SAVE ON GAS MILEAGE

New Over-Drive Will Enable Owners To Save One-Third on Gas Consumption.

The approach of the touring season has resulted in many motorists giving serious consideration to the overdrives, with which 1936 Studebaker automobiles are equipped, according to J. E. Yarbrough, local Studebaker dealer, whose showrooms are located at 560 West Peachtree street. According to Mr. Yarbrough, motorists who own overdrive-equipped Studebakers may ride three miles and pay for only two when on tour.

"This 'free' ride is all simple and easy to explain," asserts Mr. Yarbrough, "for that is exactly the way Studebaker's overdrive works. Having a car equipped with overdrive is like having another forward speed in the transmission. Besides low, intermediate and high, the car is equipped with the 'overdrive' gear to be used at speeds over 40 miles an hour.

"Moreover, the driver does not have to shift any gears to use the overdrive. Running at 40 miles an hour, the driver merely takes his foot off the accelerator momentarily and the overdrive comes into action. When he later slows down the overdrive automatically goes out of action at speeds under 40 miles an hour.

"That," explains Mr. Yarbrough, "is all the driver has to do about overdrive. Engineers have figured out many interesting facts about the economics that the overdrive accomplishes. For example, when a Studebaker is running at 60 miles per hour the engine is turning over at the rate of only 40 miles per hour. That means a big saving in gasoline. Recently a group of engineers tested three cars with overdrive. One of them gave 21 miles per gallon of gasoline when running at 30 miles per hour in high gear, but gave only 18.4 miles to the gallon at 40 miles an hour. This same car, using the overdrive at 40 miles per hour, gave 22.8 miles per gallon, which is almost 2 miles per gallon more than its most efficient operation in the conventional high gear.

"Another car gave only 16.3 miles per gallon at 30 miles per hour. That was its most efficient speed in conventional high gear. But, with overdrive, it gave 19 miles to the gallon at 40 miles per hour and 17 miles at 50 miles per hour.

"For the three cars tested the average gain in fuel economy, using the overdrive, was 3.4 miles per gallon at speeds of 40 to 60 miles per hour."

Fuel economy is not the only advantage offered by the overdrive, according to Mr. Yarbrough. The Studebaker engineering department has determined that the engine saves 900 revolutions for every mile traveled when overdrive is used. A mere 100 miles of road distance saves 90,000 revolutions. That means that valves, bearings, spark plugs, timing gears, ignition equipment, generator, pistons, rings and cylinder walls escape from this much unnecessary wear and will, therefore, last that much longer. Mr. Yarbrough attributed a great deal of the popularity of the 1936 Studebakers to the fact that the overdrive is available on all models this season. He states that many motorists are interested in the overdrive primarily because of the smoother, quieter ride it gives at higher speeds, and only incidentally in the actual economies it accomplishes.

MILLION AND HALF FORD TRUCKS USED

Registrations Reveal Over Million Trucks, Commercial Cars Being Used.

A total of 1,424,760 Ford truck and commercial car units were licensed for operation in the United States as of January 1, 1936, a report to the Ford Motor Company disclosed today.

The total of all trucks and commercial cars licensed to operate at the outset of the year was 3,535,661, a gain of 7.9 per cent over 1934. More than 40 per cent of the total were Ford units.

The total of Ford truck and commercial car units in service was more than 51 per cent greater than the units of any other manufacturer which were licensed to operate on that date and the only make to total more than a million units. This Ford fleet was increased by almost 90,000 units in 1935 as a result of the licensing of 172,544 new Ford V-8 units and the retirement of only 82,708 old Ford models during the year.

Nearly 1,000,000 of the Ford truck and commercial car units in operation were V-8 and other models manufactured since 1928, the report disclosed. A total of 468,156 units, however, were of the Model T and TT type, a remarkable tribute to the endurance of this famous model.

61 RAILS ANNOUNCE ADVANCE IN EARNINGS

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—Earnings of the first 61 reporting railroads for April improved considerably over those recorded during March, when floods cut sharply into their income.

April gross for these roads gained 15.9 per cent over the same period a year ago, while net operating income rose 16.8 per cent.

Last month the comparable advance was 11.0 per cent gross and 1.9 per cent net for 67 companies.

Totals for the four months were: Gross, up 12.9 per cent, and net operating income, 15.6.

CADILLAC SERVICE MEN AVERAGE ELEVEN YEARS

Survey Reveals Fact Cadillac-La Sale Men Average Over 11 Years' Service.

Craftsmen in Cadillac-LaSalle service stations throughout the United States have been employed at their present jobs for an average of more than 11 years per man.

This fact is disclosed in replies to a questionnaire which Nicholas Dreystadt, general manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, recently ordered sent to all of Cadillac's service managers. Mr. Dreystadt, in addition to directing Cadillac-LaSalle engineering, manufacturing and selling operations, has gained national recognition as an authority on service. Last year he founded the Cadillac Certified Craftsman's League, which now has a roster of 2,000 Cadillac-LaSalle service specialists who retain membership only by passing written monthly examinations on technical service subjects.

The questionnaire also revealed that the certificates awarded to members of the league at the close of 1935 are not the first Cadillac documents of that type. Charles S. Hopcroft, manager of the service department for Knox Brothers, Cadillac-LaSalle dealers at Santa Anta, Cal., has submitted a certificate which he received nearly 27 years ago from the "Cadillac School of Applied Mechanics." It is signed by Henry M. Leland, then manager of Cadillac.

At the age of 18, Hopcroft was apprenticed for a two-year course of instruction at the Cadillac factory. He was paid a regular wage during the period, and upon graduation in October, of 1909, he received a bonus of $100. Hopcroft, as a member of the Cadillac Certified Craftsman's League, thus holds certificates dated 1909 and 1935.

A further highlight among the questionnaire replies was that of W. B. Mitchell Sr., who heads the Bay City (Mich.) Auto Company. Mr. Mitchell, who started Cadillac servi work nearly 32 years ago, still maintains personal supervision over his service department. He carries a battered old Cadillac factory badge and during his frequent visits to the plant at Detroit he spends many hours inspecting the various manufacturing operations. Mitchell's service force at Bay City, which includes his son, W. B. Mitchell Jr., has an average employment record with his company of 18.5 years per man.

"Our average term would be considerably longer," Mitchell explained, "but it is sort of pulled down by one of our newcomers who has been with us only about 13 years."

BOSTON, May 30.—(UP)—An attache of the army airport was killed and another was probably injured fatally when an army plane crashed in Boston harbor late today.

The victim was Robert Tancher. The second occupant of the plane, William E. Holloway, 24, of Charlottesville, Va., a mechanic, was taken to a hospital. He suffered a broken jaw, a possible skull fracture and brain concussion, and other serious injuries.

New Prior Station To Provide Distinctive Service to Motorists

Pictured above is the new Prior Tire Company station located at Peachtree and Pine streets. The station will make its formal bow to the public Tuesday, June 2. Attractive in appearance, expertly staffed and with ample room to give quick and efficient service, the new station is expected to prove increasingly popular with Atlanta motorists. The public is invited to inspect and patronize the station on its formal opening day. A gift carton containing six chip-proof glass tumblers will be presented to all motorists making a purchase of five or more gallons of gasoline on opening day.

OVER A MILLION PONTIACS PRODUCED

Production of Pontiac Cars Passed Million Mark Recently.

One million, seventy-two thousand, nine hundred and twenty-six Pontiac cars were built and sold in the United States during the 10-year period up to January 1, 1936, and 859,461 or 80.1 per cent of them were still in use on that date, according to figures furnished to the sales department of Pontiac Motor Company by R. L. Polk and Company. World-wide figures, including Canadian and export, raise that to approximately 83 per cent because of the greater length of time cars are driven in other countries.

"The Polk figures prove the dependability of Pontiac cars," points out C. P. Simpson, vice president and general sales manager of the company.

"According to these figures, 397,845 of the cars in use were built in 1929 or prior. Thus, 40.3 per cent or nearly one-half of them are over six years old. Pontiacs built from 1930 to 1936 and registered on January 1 were 461,616."

A break-down of the 397,845 cars built in 1929 and before and still in use shows the folowing: 17,817, year not given; 18,243 registered in 1926; 69,513 registered in 1927; 145,752 in 1928 and 146,520 in 1929.

"The average annual mileage per automobile in this country is supposed to be 12,000," says Mr. Simpson. "If only one-half of the 18,243 10-year-old Pontiacs still in service have maintained even an average of 10,000 miles a year, then we have 9,121 cars that are in the 100,000-mile class.

"Based on a conservative estimate of 10,000 miles a year, the 859,461 Pontiacs in use have been driven the astounding distance of 40,000,000,000 miles.

"Traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, it would take light or electricity or a radio beam 2 1-2 days to cover this span. It takes them one-seventh of a second to go around the world."

Continuing the arithmetic, these Pontiac cars have traversed 430 times the distance from the earth to the sun, or 1,600,000 times around the world.

At an average touring speed of 40 miles an hour, it would have taken one Pontiac car 114,155 years to cover the distance. And at Indianapolis Speedway speeds of 100 miles an hour, 45,662 years would have been consumed.

And that would mean that the start of this endurance run would have been before even the earliest traces of prehistoric Neanderthal and Cro-Magnon man. It would go back to the days when the gasoline we are using today was being formed in the crust of the earth.

Bowling over the earth at those speeds day and night without stopping, this single Pontiac car would have been purring merrily along a couple of glacial ages today, in the days before cave men. Even before such a common thing as the wheel was invented or how-to-make fire discovered. Back when it is doubtful whether whatever kind of prehistoric man existed at that time knew how to use a club.

There were lizards as large as elephants then and elephants as big as a railroad locomotive, too.

To cover those 40,000,000,000 miles, either the way it actually was done by 859,461 Pontiac cars, or by the imaginary one Pontiac, meant the consumption of 2,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline at an average of 20 miles per gallon. At 18 cents per gallon, the cost of gasoline alone amounted to $360,000,000.

"Another 10 years with cars like the present Pontiac unquestionably will show an even larger percentage of cars in use," concluded Mr. Simpson. "And making a new set of calculations like the above probably will be a job for an astronomer or an insurance actuary."

BUICK'S HEAVY VOLUME CONTINUES FOR MAY

Dealers Report No Let-Up in Demand for Buick Cars.

FLINT, Mich., May 30.—Continuation of the heavy retail volume experienced since the middle of the first quarter was reflected today in sales of the Buick Motor Company reported for the first ten days of May.

During this period, according to W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, domestic retail deliveries of Buick motor cars totaled 4,903 units, comparing with 2,100 cars delivered in the corresponding period a year ago, a gain of 2,803 sales, or 133.5 per cent. The figure compared with 5,568 cars delivered during the first ten days of April and with 3,237 cars delivered in the corresponding period of March.

Meanwhile the company entered the current month with a bank of more than 12,000 unfilled orders, which has remained consistently at this level.

Sales in the first reporting period of May brought total sales of Buick motor cars since the first of the year to 52,437 units as compared with 23,131 in the corresponding period a year ago. Since their introduction last fall, domestic retail sales of 1936 Buicks have aggregated 97,163 units, Mr. Hufstader said.

ROOSEVELT EMBARKS ON WEEK-END CRUISE

ANNAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, after a drive in an open car from Washington, boarded the yacht Potomac late today for a week-end cruise with a small party of guests.

He planned to witness a pageant in Dewey basin by Naval Academy midshipmen depicting Stephen Decatur's recapture of the frigate Philadelphia from pirates in the harbor of Tripoli in 1804.

After a fireworks display, the yacht Potomac was to resume a journey down Chesapeake bay and return the executive to Washington tomorrow evening.

The guests aboard were Samuel Rosenman, associate justice of the New York supreme court, and Mrs. Rosenman; Dr. Stanley High, head of the Good Neighbor League, and Mrs. High; Captain Paul Bastedo and Miss Marguerite LeHand, the President's personal secretary.

Prior Tire New Service Station To Formally Open on Tuesday

A super-service station claimed to be one of the finest in the south will be opened Tuesday by the Prior Tire Company at the corner of Peachtree and Pine streets.

The new station marks another milestone in the progress of the Prior Tire Company. It is complete in every detail and offers motorists a one-stop station where all their car needs will be given expert attention with the exception of major mechanical repairs. This service will be available 24 hours a day. Entrance can be made from both Peachtree and Pine streets.

The station, covering an area of 30,000 square feet, is finished in brilliant white; the design is along modern lines inspired by the last Chicago World's Fair. The modernistic tower is lined with red, green and blue Neon tubing, while the name of the company, in red, flashes on and off alternately. The lighting fixtures are modernistic and at night the entire station is brilliantly illuminated. So bright is the illumination that it is claimed a person can read a newspaper at a distance of 60 feet from any one of the flood lamps.

The company will be a complete one-stop service station in every sense of the word with 10 distinct departments, including lubrication, battery sales, recharging and rentals; tire sales and service, washing and polishing, wheel aligning, radio sales and service, accessories, gasoline and motor oil, brake service and road service.

The new station covers about twice as much space as the old one. A switchboard has been installed for promptly handling of all telephone calls. The opening of the new superstation has resulted in an increase in personnel which will give motorists quick and efficient service at all times. Prior Tire Company now affords employment to 43 attendants.

A brilliant program of entertainment, featuring three well-known Atlanta bands and the popular Sidewalk Snoopers, will be held on the station driveway on opening day. The Sidewalk Snoopers will hold forth from 12:30 to 12:45. Rudy Mincey and his orchestra will entertain from 11 to 2:45 p. m.; Kirk DeVore and his orchestra will entertain from 3 to 6 p. m., and Graham Jackson and his aggregation will be the center of attraction from 6 to 9 p. m. The opening has been planned along the lines of a Hollywood first night and huge flood lamps will illuminate the station in a daylight brilliance. Other entertainment will be furnished by well-known Atlanta artists.

In celebration of the completion of the new station the company held a dinner for its employes. Those attending were B. L. Jamerson, night service manager; O. B. Pope, lubrication department; Nunnally Walker, service station; A. C. Johnson, radio department; C. W. Crabtree, service station; L. B. Oden, lubrication department; W. P. A 12 o'clock closing order doesn't daunt the restaurant owners of Amsterdam. When midnight strikes, they close shop but put automatic vending machines in front of their stores. These retail sandwiches, cake and even ice cream cones.

English Nobility Buys Buicks

Not to be outdone by King Edward, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to the United States, and Lady Lindsay have each purchased a 1936 Buick. Lady Lindsay selected a Buick Roadmaster six passenger convertible phaeton. Sir Ronald's choice was Buick's newest model, the formal sedan. Both cars were delivered in Washington recently.

White Cane Means 'Stop'

Blind pedestrians will not need a traffic light for protection when the "white cane law" first adopted in Detroit gains momentum in other sections of the country. Under the new rule a white cane may be carried only by the blind, and the emblem is a stop signal anywhere for all traffic until the bearer is safely across the street. The measure has the active support of traffic officials, as the picture shows. Lieutenant J. Wesley Brown, head of the public safety bureau of the Detroit police department, got out of the Plymouth safety car in order to impress the white cane's significance on approaching motorists. When you see a white cane, come to a full stop.

Pontiac Chiefs Visit Atlanta

Large Olds Fleet Out for Safety

Scores of cities throughout the country will take part in a huge safety campaign now under way as the contribution of Oldsmobile to motoring safety. A fleet of 55 cars has been built and turned over to the police of the larger American municipalities. Part of the 30 Oldsmobiles which appeared in the New York safety parade is shown above. These cars later were used by New York police in safety education. The close-up of the Voice of Safety car shows the special loudspeaker equipment and safety message. The inset shows C. L. McCuen, Oldsmobile president, presenting the keys to a fleet of 24 of the cars to Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert, of the Detroit police department.

LOU MEYER SETS NEW RECORD IN 500-MILE RACE

Taft Wright's Two Homers Beat Crackers, 5 to 1; Don Budge Wins to Even Series as Allison Loses

A Fisherman's Dream---Of a North Georgia Mountain Stream---Becomes a Reality as Season Opens

A shady nook, a babbling brook—this is the stuff of which poets sing—and it's all a reality in the north Georgia mountains, where trout, bass, bream and other members of the finny tribe await the pleasure of Izaak Waltons of the state. Fishing season officially opens at midnight tonight. George Cornett, of The Constitution photographic staff, offers readers a graphic scene of a mountain stream. Miss Kate Vretman, of 2699 Peachtree road, N. E., is shown angling in the rapids. She is fly casting for trout.

The Hoop Snake and the Moccasin Go Fishing!

They were buying fishing tackle.

One of them was snapping a light Japanese bream rod. Another poured over a box of hooks. Still another stroked a broken-back plug. Another whirred a reel.

(The fishing season opens tomorrow.)

"I was out just looking at that place where the bream bedded last year," said the man with the bream rod. "And I saw three moccasins there on the bank. I wondered if they were waiting for some bream to come into the shallow water."

There was a clearing of throats and a taking in of the breath. But Louis Wright spoke first.

"They probably were," he said. "Snakes eat a lot of fish every year."

"I never saw one," said the man with the bream rod. I thought they ate only dead fish. I don't believe a snake can catch a live fish."

Louis Wright beat them to the floor again.

"You are wrong there," he said. "I saw a sight one year which I don't like to tell. People may not believe it. I've spent a lot of time on the water and in the woods but this was the most unusual sight I evew saw," he said.

"You know that long arm up there on Lake Burton. I was in there all by myself one afternoon. It was getting late and I was just about ready to go in. You know that clump of willows over there on the right, just at the bend?

"Well, I thought I'd pull up and move around there to where they bedded one year. And so I didn't pull the motor. I just untied and gave a couple of pulls with my paddle.

THERE WAS A SPLASHING.

"There was a splashing sound I could hear before I made the turn around the willows. I eased the boat around and took a look."

Louis Wright paused. "Have any of you fellows ever seen trained seals on the stage, tossing a ball from one to the other?"

A few heads nodded an affirmative nod.

"Well, sir," I near fell out of the boat. There were five big moccasins in the shallow water there near the bank. And they had hemmed in some bream.

"There was a big moccasin out farther from the bank than the others. And he was dipping down and grabbing a bream. He'd flip it to the next one and that snake would catch it and then flip it to the next one. They were relaying those fish to the bank and had quite a pile of bream there.

"I took up my gun and killed the big moccasin and the next one. But the other three got away. I always figured they were taking them home to the den.

"It was a most unusual sight and I really don't like to tell it," he said, "because you know how people are about fish stories. They are inclined to doubt a fellow's word."

There was a silence. The man with the bream rod began to tap it on the counter. There was a shifting of feet and some uneasy glances.

"I knew you'd doubt it," said Louis Wright. "But if you don't believe it you come up to Burton and I'll show you the very clump of willows around which I pulled the boat to find the moccasins."

And he went on out.

THE HOOP SNAKE FISHES.

The man with the bream rod kept on tapping the counter.

Red Carpenter cleared his throat. There was a startled look on the faces of the fishermen. The man with the bream rod said:

"I wish Louis Wright would have stayed. I'd liked to have asked him if he ever saw a snake eat a live fish."

"Did I ever tell you about the hoop snake?" asked Red Carpenter.

"The hoop snake?" said the man who was fondling a broken-back plug in his hands.

"It was up in a lake in north Georgia," said Red Carpenter. "I was fishing there for a week. It was the third day out that I went back into the far end of the lake. We noticed the fish seemed awfully scared. We could see them deep down in the clear waters, darting about.

"And then, far down at one end of the lake in the shallow water, we noticed what looked like a lot of black hoops rolling out of the water.

"We had to push through a lot of lily pads but we got there close enough to see. It was quite a sight. The hoop snakes were fishing. Those hoop snakes would swim out in the shallow water until they saw a nice fat bream or bass down in the water.

"Then they'd dive down and catch the fish by the tail or the head. It was quite a sight."

Red Carpenter paused and stood shaking his head, as he recalled the sight.

"How about the hoops?" asked the man with the bream rod.

"Oh, yes," said Carpenter. "You see, it was this way. The minute that hoop snake caught the fish, it was in a bad way, the snake I mean. Well, I guess they both were, at that. But the snake couldn't swim very well.

"So, what did they do but this. They held on to the snake and then brought the tail around and wrapped a bit of it around the other end of the fish. And they then formed a hoop and rolled right out of the shallow water to the bank, where they let go the hoop and ate the fish."

The man with the bream rod began to tap the counter. The man with the plug began to stare at it with fixed eyes.

"If you will go with me up there this summer," said Red Carpenter, "I will show you the very lily pads we had to push through. I guess that will satisfy you." Yes, sir, the very same lily pads!

ALLISON LOSES OPENING MATCH

Adrian Quist Easy Winner Over Vet; Crawford Extends Budge.

By Henry McLemore.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—(UP) Donald Budge, the California youngster with the red hair, and the game and courage to match, today gave the United States Davis cup forces an even break in opening play of the North American zone tie with Australia by defeating Jack Crawford, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 1-6, 13-11.

When Budge took the court against the former Wimbledon champion and No. 1 ranking player in the world, the American chances were squarely up to him. Shortly before, in the opening singles engagement, Wilmer Allison, of Texas, our national champion, was put to rout, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, by Adrian Quist, the Australian titleholder. A licking for Budge, and the United States would have been forced to score a clean sweep of the remaining three matches to win—an all but impossible task.

MAGNIFICENT EXHIBITION.

For the first two sets the gangling kid from the coast, who pounds the ball like Tilden did at his best, gave the crowd of 6,500 which jammed the colorful little stands of the Germantown Cricket Club, not a single worry. Fishing Season Opens Tonight at Midnight

Enforcement of Laws Preserves Fish, Lends Rosy Prospect to Season in Georgia.

By Ralph McGill.

If you wish you may start at midnight tonight.

I mean you may if you are that anxious to get started on your fishing for 1936.

The closed season ends tonight at midnight. And after that time until April 15, 1937, the bream, catfish, bass, perch, trout and other denizens of Georgia's lakes and streams are at your disposal. (Try and get them.)

Zack Cravey, state game and fish commissioner, who has done a great job, submitted the slogan for the year.

"Conserve our fish. Don't catch more than you need. Throw the little ones back and report the dynamiters and seiners to me."

Fishermen may expect the finest season in years. Better co-operation in enforcing the closed season, reduction of seining and dynamiting by 50 per cent; wider spawning areas produced by high waters in creeks and inlets, all aided in creating better fishing prospects.

BEST IN UNION.

No state in the Union can match Georgia's fishing possibilities.

The mountains of north Georgia provide rainbow trout and the streams are replenished from a special rainbow hatchery. Other trout and fish are found in the mountain streams.

Other streams of the state furnish all kinds of bass, bream, crappie, perch, catfish and other varieties. The streams of the coastal section offer

Map and Calendar To Guide Anglers

A map of the principal fishing points in the state and Coble's fishing calendar, telling when the fish are biting the best, are to be found on Page 2, this section.

In view of the opening of the season, The Constitution enlisted the services of the State Game and Fish Department and presents a comprehensive chart of the best fishing spots and how to get there.

Clip the map and calendar and save them for reference. They should be of incalculable help.

WRIGHT WRECKS CRACKERS AGAIN

Lipscomb Scores Lone Run; Thomas Drops Initial Game.

By Wirt Gammon.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 30. The Lookouts ripped right through the rip-roaring Crackers again today in another nifty ball game, using as a stepping stone up to the .500 jinx mark the very team against which they had sworn bloody revenge for the way they had been mistreated early in the current campaign. The score was 5 to 1. Two glittering victories in the space of 18 hours.

To the great glee of an inappropriately small crowd of about 1,000, the inspired Lookouts handed Bud Thomas, winner of seven games, his first defeat of the season. They became the only club which has whipped the Crackers three times.

This sterling contest, rounding out two straight contests here of as fine pitching as any one would care to see, had a pair of heroes in Sydney Cohen and Taft Wright. Syd put on the steam to turn back the Crax with a six-hit performance. It was Sydney's sixth triumph. He all but equalled Sir Richard Lanahan's masterful performance the night before.

And there was Wright. If it isn't one ex-Cracker in the Crackers' hair, it is another. Friday night it was big Fred Sington who, by the way,

Meyer Sets Record With 109.069 M.P.H

Lou Gets Third Victory Before 166,000; Ted Horn Second; Mauri Rose Third.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—(AP)—Accomplishing what no other driver before has done, Louie Meyer, of Huntington Park, Cal., roared to his third glorious victory in the 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis motor speedway today in record-breaking time and with a record-smashing crowd triumphantly cheering him.

Meyer drove his 4-cylinder special the full 500 miles without relief and made only two quick stops. He covered the distance in 4:35:03.39 to average 109.069 miles an hour, breaking the previous record of 106.240 miles per hour hung up by Kelly Petillo, colorful Italian of Huntington Park, Cal., in winning America's special classic last year. Meyer won before in 1928 and 1935.

Another Californian, 27-year-old Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, finished second, nearly three miles behind Meyer, with Mauri Rose, of Dayton, Ohio, third, 7 1-2 miles back. George (Doc) MacKenzie, of Eddington, Pa., was fourth, Petillo driving the last 1-5 miles as relief, piloted the car over the finish line. Chet Miller, of Detroit, was fifth and Ray Pixley, of Fullerton, Cal., was sixth.

Fifteen of the original 32 starters finished and only five ran out of gasoline which was restricted to 37.5 gallons for the 500 miles.

As a result of his victory, Meyer earned about $35,000, of which $20,000 was first prize money, with the additional coming from lap prizes and checks from accessory manufacturers. He snatched the lead at the 225-mile mark, when Babe Stapp, of Los An-

71,000 See Yanks Defeat Senators, 7-1, 6-1---Giants Drop Two

RED SOX DIVIDE WITH ATHLETICS; INDIANS WIN TWO

Browns Upset Tigers in Both Games; Gehrig Gets 6th Homer.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—The Yankees gave the largest crowd of the major league season a mighty display of batting power today, battering the Washington Senators in both ends of a double-header with a total of 26 hits, ten of them for extra bases.

The scores were 7 to 1 and 6 to 1.

The twin victory, taken before a crowd of more than 71,000, boosted the Yanks' first-place American league margin to 3 1-2 games over the Boston Red Sox, who split a twin bill with the Athletics today.

Monte Pearson's effective hurling and Lou Gehrig's sixth home run of the year featured the opener. In the nightcap, Charlie Ruffing let the Senators down with two hits, one of them a four-base smash by Joe Kuhel, as George Selkirk and Frank Crosetti each hit their sixth home runs for the Yanks.

The Athletics and Boston Red Sox divided a double-header before Shibe park's record crowd of the season, 28,450 paid. The Mackmen won the first game, 6 to 4, and the Red Sox the second, 6 to 2.

Wally Moses' single, scoring Finney and Warstler in the seventh inning, provided the margin of victory by which Herman Fink, rookie right-hander, defeated Wes Ferrell in the opening game. Puccinelli hit for the circuit with the bases empty in the second inning.

Jim Henry, Red Sox recruit, stopped the Macks with five hits in the nightcap, while his supporting cast cinched the decision with a three-run rally in the fourth. One of the Mack runs was tabbed on a homer by Bob Johnson in the sixth.

Cleveland took both ends of a double-header with the Chicago White Sox, winning the first game, 4 to 3, and the second, 11 to 3, before a holiday crowd of 22,000 persons.

The Tribe had two big innings in the second game, scoring five runs in the fourth and four in the sixth. Trosky and Averill accounted for two of the five runs with homers. Radcliff contributed a circuit blow for Chicago in the sixth.

Trosky also hit a home run in the opening game and brought the Indians abreast of Chicago in the sixth. Galatzer's single, Knickerbocker's sacrifice and a single by Hale won the game for Cleveland in the seventh inning.

The St. Louis Browns administered a double beating to the champion Detroit Tigers before a holiday crowd of 39,500 at Navin field. The Browns captured the first game, in which they drove Schoolboy Rowe from the mound, 5 to 3, and then proceeded to whitewash the Tigers, 5 to 0, in the second contest.

Two of Detroit's three runs in the opener were four-baggers by Al Simmons and Charley Gehringer. Jim Bottomley whacked out a home run for the Browns.

Principal Fishing Points in The State of Georgia

Here's 'Key' to State Fishing Grounds

By Jack Troy.

It's a question that friends and neighbors ask each other constantly at this time of the year—"Where can we go to fish?"

Georgia abounds in lakes and streams, some public and some private. And so for the convenience of Izaak Waltons, The Constitution offers above a map of the principal rivers, lakes and streams which are open to the public. The private streams are not listed.

The map was compiled in no time by those unceasing workers of the State Game and Fish Department, Clint Davis and Mrs. Pat Geppert. It's one of the courtesies of the state department so capably headed by Commissioner Zack Cravey.

Also contained in this story is a chart of the Coble fishing calendar showing the prospects for the month of June. Remember, the blacker the fish—the better for fishing.

The key to the map follows:

(1)—Lake Blue Ridge, in Fannin county. It may be reached on state highway No. 5 by way of Marietta and Canton.

(2)—Lake Burton, in Rabun county. It may be reached on state routes Nos. 13 and 15 by way of Gainesville, Cornelia and Clarkesville.

(3)—Lake Tugaloo and Lake Yonah. It may be reached by way of Clarkesville to Tallulah Falls.

Note—Bass, channel cats, bluegills and bream abound in these northeastern counties.

(4)—Lake Jackson, in Jasper county. It may be reached by state route No. 42 to Jackson.

(5)—Crisp county lake, which touches Crisp, Worth, Lee, Sumter and Dooly counties, and may be reached by state route No. 42 to Macon, Route 11 to Perry and Route 7 from Perry to Cordele.

(6)—Power company lake, near Albany. It may be reached by state route No. 3, by way of Griffin and Americus.

(7)—Shows Okefenokee, where large number of lakes are located. It may be reached by state route No. 42 to Macon, No. 11 from Macon to Perry, No. 27 from Perry to Hazelhurst, and No. 4 from Hazelhurst to Folkston.

(8)—State game refuge located in Fannin and Lumphin counties. This game refuge offers some of the finest trout fishing in Georgia. Streams accessible to public fishing are Noontootly, Rock Creek, Long Creek and Davis.

Some of the rivers shown which offer excellent fishing are the Flint, Altamaha, Ogeechee, St. Mary's, Oconee, Ocmulgee, Savannah, Chattahoochee and the Etowah.

Power company lakes require a special free permit which may be secured from power officials or the State Game and Fish Department.

There are many good fishing places in the Atlanta district where fishing is available at low cost. Some of them include Wayne's lake, at Flowery Branch; Vining's Golf Club lakes, 10 miles from Atlanta; Exmoor, on Marietta road; Pinecrest lake, on Bankhead highway; Whaley's pond, near Jonesboro; Mundy's mill, near Jonesboro; Lake Amah Lee, near Hampton; Jackson dam, five miles from Jackson; Bennett's mill, Fayetteville; Lee's lake, south of Union City; Starr's mill, near Fayetteville; Chandler lake, near McCollum; Roger's lakes, near Lithonia; Clark lake, at Clarkston, and Seay lake, near Avondale.

Let's go fishin'!

LOU MEYER WINS AT INDIANAPOLIS

geles, and Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, at that time the flying leaders, ran into trouble. The car driven by Stapp, tearing along the back stretch at terrific speed, broke a rear axle frocing him out of the race.

SHAW HAD TO STOP.

Shaw had to stop at the pits to replenish his fuel supply and then Meyer bounded into the lead. He retained it for only a short time, however, when he was forced to stop for gasoline. He quickly regained it and with a terrific burst of speed that carried him around the 2 1-2 mile brick and asphalt track at a rate ot 115 miles per hour he clung to the lead to the finish.

When about 7 1-2 miles from the checkered flag he reduced his speed to about 98 miles an hour to save gasoline. When he brought his car to a stop there was a pint and a half ot fuel in his tank and three gallons in his pits.

His face smeared with grease, Meyer said today's race was the most enjoyable in which he ever participated because he did not know until the finish that he was going to triumph.

The record-breaking crowd of 166,000 spectators, lured to the track as a result of 31 tragic deaths since racing was started in 1908, saw only one accident today. Al Miller, of Detroit, sustained a fractured left leg. Roaring down the stretch in full sight of thousands of spectators in the stands lining the track, he was injured when the front axle broke and his speeding car cracked into a guard rail. The car swerved back onto the course with Miller's mechanic, Jimmy Jackson, Indianapolis, still sitting in it. The race was immediately slowed down to 60 miles an hour while the wrecked car was hauled off the course. Jackson jumped to safety.

Miller was thrown out of the car and slid across the track. The car smashed into the guard rail with terrific force, with a piece of the rail piercing the hood and shooting back almost to the seats. Miller lost part of his left leg in a motorcycle accident several years ago and today's fracture was on the same member.

"I'm pretty lucky," he said as he was being lifted into an ambulance.

"I just broke my 'wooden leg,'" he said.

The fracture was between the knee and the hip and may necessitate further amputation.

That was the only accident of the race and the safety of the newly constructed turns, guarded with retaining walls, was proven.

It was the first time in years that the race was run without a death or serious accident.

The "tough luck" driver of the race was William (Shorty) Cantlon, of Detroit, who was never out of fifth place and always a dangerous challenger after the first 100 miles had been reeled off. With only seven laps to go and clinging tenaciously to third place, Cantlon ran out of gas.

CUMMINGS QUIT.

Misfortune estimated the pre-race favorites early, Wild Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, winner of the race in 1934, never started. His car balked as the starting field roared away, due to his clutch sticking. He worked frantically over it for half an hour while the other drivers roared on, but could not get it started. Then he quit in despair.

Youthful Rex Mays, the 23-year-old blond boy from Los Angeles, one of the pre-race favorites, shot into the lead at the start, but after leading for 13 laps was forced into the pits by motor trouble, and finally ran out of gas in the final stages of the race after he had worked himself back into sixth position. Freddy Frame, Los Angeles, winner in 1932, surrendered after 7 1-2 miles, due to a broken spring.

RODE IN NEW CAR.

Meyer, after changing his clothes, rode away from the track in a brand-new car presented him. Mrs. Meyer was at the wheel. An attractive blonde of 31, married for 10 years to the new champion, she said she "didn't mind if Louie continued to race as long as he won."

Their son, Louis Jr., 5 years old, remained home in California while his daddy was hanging up the triple victory.

The car Mrs. Meyer drove Louis back to his hotel in was the pace car which her husband had won as the leader of the 200th lap.

In the back seat was Meyer's hysterical mechanic and his girl friend.

McMahon Winner In A. A. U. Marathon

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—William T. McMahon, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Worcester, Mass., today won the National A. A. U. marathon in the record time for the course of 2 hours, 38 minutes and 14 seconds.

OMAHA ANNEXES RACE IN ENGLAND

LONDON, May 30.—(AP)—William Woodward's Omaha, racing two miles for the first time in his gallant career, defeated Lord Derby's Bobsleigh in as thrilling a finish as likely will be seen in England this or any other summer as he won the Queen's Plate at Kempton Park today for his second straight victory on foreign soil.

As 10,000 fans stood in almost paralyzed silence, the magnificent American chestnut, a son of Gallant Fox, and Lord Derby's great runner, stepped through the last two furlongs like true champions with Omaha's neck just in front. He kept it there right to the pole as the rival jockeys, Pat Beasley and R. Perryman, flailed Omaha and Bobsleigh, respectively, for all they were worth.

NOVICE BOXERS CLASH TUESDAY

Forty-six entrants in the city novice boxing tournament will be matched again Tuesday night at the Y. M. C. A. in the third round of the round robin tournament. It is here that the youth of Atlanta climb through the ropes and throw leather at one another until time or a knockout stops the bout. They are short on science but strong on courage and the will to win.

Any boy desiring to enter may do so by appearing at the "Y" at 7:15 o'clock to weigh in.

The following are the contestants: Ant Weight—John Kouros, H. Whithurst, Lanier Coker, George Tribble, Edward Johnson, Robert Coker, William Alexander, Charles Coffin, Grady Baxter, Bill Carroll, Winford Herd, Ralph Woodall. Skeeter Weight—Harry Mott, Mike Kouros, Oliver Hones, Joseph Woodall. Tissue Paper Weight—James Carroll, Murdeen Kirby, Bill Jenkins, Spark Ingram. Paper Weight—Jimmie Gordon, Clay Holcomb, J. R. ONE FOR BOOKS.

TORONTO, May 30.—(AP)—The steeplechase race at Woodbine today produced one for the books when a horse that fell was remounted by a jockey in civilian clothes and finished third. Celeritas won the race with Wilfred G., second, but the other two starters, Leadgold and Pekisko, fell.

Dead Heats Run On Two Tracks

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—Dead heats, once a rarity, were almost common on the American turf today as even the "electric eye" failed to select the winner in two races at Rockingham park and one at Detroit.

In the one-mile third event at Rockingham park, two outsiders, the Corsicana Stable's Blessed Event and Mrs. F. C. Dunn's Bye Bye Mary, finished all square. As if that was not enough for one day, the Suburban Stable's Rock Point and W. Elliott's Miss Careful failed to reach a decision in the mile and one-sixteenth of the sixth race.

At Detroit it was F. L. Talley's Modesto and J. N. Crofton's Tug o' War, a son of Man o' War, that came down to the wire in the six-furlong third number perfectly aligned.

artistic Crawford appear as a novice. He stroked with such fury and such sureness, that Crawford was driven to the defensive, and kept there.

Then the tide turned and it turned with startling speed. With the first stroke in the third set Crawford was a changed man. Without warning he gathered his somewhat broken game and turned to the attack.

Taken by surprise, and shaken, Budge could not stem the barrage of winners which cascaded off the Australian's magic racket. Crawford swept the first three games of the set with the loss of but four points, and went on to win it, 6-4, in a breeze.

In full cry now, he lifted his game to an even higher pitch in the fourth set and rendered Budge completely helpless.

CRAWFORD GETS GOING.

He blazed through the first five games with the loss of only a few scattered points, and could easily have made it a love set had he not elected to coast in the sixth game on Budge's service. After Donald had taken his one game Crawford carved out a love game to win the set, 6-1, and level the match.

When they changed courts for the final set Budge's position was desperate enough to completely undo a less stout-hearted youngster. But the red head dug his feet in the turf, yanked up his pants and revived the hopes of the crowd by holding his own until the score had reached 3-all. Then he faded and Crawford, surging once more, swept the next two games to stand within a single game of the match. He took the two games so easily, and Budge appeared so thoroughly beaten, that the boys in the press box began paying off bets on the Australian veteran. But they were too hasty. Once again the California kid summoned courage and strength from somewhere and began belaboring the ball with a ferocity that drove Crawford into retreat. He squared it at five-all, and then settled down to fight it out to the end.

The next 14 games produced tennis and courage of the highest sort. Crawford, while so weary he could barely force himself about the court, never lost his touch. Until the end he was hitting with the stroke of a master. And Budge, even when Crawford stood but two points away from the match in the 22d game, hit out daringly for the corners and the sides. Crawford, leading 11-10 in games, and 30-15, missed a golden chance to clinch the match when he missed an easy kill at the net. Inspired by this reprieve, Budge squared matters at 11-all, and then swept the next two, breaking Crawford's service in the final game.

Allison was barely able to make it a contest with the youthful Quist. The difference between them is clearly shown by the following recapitulation of the stroke analysis:

	A.	P.	O.	N.	DF.
Quist	1	28	29	34	3
Allison	6	32	49	44	5

The 49 outs and 44 nets show how badly Allison was off his game. He simply couldn't find the range. In the second set he gained temporary control of his ground shots and this allowed him to charge the net, his favorite sniping ground. But Quist, his lesson learned, laid down a barrage of lobs to start the third set and the American was forced to the baseline, where he was no match for Quist in long-range driving.

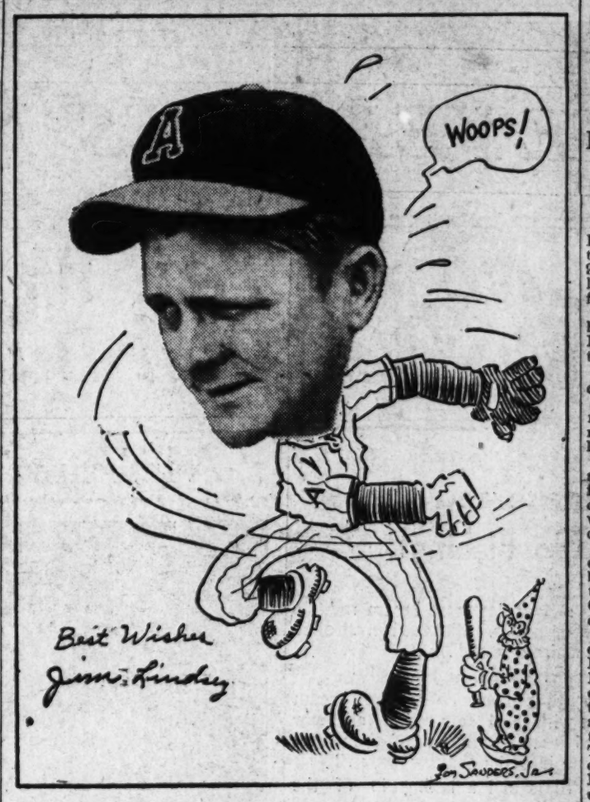

ALLISON UNSTEADY.

Quist did not play spectacularly. He soon learned that Allison was so unsteady that if he was fed the ball enough he would whip himself. Only on those occasions when he needed a certain game or a certain point did Quist show his full game. When he did it was more than satisfactory. Sure and steady from deep court, he is an agile court coverer and a wicked volleyer and smasher from up close.

In the fourth set Allison went to pieces.

In the doubles match tomorrow Budge and his fellow Californian, Gene Mako, will oppose Crawford and Quist. The latter, Wimbledon champions, are favored. The series will end on Monday with singles matches between Allison and Crawford, and Budge and Quist.

Lindsey's Personality Chart

Save Cracker Autographs And Learn About Players

By Jack Troy.

Big Jim Lindsey, who is the sixth Cracker in the series of personality sketches, with accompanying autograph, would have been a great actor had he not decided on a baseball career, Elaine, The Constitution handwriting analyst, discovers.

But Elaine, with the aid of a crystal ball, too, was unable to discover why Lindsey is not pitched more often. But she adds, "the indications are that the better and more successful part of life lies ahead."

Lindsey is revealed as a person of the highest human qualities, having an ever-present desire to help others—he has always been a source of inspiration to rookie pitchers—and a lover of home life.

Billy Bayne, the only left-hander on the Cracker staff, will be presented Monday. Other daily sketches of Cracker players will follow.

Handwriting Analysis

If Jim Lindsey had not decided to become a baseball player he would have been an actor, and a good one at that. His signature shows marked dramatic talent. It shows the ability to sway the public or his audience. This perhaps accounts for his popularity with the fans as well as the other players. The players are never down in spirits when Jim Lindsey is around.

Jim is a right-handed pitcher for the Crackers. He has been in the big leagues, and though he is no youngster, he is a good pitcher yet, and while at the present there seems to be some inexplicable reason why he is not pitched more often, the indications are that the better and more successful part of life lies ahead. The close, conservative letter formation in this signature suggests the quality of tenacity, which is in itself a decided promise of success.

His signature indicates one possessed of a great amount of tact and the ability at all times to "get along" with people, because of natural, intuitive understanding of human nature and its problems. His writing speaks of a nature full of the highest human qualities and an ever-present readiness to help others wherever the means will allow, at the same time, one whose generosities are under the control of common sense and good judgment.

His writing shows enthusiasm, self-confidence and a love of home life. There is eloquence and the gift of expression.

—ELAINE.

Crackers

created a bit of news yesterday by going hitless.

Today it was Taft Wright. The moment after Atlanta tied it at one-all in the seventh, Taft stepped up and smacked a homer over the right wall.

As if that were not enough, Taft came up in the eighth with two men on and blasted out a four-bagger to deep center, the second of the season inside the Engel ball orchard.

Taft is the gent who had four teeth jerked by the dentist this morning.

McColl, Chase, Schmidt and Bayne will pitch tomorrow.

SINGTON WALKS.

The Lookouts crashed the scoring column in the second. Sington led with a walk. Wright singled him to second. Thomas tried to catch Sington off second and threw the ball away, Sington taking third. Mihalic shot a one-bagger into center, scoring Sington and scooting Wright to third. Thomas then bore down to whiff Marion and Holbrook. A double steal failed, with Wright thrown out at the plate by Chatham.

The Crackers all but tied matters in the third when, with two away, Thomas and Hamel singled, and Hill cracked a bounder between second and first. Taylor was over on it like a cat to make a sensational one-hand catch, and toss Hamel out at second.

Atlanta got men on second and third in the fourth on two free tickets and a sacrifice, but Cohen caused Galvin to roll out easily, and Browne fouled out to Holbrook, amid loud and lusty cheers.

No one got to second until the seventh, when Lipscomb led with a double down the left line. Galvin flied to short center; then Browne dropped a single in short center, sending Lipscomb to third. Chatham's fly to center scored Lipscomb, with Browne taking second. That tied it. Thomas fanned.

But on the first pitch in the Lookout seventh, Wright slapped a mighty home run, high over the right wall, right down the foul line.

The game was iced by this same Wright in the eighth. Brown led with a double to left, which Harris got his hands on after a long run. Olivares sacrificed him to third. Taylor popped to short. Sington walked. Then Wright blasted his four-base inside-the-park round-tripper to center. It was a fairly close play at the plate.

PIRATES DEFEAT CHAMPION CUBS DOUBLE-HEADER

Phils Take Twin Bill From Bees; Cards Divide With Reds.

BROOKLYN, May 30.—(AP)—The Dodgers swept a double-header with the New York Giants today, winning 9 to 6 and 3 to 0 through tight Brooklyn pitching and weak hitting and fielding by the Giants.

Watson Clark took the opener for his third victory of the season, and Ed Brandt hurled a three-hit shutout in the nightcap.

A holiday crowd of 38,000 turned out.

Errors by Dick Bartell let in two runs in the opener and one in the nightcap. Hank Leiber and Sam Leslie hit homers in the first game.

Harry Gumbert's winning pitching streak of five was shattered in the first game when he was knocked out of the box in two innings. The Giants were unable to get a runner past second base in the second battle.

Late inning rallies of five runs in each game paved the way for Pittsburgh's Pirates to take both ends of the holiday double-header from the Cubs, 7 to 5, and 11 to 7, before an overflow crowd of 43,332.

Trailing 3-0 in the seventh inning of the opener, the Bucs pounded Bill Lee for two runs on singles by Suhr, Ed Hafey and Lucas, and Jensen's double. After L. Waner was intentionally passed to fill the bases, Lee and Larry French walked the next three batters, forcing in three runs. The Cubs tied it at 5-5 in their half of the seventh on singles by Jurges, Herman and O'Dea, but Bill Bruhaker's double with the bases loaded in the ninth cashed in Lavagetto's double and Vaughan's single for the winning runs.

Aided by Augie Galan's two-run homer in the first, the Cubs gave Relief Pitcher Clay Bryant a 7-to-4 lead going into the eighth inning of the second game. Vaughan's single, a pass, an error, and Hafey's double finished Bryan and the Bucs went on for five runs on singles by L. Waner, Jensen and Schulte off Lon Warneke.

Turning the tables with a barrage of home runs, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated Cincinnati, 7 to 4, in the nightcap of the Decoration Day double-header after the Reds, with a powerful 18-hit attack, had taken the first game, 10 to 1.

Twenty-five thousand fans, largest home crowd of the season, saw Jim Collins hit two home runs and Joe Medwick and Stuart Martin one each as the Cards recovered after their first game beating.

The even break enabled the Red Birds to increase their National league lead over the New York Giants, who lost twice to Brooklyn, to one and a half games.

After coming from behind to capture the opener by a 5-4 margin in 10 innings, the Phillies blasted two of the three Boston pitchers in the second game for a 9-6 triumph that swept the holiday twin bill before a paid crowd of 24,430.

John Lanning saved a 4-3 first-game lead until the ninth inning when the Phils tied it up on singles by Chuck Klein and Leo Norris and a base on balls before winning out in the tenth against Ben Cantwell.

Gene Moore had a sensational day at bat, despite the Bees' two-ply beating. He poled out two singles in addition to his first game homer and drove out a single, double and triple against Bowman in the nightcap, driving in five of the 10 runs the Bees made in the 19 innings of holiday play.

Lowly Smokies Aid Crackers by Beating Second-Place Vols, 6-1

With the Pros at Work---Modie's Little Helpmate---'Ain't It Gonna Rain No More?'---'Business Is Good!'--- Sinking a Cup

Staff photos by George Cornett.

It's not all play and no work in the life of the busy pro, as these random pictures of the city's golf teachers show. Top left, Jeff Modie, of James L. Key, is shown repairing a club in the shop. "Newt," a pet king snake, is all wrapped up in the proceedings. Do not fear, ladies, Newt does not have free range at Key. In the next picture, Billy Wilson, of Bobby Jones, is about to paraphrase the old ditty, "Ain't it gonna rain no more?" Wilson is inspecting the sprinkler. Pros do not sprinkle the greens, of course, but in view of such a drouth, some have taken an unusual interest in the watering system. In the third picture, George Sargent is shown taking a peek at the books. Sargent is not his books' keeper, but he does look over 'em occasionally. Business is good at East Lake. John Livingstone, young Forrest Hills pro, can sink a putt or a cup with equal facility. He's shown at top right sinking a cup for one of the summer greens.

PARKS TOURNEY OPENS NET PLAY

Local Players to Enter Southern Tournament at Memphis.

Atlanta tennis players will open a big season of tournaments here the week of June 29 as the annual public parks meet gets under way at Grant park. As usual the tournament will decide local entries in the National Public Parks matches, to be held later on in the summer.

Semi-final and final rounds of the meet will be run off at the Biltmore Tennis Club courts at Fourth and Juniper streets. Jack Mooney is in charge of the tournament.

Louis "Red" Enloe, present champion, will be ineligible to defend his title this year because of his membership in the Atlanta Tennis Club. Tommy Tumlin and Bud Lindsay will try to retain their doubles crown.

Meanwhile Atlanta tennis stars are playing in early season tournaments throughout the south. Several local players were in the Cotton States matches at Birmingham last week. Campbell Gillespie, Billy Gillespie and Russell Bobbitt will go to Memphis the early part of this week to play in the southern junior tournament beginning there Wednesday.

Malon Courts, city champion; Preston Chambers, Champ Reese and Bobbitt will play in the southern men's tournament starting Monday, June 8, at the Country Club in Memphis.

Marion Reese and Donald Elkins will manage the city and state meets this year. Matches, as usual, are scheduled at the Biltmore courts.

The new courts, located at North avenue and Juniper street, are in excellent condition, Reese says. The new telephone number at the club is Jackson 6863.

New Orleans Fails to Hold Early Lead; Pebbles Beat Barons, 2-1, in 12 Innings.

By the United Press.

Nashville, in second place in the Southern league, took a drubbing today as the Knoxville Smokies, in the cellar, won in a game at Knoxville, 6 to 1. Webb, Nashville fielder, homered in the seventh inning to make the Vols' only score. Beckman, Knoxville hurler, held the Vols to six hits.

New Orleans shot its wad in the first inning with four scores, and then failed to score again in the game at Memphis with the Chicks. Memphis won, 6 to 4. The Chicks scored three times in the first inning. Each team made eight hits.

Little Rock defeated Birmingham, 2-1, in 12 innings, in a pitchers' duel between Moore, of the Travelers, and Jones.

The loss broke Birmingham's six-game winning streak and was their third defeat in 17 games.

AMATEUR MEET TO BE JUNE 16

Southern Golf Tournament at Memphis Will Be Wide Open.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 30.—(AP)—The southern amateur golf tournament to be played over the Memphis Country Club course beginning June 16 appeared a wide-open affair today with the prospects of a brilliant field seeking the crown held by Bobby Reigel, of Richmond, Va.

Riegel fought his way to a surprise victory last year over top-ranking amateurs, and will have a hard path to follow to repeat his triumph.

Sam Perry, of Birmingham, was expected to lead a strong contingent from the Alabama city and loomed as one of the favorites. Low qualifier in the national open this year, Perry decided to enter the southern in which he was runner-up in 1935.

Johnny Thomes, former Alabama state champion; Hugh Morrow, Jefferson county champion, and Johnny Morrie, low qualifier in the southern last year, were expected to be among the Alabama entrants.

Nashville and Chattanooga loomed as strong contenders. The Nashvillians were expected to be headed by Jimmy Tupper, president of the State Amateur Golf Association, and to include Richard Hale Bill Tyne, Hamilton Wallace, Charlie Neal, Dick Nowlin, Harvey Page, Dick York and Charlie Potter among others.

Chattanooga will send Edwing Watkins, Ted and Darden Hampton, Polly Boyd, Wilbur Oakes Jr., Lew and W. G. Oehmig Jr. and Bully Mayer.

Tournament officials are angling to bring Freddie Haas, of New Orleans, the southeastern intercollegiate champ, to compete. The New Orleans group probably will be composed of Fred Lamprecht, Jake and Pat Lebourgeois, Vincent D'Antoni, Johnny Hill, Reb Bush, Bobby Moustead, Lolly Burt, Jesse Rainwater, Raymond Salmon, Fred Odom and LeRoy Ward.

The Crescent City golfers have won the big trophy in the southern amateur five times in the 35 years of the championships.

Tom Wright, Knoxville, runner-up in the Tennessee state tournament, will head a strong trio from east Tennessee, including Chub Smith, city champion, and Curtis Roberts, southern Appalachian winner. Others possibly will enter, also.

EAST POINTERS FACE A&A NINE

East Point and A. & A. Cleaners will meet today on the Grant Park diamond, in the feature game of City league weekly series as the winner will gain runner-up position as a reward, while the losers will be practically eliminated from first-half honors. Cook or Tanklersley will pitch for the Cleaners and will be opposed by Shumake of the suburbanites.

A new club, McCollough Brothers, taking the place of Norcross, will make its debut against the Miller Service club at Grant park. This move is expected to give the league a better balance as Roy Aiken, manager of the club, has secured some real players and the wholesalers are sure of forcing all opposition to play heads up ball all the time.

The leagle leading Warren club should strengthen their hold on the coveted position as the schedule sends them against the cellarites. The complete schedule and assignment of umpires is:

Warren Company vs. Atlanta Woolen at Warren field. Umpire, Street.

East Point vs. A. & A. Cleaners at Grant Park. Umpire, Anchors.

Pistol Shooting Season Is Begun

Pistol shooting, the latest sport sponsored by the Atlanta Rifle Club, opened its season Friday night at the indoor range of the club with an interesting shoot.

Scot Captures British Title With 145

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 30.—(AP)—The British amateur golf championship relinquished by Lawson Little, today went to 22-year-old Hector Thomson, first home-bred Scot to capture the crown in 11 years.

Thomson, the Scottish amateur champion, defeated James Ferrier, gigantic Australian amateur titleholder, two up, winning on the home green, where he hit a long second shot to within six inches of the cup.

After winning, Thomson said he plans to compete in the United States amateur championship at Garden City, L. I., September 14-19.

Playing through driving rain and hail today, Thomson fired a 74 at Ferrier in the morning and a 71 in the afternoon. Thomson was one down at the end of the first nine holes of the morning round, lost the 10th, where he three-putted from 21 feet, and went three down at the 12th when Ferrier hit a perfect pitch and got a birdie three.

Thomson fought back, however, and won the 14th, 15th and 16th to square the match and so they remained at the end of the first 18 holes.

Thomson's total of 145 for the 36 holes today was one better than St. Andrews' par.

Ferrier, who plans to leave for Australia in June, will stop in the United States for a short visit, he said.

FIRETHORN WINS FROM GRANVILLE

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—Walter Jeffords' Firethorn won his first major stake of the year today in a driving nose finish with William Woodward's Granville, capturing the $10,000 added Suburban handicap at Belmont park before a Memorial Day crowd of 25,000.

Granville, a three-year-old which probably will be one of the favorites for the Belmont stakes next month, held what appeared to be a commanding lead of three lengths at the head of the stretch, but he tired suddenly just at the end. Firethorn closed from far back to win the last jump.

Hal Price Headley's Whopper, closest in pursuit of Granville during most of the race, finished third, two lengths behind the leaders and one length in front of the Brookmeade stable's Good Goods. The victory was worth $12,125 to the owner of the victor. Firethorn's time for the mile and a quarter was 2:04 3-5. He carried 116 pounds, Granville 108 and Whopper 119.

It was a banner day for Jockey Harry Richards, who not only piloted Firethorn, but had the mount on Alvin Untermeyer's Scintillator, which won $6,500 by capturing the five-furlong juvenile stakes for two-year-olds.

Both victories were upsets, Firethorn being held at 6 to 1 and Scintillator at 12 to 1.

Tobacco Bowl Sought For North Carolina

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—A "Tobacco Bowl" post-season football game for North Carolina was proposed today by Senator Robert R. Reynolds of that state.

"California has its Rose Bowl, Florida its Orange and Louisiana its Sugar Bowl," he said. "Why not a Tobacco Bowl game for the state of North Carolina?"

Crackers Schedule Extra Night Games

Additional night games are being planned by the Crackers, starting Thursday night, June 11, when the Crackers tangle with those Lookouts under the lights at Ponce de Leon park.

It will be the official pennant-raising night. Ladies will not be admitted free on Thursdays.

Other extra night games are to be worked in during the season, according to announcement from Cracker headquarters.

BOBBY JONES' 66 TOPS EAST LAKE

Second Round of Club Championship To Open Today on No. 2 Course

By Roy White.

Bobby Jones led a field of 275 golfers over the two East Lake courses Saturday afternoon and carded a 66, five strokes under par on the No. 1 course. He played in a foursome with his father, Dick Garlington and Arch Martin. It was one of the largest crowds in recent weeks to trek over the sun-baked courses, where some of the longest drives of the year were recorded.

Bobby and his father paired together to beat Garlington and Martin, one up, and it was due to the five under par which decided the match, as Martin and Garlington were given handicaps. Colonel Jones carded a 78, with Martin shooting a 76 and Garlington having a 75.

Jones' card:

Par out	434	453	445	—36
Jones	434	444	434	—34
Par in	434	445	443	—35-36—71
Jones	433	444	343	—32-34—66

Jones was not alone in carding low scores, for Charlie Yates had a 71, which equalled par. Crawford Rainwater was one stroke back at 72, with Fred Owen and Cliff Eley carding 73's and T. A. Martin shooting one of his best games, a 70, one under par.

BLIND BOGEY.

E. R. Neely, J. J. McGeary, J. W. Lundeen, A. N. Anderson, W. P. Branch, Crawford Rainwater and H. S. Roberts divided first prize in the weekly blind bogey with 74's.

One stroke back of the leaders were A. G. Huston, J. Michael, S. E. Gill, O. T. Clark, J. J. McConneghey, George Rudolph, G. T. Freeman, J. H. Starr, R. I. Reed, George Fogg, J. W. Roach, Arthur Jones Jr., C. G. deNormandie and Wimberly Peters, in second place.

J. H. Layman won the booby prize of one golf ball.

L. R. Hunter's 66 Features First Round.

L. R. Hunter's 66, which defeated E. S. Humphreys, one up, featured the first round of the annual East Lake Club championship tournament.

Fred Owen and Tommy Barnes, the medalists had little trouble in advancing to the second round, while Scott Hudson Jr., the defending champion, found trouble in eliminating L. A. Dean, one up.

The second round will open today and continue through next Saturday afternoon. Play in the championship flight will continue from scratch, while handicaps will apply in all other flights.

THE RESULTS:

West Enders Play Without Arguing.

A West End foursome surprised itself and fellow players Saturday in completing two matches in the championship flight of the annual club championship tournament. Always arguing and contesting numerous shots in former play, the foursome wagered that two matches could be played simultaneously and no fuss raised. The wager was won and the match

Pros Do Other Things Than Tutor Players

Or Play the G-r-r-r-rand Old Game; A Few Glimpses Behind the Scenes.

By Jack Troy.

"Look at the pretty birdie," said George Cornett, The Constitution photographer, and Jeff Modie's pet king snake immediately perked up.

But it was just a photographer's trick. Newt, the king snake—Jeff Modie's playful little help-mate—posed eagerly, but in vain.

Photographer Cornett picked out golf clubs at random and paid them a visit to see what the busy pros were doing besides teaching and playing golf. You have just seen what he discovered.

He found Jeff Modie repairing a golf club. Newt was all wrapped up in the proceedings. Or at least, Newt was convincingly wrapped around the club.

Jeff Modie was particularly anxious for the lady customers to know that Newt, although perfectly harmless, does not have free range at Key. He is brought out only on special occasions.

One finds a strange friendship at James L. Key. It is the friendship of Newt, the king snake, for a small mouse, not named Mickey, but Oscar.

King snakes eat rodents. But Newt will not molest Oscar. And Oscar is not afraid of Newt. It is a very strange friendship, indeed.

It may be that Newt's attitude was promoted by the recent treatment at the hands of a white rat. The rodent gave the reptile a good going over, reversing the usual order.

The photographic tour continued on to East Lake. George Sargent was found inspecting the files and looking over the books.

George Sargent is not his brother's keeper, or a bookkeeper, for that matter, but he occasionally checks the figures. He finds business is good.

The unusually dry weather of past weeks has caused no end of concern at all the clubs. Over at Bobby Jones, Billy Wilson checked up on the watering system. He found everything okay, but no rain in sight.

Paraphrasing the old song, Billy Wilson is asking "Ain't it gonna rain no more?" The popular Jones professional is all set for a busy summer, rain or not.

Jumping about, here and there, Photographer Cornett, busy as the honey bee, found John Livingstone, young son of Jimmy, in the act of sinking a new golf hole.

Cornett got no satisfaction from the question he put to John. That is, what do pros do with the old golf holes? Cornett likely wonders also what happens to the holes in doughnuts.

Anyway, John Livingstone sinks golf holes quite as expertly as he does putts.

Thus ends the series for this week. Other peeks into the other side of a pro's professional life will be continued next week.

Atlanta has a monopoly on good professionals.

'Y' Handball Addicts Begin Play Monday

Handball, in its various forms, is without doubt the fastest game known to mankind. Beginning Monday the crack handball speed kinds of the Y. M. C. A. enter hostilities to determine their champion in the second and third flights. The first or championship flight will be played in September. The winner of the second flight will be eligible to enter the championship flight this year.

All matches must be played on schedule. Three days are given to each match. The best two out of three games constitute a match.

fresh-water and salt-water fishing including the famous shad in season.

At the coastal fishing spots tarpon, red fish, blue fish and all the great variety of surf and deep-sea fishing are available.

In addition to the streams a great number of lakes provide lake trout and a wide variety of fish.

The famous "Black water" country of rivers such as the Ohoopee, Altamaha, Ogeechee, St. Mary's and Saltilla offer unsurpassed bass fishing.

TROUT FISHING.

Streams in the Lake Burton section such as Moccasin and Wildcat creeks have produced fine trout fishing. The streams of the game refuge in north Georgia are open to the public for a period of 30 days from May 15 to June 15.

These streams are principally the Noontootly and Rock creek and their contributing streams.

The Crisp county power dam has opened a fine fishing spot. The lake is open to the public. The dam has created back waters in four counties and the lake is well-stocked with bream and bass. The lake is accessible from Cordele, which city is about 160 miles from Atlanta.

Fishing in the north Georgia lakes will be permitted beginning tomorrow. These lakes were closed during the closed period and have been restocked.

BASKETS, TRAPS.

Special efforts are being made to free Jackson's lake, near Jackson, Ga., of baskets and traps so that it will be available for fishermen near that section. Commissioner Cravy has placed a special deputy, H. S. Robinson, at the lake.

The commissioner states no results may be expected this year from the floating nests placed in lakes this spring. But that by next year the new project, which resulted in billions of fish being hatched in Georgia's lakes, will be of catchable size. Fish used 95 per cent of the floating spawning nests placed in lakes this year.

It looks like a great season. And you may, if you just can't wait, drop in a line at one second, or less, past midnight tonight.

Fishing Season Opens Monday.

The legal fishing season will begin Monday, June 1, according to an announcement made by Commissioner Zack D. Cravey.

Cravey states that the closed season extends to June 1, which will be midnight Sunday night.

In discussing the past closed season the commissioner states that although illegal fishing was not entirely discontinued, better co-operation was experienced than ever before.

"Conserve our fish. Don't catch more than you need; throw the little ones back and report the dynamiters and seiners to me" is Cravey's plea for better fishing.

Tech, California Tilt Gets Conference O. K.

Georgia Tech's athletic association yesterday received word from Dr. John Tigert, president of the Southeastern conference, that sanction had been granted for the California-Tech game to be played in Atlanta at Grant field in December of this year.

Announcement that negotiations were on for the game and that it likely would be played, were made in The Constitution two months ago, at the time of the announcement of the signing of a two-year contract with Notre Dame, effective with the fall of 1938, at which time the Irish eleven will play in Atlanta. Tech goes to California for the second game of that series in 1937. The Jackets formerly had contracts with both teams. Tech defeated the California team in the Rose Bowl on January 1, 1929. And in 1928 defeated Notre Dame in Atlanta.

Pitcher in the Pulpit---And Ready for a Game

Reuben Tucker, who pitches for American Can Company, is an ordained minister. Tucker has his own church, Rocky Creek Baptist church, at McDonough. He holds services there twice monthly. Tucker is a regular hurler on the Can company team and last year was in professional baseball. He pitched four exhibitions for Jackson, in the East Dixie league, winning two. Later he was with Americus, in the Georgia-Florida league. He won four games in eight starts. For American Can this year, he has won one and lost none. He has relieved in two games and played outfield in another. The picture above shows Tucker conducting a service at Western Heights Baptist church, where he occasionally supplies. All ministers should have some rereation, or sport, like baseball or golf, to keep them physically fit, Tucker believes.

Minister Finds Time For Baseball Also

Reuben Tucker, American Can Hurler, Chose Pulpit But Still Loves National Pastime.

By Jack Troy.

Every preacher should have some form of recreation, or sport, declares Reuben Tucker, ordained minister and a baseball pitcher for American Can Company.

"There are two reasons," Tucker declared recently just before conducting a service at Western Heights Baptist chnrch. "A preacher should keep physically fit, particularly for revivals. The other reason is that he can become closer to his fellow men and have more of an influence on them."

Tucker, whose regular church is the Rocky Creek Baptist church at McDonough, played professional baseball part of last year. He was with Jackson, in the East Dixie league, and with Americus, in the Georgia-Florida league.

Baseball is his favorite sport. He thinks it is the greatest sport of them all. He has been playing the game since he was knee high to a grasshopper, as the saying goes.

Tucker has been in the ministry only since the latter part of last summer. He studied theology at Furman. He did not play any sports for the Purple Hurricane.

"After leaving Furman," Tucker said, "I resisted the call to preach and entered professional baseball. I suddenly realized I was doing the wrong thing. There is nothing wrong with professional baseball, understand. But I felt I should follow my original calling. Which I am now doing.

NOT QUIT GAME.

"In quitting professional baseball, I knew I would not quit the game itself. And so I managed to get a job pitching for an amateur team. I will play the game as long as I can. It is a sport any preacher should be glad to recommend to the masses. It, is, as ever, the great American sport."

Tucker feels that he accomplished two purposes in playing baseball. "Fellow associates are apt to respect one who is endeavoring to follow the right road. One gets closer to them.

"I must answer 'No' to the question of Sunday baseball," Tucker added. "But I do not see any harmful effects from the playing of the game on the Sabbath day."

Tucker thinks people might possibly be doing much worse things.

Golf is another fine sport for preachers, Tucker thinks. The recreation would benefit them physically. Then, too, duffers and others might be less inclined to be so aggressive of their feelings with a minister of the gospel batting the offending pellet around the course, according to Tucker.

SUNDAY BASEBALL.

A minister might even go to a Sunday baseball game without drawing undue criticism.

For did not Jesus eat with a Philistine?

He was criticized for it. But in reply He said, in effect, that it was not for the pleasure of the company, but for the good that He might do.

M'CORMICK GAINS IN BAT CONTEST

Durham Slugger Is Tied With Witek for Piedmont Lead.

Continuing his hitting streak, of one or more safe blows to 19 consecutive games, Frank McCormick, Durham first baseman, raised his average 28 points to a mark of .406 which ties him with Witek, of Norfolk, last week's leader in the Piedmont league, who suffered a 49-point drop. Gallagher, of Norfolk, dropped 16 points and holds second place, with a .405 mark. Petoskey, of Duram, .366, and Maggert, of Rocky Mount, with .357, hold third and fourth places, respectively, according to figures released by the Howe News Bureau.

Christoff, of Rocky Mount, added two home runs to his total and leads with 11, with Bryan, of Norfolk, trailing with nine.

Petoskey, of Duham, failed to steal a base during the week, but holds the lead with 10.

Norfolk dropped nine points but retained the team batting lead with a .308 mark, as Rocky Mount climbed into the fielding lead at .968, one point ahead of Norfolk, last week's leader.

Hiram Bithorn, Norfolk hurler, lost his first game of the season Monday to Durham and has seven wins and one defeat to lead the hurlers. Beggs, of Norfolk, won two games and has six wins and one loss for second place. Sheetx, Rocky Mount, has four wins and no defeats.

Tubby whipped out a pistol and shot the umpire.

G. Garner was the hitting star for the winners with three hits out of five tries, two of them doubles. Bunching of hits won the game for Exposition, but both teams were good in the field.

Triple Champ To Race Again In 'Iron Derby'

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—(AP)—Champion of all speedway champions, Louis Meyer, just 32 years old and the only three-time winner in the history of the 500-mile Indianapolis marathons, said today as he sat in the winner's enclosure:

"Tell everyone for me that I am not going to quit just because I won for the third time. I am not through with racing. Racing is what I like most. I am going to be back in there next year to win. Just wait and see."

The average race driver considers his competitive career complete if he once gets the checkered flag at the speedway. Louis also won in 1928 and 1933, but he described today's grind, in which he set new speed mark, as the most fun.

"This was the most marvelous race in which I've ever driven, and believe me I was happier to get the flag than ever before," he said.

"I had darned tough luck before this race, as you know. I had motor trouble and breakdowns galore. If you don't believe I worked to win this race, you should have been in my garage for the last month.

"I'm not kiddin' you. I worked night and day to get the car in shape. But she sure ran when I got her fixed.

"I didn't figure I had won the race until I got the checkered flag. That was on account of the gasoline. Gasoline was my biggest worry. I was sure of the car, but the gas—I held my breath.

"But you know, I had plenty of gas left. I could have gone plenty of miles farther."

Grimy with dirt as he drove off the track, Louis' first request was for a bottle of milk.

cannot win."

Meyer said he would celebrate his triple victory with a "private party" tonight—"just my wife and my friends who have been 'with me' all along."

Playing-Manager Idea Is on Wane in Majors

Species Will Be Extinct if Pilots Continue To Take to Bench.

(Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.)

NEW YORK, May 30.—(UP)—The greatest player-manager era in modern major league baseball is on the wane, and by next season the game is virtually certain to be given over largely to bench pilots.

Since 1932, the player-manager has had a major role on the big time, winning seven of the last eight major league pennants. The last bench mentor to grab a flag was Marse Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, in 1932.

During that period the number of performing skippers increased until at the opening of the current season the rosters showed that nine of the 16 clubs had player-managers. Unfortunately most of the nine are old men—as far as active participation in the game is concerned. Only Joe Cronin, of the Boston Red Sox, is under 30. And injuries have kept $20,000 Joe on the bench a large portion of last season, and most of this.

Of the other eight leaders, only three have been playing during the last week or so. They are Jimmy Wilson, catcher of the Phillies; Mickey Cochrane, catcher of the Tigers, and Jimmy Dykes, 39-year-old third baseman of the White Sox. Dykes is the dean of American League players, and he continues to hold down the third sack only because he can find no one to relieve him satisfactorily.

The others have taken to the bench: Bill Terry, first baseman of the Giants; Charlie Grimm, first baseman of the Cubs; Pie Traynor, third baseman of the Pirates; Frankie Frisch, second baseman of the Cardinals, and Rogers Hornsby, infielder of the Browns.

Frisch and Terry may get back into the game later this season, if the going gets rough or if their substitutes weaken. But if their subs and their clubs continue at the present pace, Frankie and Bill may remain on the sidelines. Young Stu Martin is holding down Frankie's job on the second sack with the Cards, and Sambo Leslie is performing at first with the Giants. But it's a good bet that neither Frisch nor Terry will play next year.

Concerning Charlie Grimm, the well known banjo player and first baseman, of the Cubs—it is doubtful if he will return to the game at any time. Charlie is 37, and young Phil Cavaretta is doing a good job at Charlie's post. Charlie wished to quit play last season.

With the Pirates, the ailing Pie Traynor, one of the greatest third basemen the game ever knew, has found a sensational replacement in youthful Bill Brubaker. And the gracious Pie is pleased no end to be able to sit contentedly on the bench.

Rogers Hornsby, of the Browns, apparently has reached the end of the trail as a player. He is 40 and quite satisfied to direct from the dugout, although he may jump into the lineup now and then as a pinch hitter.

And what are the reactions of these player-managers, when they find themselves forced to do their master-minding from the duckboards? We asked Memphis Bill Terry about this today. The businessman-choir singer from Tennessee indicated that any dyed-in-the-wool player would rather continue in the game and direct from the field, if the old body only would permit it.

"You worry more managing a team from the dugout than from the field," Terry said. "When you're out there playing, I believe you can manage just as well as when on the bench, but you haven't got time to be fearful of every play. When you sit there on the bench, all you have to do is worry what every opposing batsman will pull off—what your infielders and outfielders will do if such and such happens—and so forth. No, you're not under more pressure on the bench. I don't call that pressure. It's just plain worry. The manager who is out on the field playing is under more actual pressure, but he isn't worried."

Terry emphasized that he still would be out on first base if his knees hadn't failed him. The continuous strain of play at the busy corner developed water on both knees—although he was batting as good as at any time in his career.

Baseball's BIG SIX

By the Associated Press.

A pair of rookie sluggers, Stuart Martin, of the Cardinals, and the Yankees' Joe Di Maggio, boosted themselves into the major leagues' "Big Six" set of sluggers in the Memorial Day double-headers. Di Maggio collected six hits in eight trips to the plate, to increase his average eight points to .383 and take second place in the American league. Martin, hitting safely four times in eight at-bats, advanced 13 points to .370 for the second spot in the National league. Billy Sullivan, Cleveland catcher and American league leader, was the only other member of the Big Six to raise his average during the day, getting two hits in four times up.

O'Shocker Faces Brown; Roche, Fraley To Return

Dorv Roche and Pat Fraley, ex-masked marvel from California, who staged what is apt to become a historic brawl in Atlanta's wrestling history at the ball park Wednesday night, have been rematched as opponents in the headline bout on Matchmaker Frank Speer's next card in the same ring this Wednesday, it was announced Saturday. Many fans, as well as members of the boxing commission, expressed a desire to see these two in a return bout. Speer stated, so they were signed to battle it out over the 90-minute route.

A jam-up semi-final, one-hour limit, has also been arranged, with Orville Brown, Atlanta's favorite matman, taking on the veteran Pat O'Shocker. The Irishman from Salt Lake, despite his many years in the game, is still a comparatively young man as wrestlers go, and able to make things interesting for any of the top-notchers. Brown certainly comes under that classification, especially after his two great draw battles with Danno O'Mahony here recently.

Frank Brown, a clean-cut youngster who made a hit with the fans in his debut here last week, again appears in the opener, this time against Abe Gold, a huge Hebrew who comes here recommended as one of the toughest eggs in the basket. This bout will be limited to 30 minutes' duration.

Every fan who jumped up in his seat and yelled as Roche, incensed by Fraley's repeated fouling last week, rode into a brainstorm and lashed about him with a soft drink bottle and a very capable fist until Fraley, Referee Ruff and Matchmaker Speer were all flat on the mat, will want to witness the coming return bout. Roche was awarded the previous match on a foul, but Fraley—a tough, husky youngster—claims it was the bottle which did for him (as it has for many another good man), and that he will carry the fight to Roche so strenuously this time the latter won't be able to get hold of any blunt instruments to save him.

All grandsand seats and unreserved box seats have been reduced to 55 cents, it has been announced.

NEW CHAMPIONS SEEN FOR NEXT BOWLING GRIND

Young Women, Men Stars Busy Correcting Their Duckpin Errors.

There is a strong possibility that the next bowling season will produce some new bowling champions! This statement is based on the fact that a number of bowlers are taking their duckpin fling this summer and are endeavoring to find the trouble with their delivery, if any, as they practice during the warmer days and evenings.

This is particularly true of young men from Georgia Tech and Emory University who may be seen at the alleys any night during the week bowling at single pins, various spare breaks and at all the pins as they endeavor to improve their games. And the young women are not letting the boys get a jump on them by any means for they are just as much in prominence along the pin alleys as the males.

PLAYERS IMPROVING.

That the practice is improving the games of these players is a certainty and there is little doubt but that some of the "old timers" will have to step aside and let some of these youngsters occupy the vacated seats on some of the top ranking pin berths in Atlanta next year if they continue to improve.

But the improvement is not restricted to the younger set alone. There are a number of new bowlers, men and women, who have taken to bowling for the first time in their lives and find it a great means of recreation. However, as most sports games do, bowling soon gets a "grip" on the player and they are then endeavoring to build up a better game.

CAN EXPERIMENT.

In the summer the bowler, whether he is an experienced pinman or a novice, has an opportunity to experiment and find just what he is doing that is wrong or what he is failing to do that is right. During the regular bowling season he would be reluctant to do this for fear that it might impair the chances of his team staying in the first division. But with no great odds at stake during the warmer months, he (or she) can bowl and feel free to try a new type of delivery to see if they can master it after practice, in an endeavor to build up a better game. That is exactly what is taking place in many cases now, and most of these players have found a free swinging follow-through delivery that, with practice, will take them places on the bowling drives.

Two new world's records were hung up on the Atlanta alleys last season as a number of local records were smashed; an Atlanta five-man team finished "in the money" for the first time in National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament, last season.

Next season should be the best bowling season that Atlanta bowlers and sports fans have had . . . it will produce new top ranking stars.

Bobbitt Gains Finals in 3 Classes

Sanford, second seeded player from Mobile, and Russell Bobbitt, seventh seeded, of Atlanta, stroked their way into the final round of the Cotton States tennis championship here today. Sanford defeated Vernon Marcum, of Lakeland, Fla., 6-2, 6-1, 10-12, 6-3, and Bobbitf downed Harvey Terrell, of Birmingham, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2, 12-10.

Mooney and Bobbitt took Felder Wright, of Birmingham, and Terrell, 6-3, 6-1, 6-1, and Sanford and Lake won from Marcum and Robert Little, of Birmingham, 6-4, 6-0, 3-6, 6-4.

All final matches except the junior singles, which will bring Bobbitt against Eugene McCain, of Birmingham, will be played tomorrow. The junior singles final has been postponed indefinitely.

FOOD AND FEED IMPORTS

The average citizen of the United States has advanced from boyhood to manhood imbued with the general idea that the nation was self-sustaining in the matter of the principal items of food and feed. This idea was further enhanced by the enforced curtailment of agricultural endeavor in the production of various farm crops, and we were led to believe that we were not only self-sustaining, but were producing surpluses to such an extent that they could not be absorbed by the country at reasonable prices.

Statistics released by the United States Chamber of Commerce disclose such a startling increase in the importation of a few of the principal articles of food and feed, during the period of the curtailment of the home production, that they are here presented:

Corn	347,627 bu.	43,242,296 bu.
Wheat	10,026,320 bu.	27,438,870 bu.
Hay	13,858 tons	67,171 tons
Soy beans	36,568,700 lbs.	107,463,044 lbs.
Cottonseed (cake, meal)	1,058,598 lbs.	59,743,572 lbs.
Butter	1,052,598 lbs.	22,674,642 lbs.
Hogs	28,875 lbs.	3,414,317 lbs.
Fresh pork	1,657,500 lbs.	3,922,600 lbs.
Canned meats	24,638,261 lbs.	76,653,242 lbs.

The theory underlying the curtailment of production of hogs, corn, wheat, cattle, etc., was to increase the price of these articles, but as the American farmer reduced his acreages of growing crops, and the government bought and destroyed hogs and cattle, these products were imported from foreign lands and sold in competition with our own farmers.

The increases in importations at a time when the nation had a surplus capacity to produce all these products could not help having an influence on the ability of the American farmer to market his own products, and are without doubt a contributing factor in American farm employment today.

Retirement of submarginal and worn-out land from crop production to forage and forest use is wise; likewise soil erosion and soil betterment projects merit all the encouragement that may be offered. Such things make for practical advancement in agriculture; but "planned production," that reduces our production to the point where we cease to be self-sustaining, and are forced to import huge quantities of food and feed which we can raise at home, is an impractical theory that failed utterly when put into practice.

The figures prove it!

"WITH CLEAN HANDS"

The South-wide Consumers' Association has been conducting a relentless campaign against the Wisconsin state tax of five cents a pound on oleomargarine, and the efforts to secure an act of congress levying a similar federal tax and agitation for oleomargarine tax laws in New York, New Jersey and Ohio.

The Constitution has approved this campaign because it believes that the Wisconsin state tax and those proposed are illegal and unconstitutional, just as we believe likewise in the case of the Georgia tax of 10 cents a pound, imposed by act of the general assembly in 1935, despite an opinion rendered February 25, 1935, by Attorney General Yeomans declaring the act unconstitutional, discriminatory and void.

In a test case (Coy vs. Linder) in the Jeff Davis county superior court this spring, Judge Gordon Knox said: "The court entertains serious doubts as to the constitutionality of this act," and it is now a matter for a higher court to decide upon that point.

On the opposite page are two communications from L. H. Coy, plaintiff in the above-mentioned case, one to The Constitution and the other an open letter to officers of the South-wide Consumers' Association, in which he urges that the cottonseed oil producers "come into the court of public opinion with clean hands, and remove discriminations at home, before they protest discriminations abroad."

So far as the constitutionality of the Georgia tax law is concerned the ultimate decision must come from the higher court.

This state, however, is certainly put in a contradictory position in protesting against the Wisconsin tax while a worse tax law is in force in our own state.

If the law is declared unconstitutional, then "with clean hands" we can protest the discriminatory tax law of Wisconsin—leveled as it is against our product.

WELCOME TO THE QUEEN

Tomorrow the new 81,000-ton gigantic Atlantic passenger liner Queen Mary will steam into New York harbor at the end of her maiden voyage, and be led to her berth by the old paddle-wheeler Britannia, also a Cunarder, which inaugurated regular mail steamship service 96 years ago—a picturesque and sentimental termination of the career of a gallant vessel that was queen of the Atlantic nearly a century ago—the old queen making obeisance to the new.

Over 250,000 loyal Britishers crowded into Southampton Wednesday to participate in the ceremonies attendant upon sailing of the Queen Mary, and tomorrow hundreds of boats of every description will greet her outside the New York harbor and act as escort to her pier, where thousands will assemble to cheer her arrival and greet the 2,500 passengers who were fortunate in securing reservation for her first trip to America.

Plans for the construction of the Queen Mary have been under way for some ten years, the program laid out being for the construction of the most magnificent and superlative passenger liner that the minds of master designers could contrive.

Since the advent of the old paddle-wheeler Britannia nearly a century ago, there have been many "queens of the sea" launched and put into regular service by rival Atlantic steamship lines, but never in history has there been such a wide wave of enthusiasm as over the advent of the Queen Mary. Not only in England, but throughout the United States, word of the Queen Mary's magnificence has reached around the continent.

So all America joins in repoicing with their British cousins in the triumphant maiden tour of the Queen Mary.

Francis W. Clarke, of the staff of The Constitution, was sent by The Constitution to make the maiden voyage trip, the company having asked the editor of The Constitution to designate a representative for the trip. The articles of Mr. Clarke, who is a commentator of well-known ability, are appearing in The Constitution, describing the voyage and the superlative appointments of the Queen Mary.

POETS COMING TO THEIR OWN

The art of poetry is in process of organization. Poets and versifiers and rhymesters are regimenting themselves into platoons and companies and brigades. They are electing chairmen and vice chairmen and recording secretaries. They are conducting meetings and debating the problems and the welfare of the craft. They are forming a metrical army and marshaling the sonnets, the odes, the madrigals and roundelays.

The National Poetry Council under the leadership of Edwin Markham, with membership in every state and with representatives in practically every city, town, hamlet and crossroads, has announced the Congress of American Poets, to be held in New York from June 14 to October 12. An agenda of subjects for discussion reveals a catholic interest undreamed of by the lay world, those of us who have never struggled with iambics nor tamed the distich.

And why not? Surely, with every other branch of human activity, legal or illegal, material or artistic, commercial or altruistic, organizing, the poets of the nation may themselves try the truth of a line written by one of their own craft, "In union there is strength."

It is probable that organization of the poets will leave no human activity unformulated into committees and commissions. They are, surely, the last distinct group to answer the call of the presiding officer's gavel.

Should all the poets and would-be poets of the nation attend the congress in New York, that city would have difficulty in providing living accomodations. There is not a cross roads postoffice so poor or small it does not boast at least one inhabitant touched with the fairy wand of poesy. There is, probably, no business organization, however cold-blooded and utilitarian its purpose, which does not have some members who, perhaps in the secrecy of their hearts, do not dream in rhythm and long for the genius of a Shakespeare or a Tennyson.

Let us hope the congress of the American poets may achieve something very definite in our lives. Let us wish them utmost success. Introduction of more of the poets' dreams into the affairs of man would do much to make more perfect the life of humanity on earth, would do much to bring about the Olympian realization of heaven on earth.

For it is from the dreams of the poets that ideals spring and it is by the ultimate realization of imagined idealism that the world steps forward to that coming age of triumph when peace shall reign over all the earth and God's triune of progress shall mount from Faith to Hope and ultimately to the greatest of all three, Love.

There can be no evil in a soul attuned to real poetry of word, of thought and of dream.

May the poets prosper and may their congress prove triumphantly successful.

DRIVERS' LICENSE

The long list of traffic violation convictions in the recorder's court published almost daily in The Constitution gives a faint idea of the number of violations which occur, but these lists do not indicate the number of offenders not apprehended.

If the state had a drivers' license law, and the most serious offenders in that list lost their permits to drive for a period of time, it would act as a preventive to wildcat drivers.

Through April 30 the highway safety division of North Carolina had revoked 3,000 drivers' licenses since the statute went into effect November 1, 1935, and more than 90 per cent of these were on account of drunken driving.

In South Carolina more than 500 licenses have been revoked this year, bringing the total number of revocations since 1930 to nearly 7,000.

Georgia is one of the few states that has no license law, despite the fact that the matter has been presented to the general assembly more than once. As a result, anyone may drive a car if physically able to crawl under the steering wheel and step on the starter.

Strict license requirements would eliminate many of the unfit at the start, then serious or continued infractions of traffic regulations would act to eliminate them entirely, or impress them with the necessity of careful driving, if they desired the privilege of operating a car.

HERE, AND OVER THERE!

In one of the New England states, where a much-advertised religious cult has gained a large number of adherents, school authorities are encountering considerable trouble owing to the fact that children of parents who have become members of this sect refuse to salute the United States flag. In the same section several school teachers and instructors in some of the higher institutions of learning have rebelled at taking an oath of allegiance to the United States, and taken the matter into the courts.

All such teachers should be regarded as unfit for teaching, and the children of any parent who instructed them to refuse to salute the American flag, whether from religious or any other reason, should be barred from the benefits of the free public schools.

A part of the creed of this religious sect, it is claimed, condemns the flag as an emanation of the devil, and the children are instructed by parents and their mentors to refuse the salute as a part of their religious right. Children and parents have been haled into court, so it would appear that again the religious freedom granted by the constitution is invoked to teach insubordination to that very form of government which protects those who would wreck our liberties.

In Germany this religious sect would last just long enough for the nazi dictator of propaganda to lay hands upon its mahatma, or whatever his sectarian title may be; the disciples of this strange cult would suddenly have a change of mind, with prison staring them in the face, and the little children would as quickly evince a desire to salute the national emblem whenever and as often as required—and there is a reason.

We learn that before starting each class in a German classroom the teacher must give the regulation nazi salute and cry "Heil Hitler!" whereupon the children must then follow suit.

In view of what has happened to Jews, Catholics and Masons during the past year in naziland, picture what would happen if some German child should refuse to give the salute, saying: "It is against my religious principles!"

Such instances as that brought about in the United States by this religious sect, and the fight made by teachers in schools and colleges against taking an oath of allegiance to the flag and constitution of the United States, naturally provokes the query as to whether the liberty of speech and action we allow our citizens and aliens is not at times confused with license to say and do what, in their disordered minds, amounts to a species of treason.

Just why a person, or organization of individuals, who are residents and beneficiaries of a country which affords them such advantages of individual achievement and freedom, should refuse such a slight tribute as to salute the country's national emblem, or decline to take an oath of allegiance to its constitution, surpasses the understanding of loyal citizens.

Children who have the benefits of our free educational system should be taught to obey its rules and regulations, and by practice and precept the highest regard for the nation's flag and constitution, instead of being instructed by parents to be disobedient and encouraged in subversive activities by the unpatriotic attitude of educational instructors.

Such instructors should be barred from all schools and colleges, and if parents desire their children brought up to follow in the paths outlined in the creed of some freak religion they should be denied access to the public schools, where their disobedience and flaunting of control contaminates other children, disrupts discipline and destroys the fundamentals of the free school system.

MORGAN HALL

The naming of Morgan Hall, the new industrial arts building of the Georgia State Industrial College at Savannah, in honor of Samuel Hill Morgan, one of the regents of the University System of Georgia, is a worthy tribute to this distinguished Georgian.

Morgan Hall will be dedicated Wednesday, June 3, with appropriate ceremonies.

The inclusion of this hall in the building program of the university is largely due to the efforts of Regent Morgan, who has given lavishly of his time, other than his duty as regent required, to the construction of this building.

The problem of negro education is becoming more acute than ever in the light of a recent decision of the United States supreme court which places the University of Maryland in an embarrassing situation as regards the entrance of negroes, since no other similar educational opportunities are offered them in that state.

Georgia has been more farsighted than other states in making reasonable provision for negro education, and the Georgia State Industrial College at Savannah is an outstanding evidence of provision made by Georgia to this end. Under the direction of President Hubert, this college is doing excellent work, and it is entitled to, and is receiving, the hearty support, not only of the people of Savannah and the surrounding territory, but of the state generally.

Living in the vicinity of Savannah, Regent Morgan has had close opportunity to observe the good work of the college and has rendered valuable aid in its development, in appreciation of which the new building is given his name.

COTTON WEEK

The six days of June 1 to 6 have been designated as "Cotton Week" by leaders of the textile industry, during which period various methods will be employed to direct attention of the nation to the important part the south's fleecy staple assumes in the industrial affairs of the country.

"Cotton Week" activities have a special appeal to the south, for it is here the staple is grown, and is our greatest cash crop, bringing wealth to growers and work for a multitude of farm laborers.

Southern cotton mills consume more than 84 per cent of the total for the country, an optimistic indication of improving business in the southern states, because textile mills lead all industries in the number of wage earners employed, with 886,979 employes, and because these mills spend annually more than $500,000,000, the great bulk of it in the south, for new construction, machinery, equipment and maintenance supplies, not including raw materials.

The textile business is usually thought of as consisting of cotton textiles, wool, silk and rayon, but it is important to realize that of all spindles and looms in the country, over 80 per cent are used for cotton. Taking the industry as a whole, over 70 per cent of the total textile fiber used by mills in the United States is consumed by southern mills.

The findings of a special survey committee just made public by the Department of Commerce disclose that cotton mill activity is growing daily and world consumption of cotton textiles is increasing at a record-breaking rate. Cotton material as dress fabrics is becoming increasingly popular, even some of the famous fashion experts of Paris having fashioned artistic creations that have caught the fancy of the trade.

Summing up, the south has an especial interest in the success of "Cotton Week"—it grows all of the material produced in the United States and its mills use 84 per cent of that manufactured into fabrics of various kinds in this country. It means more wealth for our cotton growers and steady work at good wages for workers in the textile industry. The benefits spread still farther—work at good wages for those who make cotton mill equipment and erect new buildings. The wages thus received are poured back into general trade to the benefit of still others.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

He's tired and worn, the old candy man,
As he plods down the dull, weary route,
His footsteps are slow, his face lined and wan,
His story is almost played out.

He limps through the office, a ghost of the past,
He whispers, "Fine apples, today;"
He watches the wheels of the world, spinning fast,
While, slowly, his life ebbs away.

We buy of his wares and toss him a dime,
In the pride of our careless youth,
We call him a pest, a waster of time,
A wheezy old nuisance, forsooth.

He smiles at our frowns, remembr'ing the day
When he, too, was eager and strong,
When hope flared so high, when labor was play,
When life was a joke, love a song.

"Fruit, candies or gum—" his quavering voice
Comes, haunting, from out of the past;
He whispers, "Young man, the time to rejoice
Is today, for the grave comes, so fast."

I think, someday soon, he'll take his long rest,
His basket laid, empty, away;
I hope that he'll find a home, heaven blest,
Where youth lives, forever and aye.

Thank The Constitution For Animated Cartoons.

There is a strong possibility that, if it hadn't been for The Constitution and a former city editor, Sidney Ormond, there would never have been any animated cartoons on the screen. Meaning no Mickey Mouse, no Donald Duck, no Silly Symphonies, no Three Little Pigs and the Big, Bad Wolf and none of the other friends of the animated screen, those little drawn creations who so often provide the finest part of your movie entertainment.

Here's the story:

A Cartoonist Visited the Office.

'Way back twenty-five years ago, on May 31, 1911, to be exact, Winsor McCay, the cartoonist, was a visitor in Atlanta. He visited the office of The Constitution and there got into conversation with the late Sid Ormond, then city editor.

He told Sid he was working on something new in the cartoonist's art, the animation of drawn figures on the screen, by means of the motion picture camera.

Ormond was skeptical. It didn't seem possible to him that it would prove worth the tremendous effort of drawing sixteen separate cartoons for every foot of film, thousands of them for the sake of a few minutes of animation on the screen.

He scoffed at the idea.

"I'll show you," said McCay. "Gimme a piece of paper and a pencil."

Demonstrating The Idea.

Quickly McCay drew a score of little pictures, showing one of his favorite cartoon characters, falling. They demonstrated, clearly, the idea he planned to put into screen animated cartoons. Sid Ormond took the drawing, had it made into an engraving and published, together with the story of McCay's visit to Atlanta and his seemingly visionary idea. It was on the first page of The Constitution of June 1, 1911.

Some years later another cartoonist conceived the same idea of animating his drawings for the screen. And this second man attempted to copyright the whole method, to so tie it up in patents and legal prohibitions no one could ever have used it without payment of large royalties.

And McCay went into the courts, claiming the idea originated with him. McCay said he didn't want a copyright himself, but only wanted to prevent others from securing it.

"I want cartoon animation to be absolutely free," he explained to the court. "It is a new outlet for the work of young artists, a new opportunity, and I do not want to handicap the coming generations, who will develop the original idea to artistic heights now undreamed of. I don't want to see anything put in the way of the free expression of future creators."

They Found The Proof, Here.

The court ruled that the whole question was centered upon the point of which man conceived the idea first, McCay or the man who sought the copyright.

And McCay began searching his files and his memory, but nowhere could he find any legal proof to show he had thought of animation of drawings years previously.

Until, one day, he remembered his visit to Atlanta, his conversation with Sid Ormond and the little demonstration drawing he had made.

So the lawyers came to Atlanta, found that drawing on Page One of The Constitution of June 1, 1911, and took copies of the issue back to the court.

It was accepted as sufficient proof and the application for copyright was denied.

Summing It All Up—

Which, summing up the entire story, means if Sid Ormond hadn't believed the little drawings made by McCay to prove his point were sufficiently interesting to warrant inclusion in that day's paper, there wouldn't have been any proof, the copyright would probably have been granted and Walt Disney and all the other animators who have since given us so many delightful moments of screen entertainment, would have found themselves so handicapped at the start they would never have been able to develop the art of the animated cartoon to the point it has reached today.

We ought to thank McCay and Sid Ormond.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From The Constitution of Wednesday, May 31, 1911:

"Strap in hand, an irate mother yesterday morning visited the Inman Park public school and administered what is said to have been a severe chastising to a teacher who is alleged to have whipped her child severely."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Monday, May 31, 1886:

"The Upson Guards have received their new uniforms and Thomaston can now boast of as handsome a military company as any county in the state."

The Happenings of The Church World

By HERMAN L. TURNER,
Pastor, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The national preaching mission begins in Toronto September 13 and closes in New York city December 9. Preaching missions are to be held in 25 of the leading centers of the nation. The Atlanta dates are October 1-4 and it is not too early to answer this call to prayer sent out by the committee: "Since it is not by might nor by power but by God's spirit that such an undertaking as this can result in any measure of success, Christians everywhere are requested to pray earnestly that the blessing of God shall be upon the national preaching mission for the rebuilding in human lives of the foundations of the Christian faith, and for the sturdy and swift revival of true religion in this time of crisis and the world's need. Let us join therefore in united intercession. That those who are to be God's spokesmen during the misson may have unclouded insight into his will, and persuasive ability in interpreting that will to the men and women today; that those who share, whether nationally or locally, in the work of preparation may plan largely and hopefully in the sense of God's great willingness and power to run beyond their plans with his fulfillment; that pastors and Christian workers, upon whom will fall the responsibility for building further in their local communities on whatever foundations may be laid during the mission, shall be guided and strengthened in all their efforts to insure continuing and permanent results, and that all who participate in the plans and program may be kept from pride of opinion, from self-seeking and vanity, and may be so Christ-like in motive and spirit that God may find them fit instruments in his hands for the accomplishment of his gracious purpose."

To date nearly 10,000 Bibles, Testaments and portions of the Scripture have been sent free by the American Bible Society into the areas affected by the heavy floods of last March and into the southern states stricken later by tornadoes. In the flooded section the water rose to such a height in many of the churches as to completely cover the pews, thereby ruining the Bibles. One West Virginia town reported 80 per cent of the homes inundated.

Dr. Arthur Burd McCormick, in the Presbyterian Banner, writes challenging words about "The New Vigilantes": "Signs multiply that the price of liberty is being paid and that the eternal vigilance which is the coin in this realm is in wide circulation. Sinclair Lewis writes a novel. James Truslow Adams brings forth book after book on the history of America and Americans, such as the Adams family and Jefferson. Herbert Agar sounds no uncertain note in "The Land of the Free." Magazines and the daily press are pouring out an unending stream of articles and news items serving to wake up to our peril and nerve us for the struggle that is at our gates. Typical is the utterance of Colonel Frank Knox before the Advertising Club of New York. He asserted that the world is in rapid retreat from democratic ideals to a system of government that was old when Rome was young; the principles of human liberty and individual freedom are being everywhere challenged; dictatoral power holds sway over a large part of the world and in every instance where autocracy replaces democracy the first of human rights to disappear is the right of free press. A free press and a dictator cannot live in the same country. Some of the obscure sources of dictatorship have appeared in this country. There have been attempts to smear the press. To poison the springs of public information through the columns of the press is treachery. Courage, resolution, clarity of judgment and directness of expression are more needed today than ever. If you want a prosperous America in which to live and to rear your children, make sure that it is, first of all, a free America."

Dr. J. Sherman Potter, pastor, First Presbyterian, San Leandro, Cal., in his article "Memorial Day, 1936," writes "From General Grant's 'Personal Memoirs,' written shortly before his death, are these words: 'I feel that we are on the eve of a new era, when there is to be a great harmony between Federal and Confederate. I cannot stay to be a living witness to the correctness of this prophecy, but I feel it within me that it is to be so. The universally kind feeling expressed for me at a time when it was supposed that each day would prove my last, seemed to me the beginning of the answer to, Let us have peace.' This last last phrase contributes the epitaph carved on the mausoleum erected over Grant's tomb on Riverside drive, New York city. These words of the stricken Union general are particularly significant when read with the tribute paid to him by Mr. Jefferson Davis, then living in retirement in the south. A Boston newspaper sent a reporter to New Orleans to secure, if possible, an interview with the late president of the Confederacy relative to General Grant's military career. The reporter received the following courteous declaration: 'Dear Sir: Your request for me to prepare a criticism of General Grant's career cannot be complied with for the following reasons: 1. General Grant is dying. 2. Though he invaded our country, it was with an open hand, and, as far as I know, he abetted niether arson nor pillage, and has, since the war, I believe, showed no malignity to Confederates either of the military or civil service. Therefore, instead of seeking to disturb the quiet of his closing hours I would, if it were in my power, contribute to the peace of his mind and the comfort of his body.—Jefferson Davis.' This letter was written 51 years ago (1885) and 20 years after the War Between the States. Here the leaven of good will was leavening the lump of bitterness."

Some figures from the 1935 record of the State Y. M. C. A. of Georgia: 158 different Y. M. C. A. units functioning in cities, colleges, universities, high schools, railroad and industrial centers throughout Georgia, enrolling 21,967 members; 3,125 members of 125 high school units, known as Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs; 6,412 high school boys and girls participated in statewide high school Bible study projects; 500 delegates attended five Youth Christian Life Conferences; 1,330 sessions of Youth Problem Bible study conducted for high school boys and girls; 306 Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y leaders participated in six one-day program planning conferences; 224 Y. M. C. A. meetings, participated in by state secretary. The state Y. M. C. A. of Georgia co-operates with the local Young Men's Christian Associations in strengthening, co-ordinating and extending service to the boys and young men of the community; promotes the essential features of the Y. M. C. A. work for the uncounted youth of Georgia to whom the association is not otherwise available, and helps to organize the Y. M. C. A. in new cities and educational institutions.

The Fight for Freedom.

None of us is born free. Rather we are born prisoners, in the sense that life is bounded and limited. This is true whether one is bound by chains or walls, whether you are shut in, or shut out. This is true of the baby. He cannot go, or see, or hear, or do, when he first comes into this world. His impotence binds and limits him just as chains and bars. Then the process of liberation begin. It means growth. Growth of physical strength and mental capacity. As baby toddles out of the nursery, big-eyed with curiosity and eager for new experiences, he begins to push back the walls of his prison, and enlarge the environs of his liberty. More strength and knowledge means more freedom.

Now this story of human infancy is only the repetition of the story of the race. The race too, was in prison, bound by mental ignorance and physical barriers. Fire and flood, heat and cold, mountains and oceans, and 10,000 unknown forces, were prison guards, limiting the expression of those inward impulses and ambitions of human life. The story of the winning of freedom, is the story of an inward expansion—the expansion of personal powers.

Liberty and Life.

This fight for freedom has not been the destruction of enemies, but it has been the transforming of these forces of nature into friends. Heat and cold have become the servants of man. Electricity drives the wheels of his machines. Mountains are the depositories of his wealth, and oceans have become the highways for travel and transportation. Thus, instead of being the prisoner of these menacing enemies, he has made them friends and companions in a larger life of liberty. This liberty could never have been conferred upon man, and it was more significant than breaking loose from some authority. It was an inward growth of spiritual power. The widening of knowledge and the development of reason. Thus he mastered, instead of being mastered, by his environment.

When we look back upon this life process we naturally ask what was the urge in this fight for freedom? It was the dynamo of "I want"—physical appetites and mental aspirations. The physical appetite for food, comfort of the body, and the instinctive desire to live, were the primitive wants. So the first prizes of life which challenge one to battle, are those things which minister to the body. We find, too, that the law is that appetites grow in strength as they are fed.

It is just here that man meets his greatest enemy in his fight for freedom. His strongest desire—that which he wants more than anything else—will become the master, dominating all other desires, and forcing them into subjection. It was the desire for food for the body which first led him to master his environment, but there is always the danger that this appetite may become his master. It is so primary and necessary to his very existence. Food must be had, and it is easy to assume that it must be had at the expense of everything else. Of course, if this appetite is allowed to dominate, life will be on the level of the beast, and often it is just that.

Birth of the Soul.

But there gradually emerges among the clamorous demands of the bodily appetites the voice of "I ought." It is the dawning sense of obligation to another. If it goes on developing, it comes to mean, I owe justice, kindness, happiness, and finally, love, to others. This might be called the birth of the soul, or the personality. But it is surrounded—one might say imprisoned—by these appetites of the body. The personality will want to deal honorably and even lovingly with others, but to do so it must deny some bodily appetite. It fints itself balked, and barricaded by the stronger physical wants. This is the tragic story of the "drunkard," the "glutton," the "sensualist," and of every greedy lover of money above all other desires and ambitions. Every one of us has experienced at some time and in some form, the conflict so vividly described by Paul: "When I would do good, evil is present with me." It is the story of the conflict of every upward impulse, every desire for the discovery of truth, every expression of human sympathy, and every dare to heroic service. The fight for character is always a fight for freedom.

Now there is only one desire which one can allow to become the master motive of his life, and be free. That is the welfare of others, which is the real meaning of love. When that desire becomes dominant, all other desires, which are for self, are subordinated, and self is forgotten. One comes to live in the plans, purposes, and welfare of others. That to my mind is the meaning of the coming of Jesus, who lived and died for others, into a man's life. The revolution which takes place within is the substitution of this selfless motive, Love, for all other motives. This frees one from the mastery of selfish appetites and ambitions. This is the significance of the saying: "For freedom, did Christ set us free."

Q. What is the technical difference between a town and a city?

A. A town, in general, is any considerable collection of dwelling houses, especially as distinguished from the adjacent country. In the United States it is a territorial division established by law for political or municipal purposes. A city is a place inhabited by a large permanent organized community more important than a town. In the United States it is a municipality of the first class, created by charter.

Q. Why are most warships painted gray?

A. Because the color blends with the background and makes them less conspicuous.

Q. Who played the role of "Palmer" in the motion picture, "Chinatown Squad?"

A. Bradley Page.

Q. Which countries comprised the "Central Powers" during the World War?

A. Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria.

Q. What is the salary of the British ambassador to the United States?

A. The term sharecropper is applied to a farmer who tills the land of another and receives as recompense a share of the crop which he makes. It is a common method of raising cotton in the southern states. A tenant farmer also tills the soil owned by another, and his rent may be paid either in cash or in produce.

Q. What is the record for gate receipts at a prize fight in the United States?

Governor Landon Increases Lead In Latest Poll of American Voters

Kansan Favorably Mentioned More Often Than All Other Candidates Combined.

By DR. DANIEL STARCH

Director "Polling America," National Research Organization.

Whatever may be the outcome of balloting at the republican national convention little more than a week from now, Governor Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas, will arrive at Cleveland with greater public favor behind him than all the other candidates for the presidential nomination combined.

This is disclosed by our fourth poll of public sentiment on republican presidential possibilities. Polling America interviewers asked a representative cross section of voters the same questions used in the previous surveys: "Whom do you think the republicans should nominate for President in 1936? For whom did you vote for President in 1932?"

Preferences indicated by the replies are shown below in comparison with the results of our first survey and of our last previous similar study:

	Now	6 Weeks Ago	5 Months Ago
Landon	46.8%	39.8%	14.8%
Borah	17.3	19.5	14.0
Hoover	6.9	7.3	15.3
Knox	4.3	5.8	8.2
Others	5.1	2.8	4.2
Undecided	19.6	24.8	45.9

Subsequent to the taking of this poll, two events have tended to clarify the situation and strengthened the position of the "Kansas Coolidge." One was Governor Landon's decisive defeat of Senator Borah in the New Jersey primary, the last of the important preferential state tests before June 9. The other was former President Hoover's statement:

"It should be evident by this time that I am not a candidate . . . And get one thing straight. I am not opposing any of the candidates."

Since Mr. Hoover has been represented as opposed to Governor Landon, the latter part of his statement was accepted as distinctly significant.

Source of Landon's Gains.

Governor Landon's progress in public favor has given him the support of nearly 47 per cent of all persons interviewed, compared with the 40 per cent he had six weeks ago. He drew his new support not only from all his competitors, but also from the considerable percentage of voters who had not made up their minds when earlier polls were taken. The decreasing size of this undecided element indicates strikingly how public opinion is becoming crystallized as the convention nears.

The fact that Landon, the only republican governor to be re-elected in the 1934 democratic landslide, is several laps ahead of his competitors in public favor does not mean that his nomination at Cleveland is a foregone conclusion. The history of party politics in this country shows that often enough a "dark horse" or compromise candidate has won the nomination from the popular choice.

A large majority of the 1,001 delegates will arrive at the convention hall without instruetions to vote for a particular candidate, free to switch at a moment's notice. A band wagon rush for some candidate who does not now seem in the running could gain great momentum quickly. However, the popular support Landon has won is a strong influence in his favor, and his champions claim that if he gets on the first roll call the 340 votes expected, he probably will be nominated on the second ballot.

Importance of the Man.

Our recent survey in which voters were asked to name the influence which will decide how they vote in the presidential election lends added interest to this question of republican candidates. That survey revealed that 52 per cent of the persons said the candidate was the dominating influence, rather than the party or platform.

Thus, as far as the public is concerned, the selection of Landon, or Vandenberg, or Borah, or Dickinson, or another to be the G. O. P. standard bearer is of more vital concern than the drafting of a platform with or without planks about the constitution, authority of the courts, bureaucracy, national planning, or the protection of the individual against monopolies.

G. O. P. Majority for Landon.

A majority by a good margin is given Governor Landon by persons who voted republican in the last presidential election. For the purpose of our survey, this, of course, is of more significance than the preference among people generally, because the primary concern of the Cleveland convention will be to select a candidate who is likely to win the following of the greatest number of republicans of all shades, to inspire the loyalty of the largest number of diverse elements within the party. If the convention is also concerned with selecting a candidate who may attract the maximum number of disgruntled democrats, that is only a secondary consideration.

Some measure of the significance of Mr. Hoover's recent statement that his concern was with principles to guide the party, and not with his own candidacy, may be gained by the alignment in the tabulation below of replies by 1932 republican voters. It shows that the ex-President ranked second in our count, which was made shortly before he announced that he was not a candidate.

Lineup of 1932 Republicans.

	Now	6 Weeks Ago	5 Months Ago
Landon	56.7%	50.0%	19.3%
Hoover	13.8	11.2	23.7
Borah	6.3	13.9	11.6
Knox	4.6	6.9	12.4
Others	6.5	2.6	3.3
Undecided	12.1	15.4	32.7

Governor Landon's gains during recent weeks resulted from a swing to him of support among the eastern states. Whereas six weeks ago he had the following of 47 per cent of the voters in the east who had cast ballots for Hoover in 1932, now he has the support of 66 per cent.

During these recent weeks Governor Landon has made deep inroads into the followers of his competitors, and has gained half of the bloc of eastern voters who were formerly undecided. These gains were not offset by slight defections among the republicans of the middle west and far west.

Know Little About Him.

Comments of many of those who expressed a preference for the Governor indicated that they did not know much about him. Whereas there were opinions such as this, by the manager of an engineering firm: "I think Landon is a very able man, and has the best chances of anyone yet named," there were also many comments such as that of a patent lawyer, who declared: "We have no outstanding man, but Landon is the best man available," or this, by the president of a steel company: "Landon seems to be the best of a poor group to select from."

One Landon booster prophesied: "If the republican party is to stand a chance, republicans must get rid of the feeling that Roosevelt can't be licked."

Senator Borah has lost ground during the past six weeks among republican voters in the east and middle west, and has remained practically stationary in the far west. Mr. Hoover, on the other hand, made a substantial gain in the far west, some gain in the middle west, and lost slightly in New England. There were mang staunch republicans who voted for Hoover in 1932, and believing he would remain in the race for the 1936 nomination, expressed their wish to vote for him again.

"What do we know about any of them except Hoover?" asked one housewife. A Connecticut voter declared, "I would like to see Hoover elected again. If he stayed in office the country would be out of the depression and on a sound and secure foundation that would last."

Borah's boom has failed to progress. His greatest strength now lies in the far west, but even there he has the support of only 13.2 per cent of the republican voters with whom our interviewers talked. Most of them do not regard him very seriously now as a contender for the nomination, although it is thought he may be influential in liberalizing the platform which is adopted.

There are fewer fence-sitters by far in the far west than in any other part of the country. There is little indecisiveness in these states. The undecided group in the far west is only 5.5 per cent, compared with 19.9 for New England, 21.8 for the middle west, and 21.7 per cent for the south.

The undecided class is smallest, 1.4 per cent, among the republicans of the far west. It is greatest, 25.3 per cent, among the citizens of New England who voted for President Roosevelt in 1932.

Democrats Also Favor Landon.

The preferences expressed by democrats are significant, because they indicate to some extent the republican who would be most satisfactory to those voters who cast their ballots for Roosevelt in 1932 but who might like to "take a walk" this year. Democrats expressed their preferences as follows:

	Now	6 Weeks Ago	5 Months Ago
Landon	41.0%	35.8%	13.6%
Borah	25.9	23.5	16.5
Knox	3.9	5.7	4.7
Hoover	2.7	4.2	9.8
Others	5.1	2.8	5.0
Undecided	21.4	28.0	51.6

Some of the democrats took the attitude of one Atlanta housewife: "I am so confident of Roosevelt's re-election that I haven't given any thought to the republicans." Most of them, however, agreed that Landon should be the republican nominee.

Democrats in the east expressed a greater preference for Landon than did those of any other region, 53.1 per cent naming the Kansan. Landon was the democratic favorite in all sections except the middle west, where he trailed Borah's 36.5 per cent with 30.6 per cent.

Borah Strong in Middle West.

It is obvious that Borah appeals considerably more to middle western democrats than he does to middle western republicans. An imaginary slate naming Landon for President and Borah for vice president apparently would meet with most favor among those who rallied round Roosevelt in 1932, although a team of Landon and Hoover (an impossibility in more ways than one) would seem to appeal more strongly to those who voted for Hoover in the last presidential race.

The fact that 21.4 per cent of the 1932 Roosevelt voters are undecided about the republican candidate, compared with 12.1 per cent of the 1932 Hoover followers, is not surprising, because of their lack of direct personal or party interest in republican candidates. It is noteworthy, however, that this undecided group has decreased from 28.8 per cent six weeks ago and 51.6 per cent five months ago.

Attitude of New Voters.

It is not apparent from an inspection of the preferences stated by those who did not vote in 1932 whether they are more in sympathy with the republicans or with the democrats on this question of republican candidates. A large proportion of these persons were too young to vote at the last presidential election.

Two facts are apparent, however; they have an overwhelming preference for Governor Landon, and the percentage of this group which is undecided is higher than in the other two groups, being 35.0 per cent. How the preferences of this group of new voters have shifted in recent months is shown in the following tabulation:

	Now	6 Weeks Ago	5 Months Ago
Landon	44.5%	27.5%	5.0%
Borah	7.8	16.7	9.2
Hoover	6.5	10.5	13.5
Knox	5.5	2.6	5.8
Others	0.7	3.2	3.0
Undecided	35.0	39.5	64.2

Although the percentage of these new voters who are undecided is larger than for the other two groups of voters, the percentage of new voters in the far west who are undecided is smaller than the percentage of undecided among the other groups in any other geographic section. This again points to the unusual political consciousness of the far west.

Among the candidates included as "Others" are Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, the favored "dark horse" possibility. The Michigan senator is said to be regarded as acceptable to Senator Borah and friendly to the Landon, Knox and Hoover camps. Senator L. J. Dickinson, critic of the New Deal and champion of the farmers, is also mentioned, as are Justice Roberts, Glenn Frank, Senator Frederick Steiwer, keynoter of the convention; Representative James W. Wadsworth, Chief Justice Hughes, Henry Ford, Senator R. M. La Follette, Alfred E. Smith, Ogden Mills, Bernarr McFadden and Senator Gerald P. Nye.

Next Week: Results of another poll on President Roosevelt's popularity will be disclosed in Dr. Starch's next article. Almost on the eve of of the national convention the people were asked whether they would like to see the President re-elected or if not, whom they would prefer.

POLLING AMERICA ON REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES.

Dr. Starch's interviewers asked a cross-section of men and women in the United States: "Whom Do You Think the Republicans Should Nominate for President in 1936? For Whom Did You Vote for President in 1932?" Below is a tabulation of the replies, with the preferences stated six weeks ago and five months ago given for comparative purposes.

Coy Asks 'Clean Hands' In Southern Fight On Oleomargerine Tax

Editor Constitution: A number of articles and editorials have appeared in the various newspapers throughout Georgia, setting forth that the proposed tax on oleomargarine by the federal government, and the present prohibitory taxes on margarine of Wisconsin and other states is unfair, unjust, and discriminatory as against Georgia and against the cotton-growing states.

The very people who are raising this hue and cry of protest, and the very people who cry, "We are being discriminated against!" were themselves parties to and authors of the bill that passed at the last session of the Georgia legislature, putting a prohibitive tax on the sale of margarine containing any product other than half a dozen enumerated products, this act being a direct discrimination against margarine containing coconut oil to any degree, even though it has been accepted and recognized that even where coconut oil is the basis of margarine, a substantial portion of its ingredients is cottonseed oil. Let the cottonseed oil producers "come into the court of public opinion with clean hands" and remove discriminations at home before they protest discriminations abroad.

The propaganda as to the increased cost of table commodities and the very vital need of the people for a cheaper commodity, falls of its own weight when the realization is had that the product discriminated against by this Georgia oleomargarine act is for the purpose of keeping off the market the cheaper oleomargarine—in price—that is made by the combination of coconut and cottonseed oil in price—that is made by the combimodity selling for 10 cents normally, in order to protect a commodity that has no better, more healthful, nutritive and palatable qualities, but sells at a higher price, is certainly rank discrimination.

An Open Letter.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert and the Southwide Association of Consumers:

I have read with interest and approval a number of recent articles by and concerning your splendid campaign for the protection of the lower-income families of the south and the nation against oppressive taxation through the medium of oleomargarine taxes.

However, there is one feature of this fight to which I am sure your attention has not been directed—one that I feel confident will be repugnant to the principles for which you are fighting:

The bulk of margarine sold in this country is made today with a base that is a combination of coconut and cottonseed oil. This margarine sells at retail at a price from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent below that which does not contain coconut oil. Leading authorities have established beyond the shadof of a doubt that the coconut oil in no way affects or lessens the nutritive and health-giving qualities of the oleomargarine, but rather adds to its palatability. Let, a group of jobbers and manufacturers, under the pretense of protecting home industries, have foisted upon the working classes of Georgia a tax upon this product of 10 cents per pound, which tax is approximately equal to the normal retail selling price of this product.

I believe, from my observation of your efforts, that you are opposed to the evils of the lobbying group, and are attempting to protect the interests of the people who are most injured by this tax, therefore I take this opportunity to write you and urge that you direct your efforts toward having Georgia come into this fight against discrimination "with clean hands" and purging itself of as great an oppression and as vicious a piece of legislation as any of those of the other states which you have condemned.

Game Law Enforcement Praised by Sportsman

Editor Constitution: I have been interested in hunting and fishing in Georgia for a long time. My father bought me a gun when I was 10 years old and I have grown up with guns and bird dogs. I remember when it was easy to go out and get a mess of quail before breakfast. Now it takes all day to kill a mess of birds.

Several years ago it was worse than it is now, but the last few years our game and fish department has got on the job and enforced the laws. I know a fellow in this county who has sold quail to big hotels in the past but is scared to bootleg game now because the game warden will catch 'em.

That is due to the work of my fellow townsman, Z. D. Cravey, who is Georgia's first real fish and game man.

The game farm that they have in north Georgia is a fine thing. We need more of them. They put birds back in the field for the fellow who likes to hunt. You know if you go hunting you have to buy hunting license, but if you go fishing you don't have to buy a fishing license, yet they have lots of fish hatcheries and just one game farm.

We should have a fishing license on sports who go from county to county fishing.

If we can keep birds in our woods and fish in our streams, we can keep our children away from the corner drug stores and make real citizens out of them. That is the thing that counts.

HENRY B. WARD.

Driftwood.

Upon life's ocean now I drift
And calmly wait my fate;
Waiting for the latch to shift
Upon life's closing gate.

In mute appeal mine eyes I lift
Unto some higher power;
And realise that I have sniffed
The nectar from life's flower.

I'm blown about by winds that shift,
My soul with fear is chilled;
For life eternal is a gift
That God himself has willed.

Historic Philadelphia National Shrines To Attract Democratic Convention Visitors

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 30.—(Special)—During the democratic national convention in Philadelphia in June the attention of officers, delegates, alternates and other visitors will be focused on the constitution of the United States and Independence Hall, its birthplace.

"All documents and relics relating to the framing and adoption of the constitution under which the government of the United States has operated for the last 146 years is available in Philadelphia will be made accessible to visitors to the democratic national committee," declared Albert M. Greenfield, chairman of the All Philadelphia Citizens' Committee on Arrangements for the convention.

Comparing the British constitution and the document in which are embodied the basic laws of the United States, William E. Gladstone, great English statesman, declared "the American constitution is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

The constitution was framed at the federal constitutional convention that began its sessions behind locked doors at Independence Hall on May 14, 1787. It was laid before congress on September 20, 1787, and was subsequently ratified by the 13 states.

The first constitution of the United States was the articles of confederation. This constitution was adopted by the continental congress on November 15, 1777, but it was not ratified by all the states until March 1, 1781. The articles of confederation and perpetual union" was a document entirely separate from the constitution framed by the federal convention of 1787, which until this day has served as the fundamental law of the land.

First Governmental Outline.

The articles of confederation was prepared by a committee of the continental congress named at the same time as the committee that framed the declaration of independence. The articles provided for a single-chambered congress with limited powers over war, peace, foreign affairs, coinage and postal arrangements. It could raise money only by requisitions upon the states.

In operation the document proved defective, but it was not until the Annapolis convention of 1786 that the constitutional convention of Philadelphia was called for the purpose of framing a new set of fundamental laws for the nation. When the Philadelphia convention had completed its deliberations and the states had ratified its work, the articles of confederation were superseded by the constitution.

The facts of the constitutional conclave were not revealed until 50 years later, when James Madison, the fourth president of the United States and the last of the survivors of the Philadelphia convention, died and his journal of the proceedings was published.

It was revealed that although the constitutional convention began on May 14 the necessary quorum of seven states did not appear until May 25, 1787, and that some of the delegates who took part in the deliberations did not arrive in Philadelphia until July 23.

In the 13 states 73 delegates were appointed, but only 55 attended the convention. In the end only 39 of the delegates signed the constitution.

Same Furnishings Still in Place.

The same furnishings which saw the birth of the constitution, the massive mahogany President's desk and the high-back chair in which John Hancock sat when he signed the declaration of independence, still remain in their old places in the declaration chamber of Independence hall.

It was taken for granted before the convention that Washington should preside. He was nominated for convention president by Robert Morris, of Pennsylvania, and was unanimously elected. He was conducted to the chair by Morris and John Rutledge, of South Carolina. Major William Jackson was secretary.

After four months' work in hot summer weather, during which the deliberations were marked by acrimonious debate and daily exchange of remarks more than tinged with acerbity, the constitution was in form for submission to congress before being sent to the states for approval.

Objection was made to the constitution on the grounds that its adoption would put an end to the continental congress, but that argument was brushed aside as too trifling for serious consideration. Congress debated the constitution for eight days and then sent it to the states.

Of the 55 men who framed the constitution 29 were university men, graduates of Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, William and Mary, Oxford, Glasgow and Edinburgh. Among the 26 delegates who were not university men were Washington and Benjamin Franklin.

The states took almost three years to ratify. Ratification was given in the following orders: Delaware, December 6, 1787; Pennsylvania, December 12, 1787; New Jersey, December 18, 1787; Georgia, January 2, 1788; Massachusetts, February 6, 1788; Maryland, April 28, 1788; South Carolina, May 23, 1788; New Hampshire, June 21, 1788; Virginia, June 25, 1788; New York, June 26, 1788; North Carolina, November 21, 1789; Rhode Island, May 29, 1790.

Philadelphia Presidential Nominees.

Four major party presidential nominees have been chosen in Philadelphia and three were national military heroes. General Taylor, the nominee of the first national political convention ever held in Philadelphia, commanded during many of the battles of the Mexican War in which the United States army was victorious and at the time of the 1848 whig convention was a national idol.

General Fremont, known as the "Pathfinder" for his extensive explorations of the western sections of the continent, was esteemed for his military exploits. At the time of his nomination he was young, vigorous and one of the most popular figures of the nation.

Grant, of course, was the country's outstanding military hero from the close of the Civil War until his death near Saratoga, N. Y., in 1885.

McKinley had been a major in the Civil War, but was not nominated as a military man. His war record was not lost sight of, however, during the 1900 national campaign.

Theodore Roosevelt, who was nominated for vice president in Philadelphia in 1900, had a military record. Only two years prior to his nomination he served in Cuba in the Spanish-American War as colonel of the volunteer cavalry regiment known as the Rough Riders. Theodore Roosevelt became President upon the death of McKinley in 1901.

Democrats may be in the mood to take comfort from the fact that three of the four major presidential candidates named in Philadelphia were elected, while one, Fremont, was defeated by James Buchanan, democrat, the only President of the United States who was a Pennsylvanian.

Optimistic politicians believe Philadelphia brings good fortune to the candidates for the presidency nominated there, and that the holding of the democratic convention in the City of Brotherly Love will impose no handicap on President Roosevelt in his campaign for re-election.

The old Chinese Museum at Ninth and George streets, in which was held the whig convention that nominated Zachary Taylor, has long since been borne to the limbo of antiquated building by the advancing tide of business progress. The whig convention lasted for three days beginning June 7, 1848, and the delegates and spectators sweltered in heat in the building which stood on the rear section of the site of the Benjamin Franklin hotel. In those days Sansom street was known as George street.

The convention was one of the most unruly ever held in the country. The ancient museum was packed with more than 5,000 delegates and spectators and Governor John Morehead, of North Carolina, who was permanent chairman, frequently was obliged to threaten to clear the galleries if order was not maintained.

Taylor was nominated for president and Millard Fillmore was selected as the candidate for vice president. President Taylor died a year after his inauguration and was succeeded by Fillmore.

After serving out the balance of the four-year term for which Taylor had been elected Fillmore was in retirement for four years to return to the political stage in 1856. On February 22 of that year the American party held its convention in National Hall and adjourned to reassemble in Sansom Street hall, where Fillmore was nominated, Buchanan was elected over Fremont and Fillmore.

G. O. P. Born in Philadelphia.

Eight years after the whigs nominated Taylor and Fillmore the republican party was born in Philadelphia at its first national convention. When the 1856 convention assembled the whig party had been split by the formation of the republican and American parties. The slavery question, then the burning issue of the country, was the cause of a great deal of acrimonious debate in the convention. Partisanship was high and feverish. Henry S. Lane, of Indiana, who was permanent chairman, had his hands full in maintaining a semblance of order.

Fremont was nominated easily. His running mate for vice president was William D. Dayton, New Jersey. Abraham Lincoln ran second for the nomination for vice president, receiving the votes of 110 delegates.

The republican convention at which Grant was nominated was held in the Academy of Music, still standing on Broad street. The assemblage began its deliberations on June 5, 1872, and Grant was nominated unanimously on June 6. Schuyler Colfax, Indiana, who served as vice president during Grant's first term, was not renominated. In his place was chosen Henry Wilson, United States senator from Massachusetts.

As Grant, owing to his military achievements, still was the nation's hero, the crowds that filled the Academy of Musting to a bursting point were in a constant state of almost hysterical enthusiasm. Thomas Settle, of North Carolina, was permanent chairman.

The republican convention at which McKinley was renominated was held in a stucco-wooden annex to the Commercial Museum, on the site of the Municipal Convention hall, where the democrats are preparing to renominate President Roosevelt.

The renomination of McKinley had been a foregone conclusion, but the action of the convention in nominating Theodore Roosevelt for vice president was a surprise and completely discomfited United States Senator Thomas C. Platt, known in republican circles of New York state as the "Easy Boss."

Platt favored Timothy L. Woodruff, lieutenant governor of New York. He left the convention in a huff when Roosevelt was nominated. Roosevelt succeeded to the presidency upon the tragic death of McKinley in Buffalo in September, 1901.

Mexican Indians Resist Spanish Lore Move

Four centuries have not been enough for Spain to complete her cultural conquest of Mexico, newly released census figures show.

In 1936, just 415 years after Herman Cortez's capture of the capital of the Aztecs, 11,264,437 persons, or 83 per cent of the inhabitants over five years old, understand and speak Castilian.

Ancient Indian races, conquered physically but clinging fiercely to ancient speech and customs, have preserved their languages through the centuries to such effect that 1,185,162, or 8 per cent of the inhabitants, know only Indian tongues.

Immigrants increased the "melting pot" problem, the census takers finding 8,223 persons, or 5 per cent of the foreign residents, knew no Spanish.

English-speaking immigrants appeared most loyal to their native idiom, for 5,134 knew none but that language. There were 1,003 Chinese possessing no Spanish, 503 knew only German and 480 only Russian.

The census bureau attributed the large number who spoke only English to the presence in northern Mexico of Mormons and Mennonites who, it pointed out, take little part in the national life.

Indian tongues spoken in Mexico number in all 44, the census showed. Aztec, the speech of Montezuma, predominates, 355,295 speaking that language alone.

Undersea Tunnel, Erin To Scotland, Planned

Engineering experts now are making preliminary surveys for a scheme which, if realized, will see northern Ireland and Britain joined by tunnel.

Sponsors of the plan is William J. Stewart, member of the Ulster parliament, who has engaged engineers to carry out the exploratory work.

He is confident their report will prove the feasibility of a tunnel.

His proposed bore would reach from the County Antrim coast of northern Ireland to the mull of Kintyre on the Scottish coast, a distance of 13 miles.

Its value as work relief is stressed. It also is urged that if a tunnel existed it would in time of war mean an assured food supply for Britain, regardless of how other means of communication were threatened.

Hard on Sandy!

Sandy was engaged to a girl who, a few days before graduation, succumbed to the appeals of her friends and had her hair bobbed. They congratulated her on her improved appearance and it was, therefore, without any misgivings that she showed herself to her sweetheart. However, Sandy viewed her with gravity.

"It's hard on me, lassie," he said; "Verra hard! After I've bought ye a packet o' hairpins for a graduation gift."

Claims Largest Planes

France claims the world's biggest bombing plane and also the largest commercial airplane. They are four-motor, 18-ton monoplanes with a speed of 208 miles an hour. The commercial plane, named "City of Montevideo," will be used in the mail service to South America.

Nazis Bar Paper

The Jewish daily "Dabhar," which is published in Hebrew in Palestine, was permanently banned from Germany by Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightment. Among Germany's population of 62,000,000, approximately 100,000 can read Hebrew.

It's "Lunatic Fringe" That Must Be Curbed

Editor Constitution: I have noted with great interest the fine work you are doing, both on your editorial page and news pages, towards reducing the hazards on the highways. It is one of the most worth-while jobs in existence, one that will bring you and your staff extreme satisfaction when the accident tabulations show a decrease at least partly through your efforts.

As a brand-new arrival in Georgia, it would be presumptious indeed for me to offer you advice; I merely hope that an outsider's slant on local conditions may interest you and add a little fuel to the fire for continuing relentlessly for safer highways.

First, let me assure you that from my own driving experiences here in Georgia and in Atlanta, I judge that the great majority of your drivers are just as expert and courteous as they are any place else where I have driven. (I have been in 40 states; have been driving for 20 years, and the speedometer on my present car now shows over 74,000 miles.) During night driving more on-coming drivers dim their lights thanin most places. In city traffic there is even some courteous "giving way."

But there is a definite "lunatic fringe," and I suppose there always will be. A small part of the total, probably less than 2 per cent, who show no consideration whatsoever for the comfort or safety of anyone else on the road.

Your premise that a universal license requirement will help to eliminate the "lunatic fringe" of drivers is almost axiomatic. There is not a bit of doubt that the liability of revocation of driving privileges is a deterrent to reckless and selfish driving; and the actual revocation is, ipso facto, a purge. An awakened public should demand that the 98 per cent total of good drivers be granted licenses, as tokens of their driving abilities and habits, and to the exclusion of the 2 per cent total of killers and road hogs.

One of the nice things about living hereabouts is being able to get your paper regularly. It has been one of my favorites for years.

Heart-Throbs.

IN AN OLD TRUNK.

Prologue: — Sometimes when we commune with our thoughts they drift back through the vanished years and carry us to that beautiful Isle of Long Ago; and then memory awakes and recalls that within touch of our hands are ties that still link the heart with the dear dead past. Just a step will take you to an old alabaster box, or an old trunk, where in pathos and glory lie the heart-throbs of a long gone day. Maybe you raise the lid just a little bit reverently; for to the soul you are standing on sacred ground; and before your eyes are all the lost roses of yesterday that once bloomed in all the youth and loveliness of tender romance. Here is an old photograph long forgotten, but the sight of it stirs the emotions, and sends a strange thrill sweeping o'er you, as once it did when first given to you. Or perhaps it may be a bit of faded ribbon; or a lock of golden hair—each carry a memory known only to your throbbing heart. A package of letters tied with a little silver cord speak more eloquently of what their contents may be than had you opened and read them. Every single life has their treasure case; every beating heart a corner that is forbidden entrance except to yourself. From these imaginations, I have penned the following little poem:

In an attic old and musty
With the cobwebs on the floor
And the dust of many summers
On the rafters and the door—
In a corner dimly lighted
By a brief declining day
Sits a trunk that's quite old-fashioned
Filled with flowers from life's bouquet.

And my footsteps often lead me
Up that well-worn wooden stair
Till I kneel beside that old trunk
As it sits in silence there.
Seems as though as I am kneeling
Reverently before some Shrine
Seeking comfort, consolation
From the burdens which are mine.

And in fact it is an altar
Where I often come and seek
Days that long, long since have vanished
In the drifting years that sleep—
Come and hold a sweet communion
With some tender souvenirs
That were heart-throbs on life's journey
As I passed each day and year.

So I lift the old lid slowly
And what memories arise—
There's a languorous night of summer,
Lilac blooms and two dark eyes—
Eyes that always seem to haunt me
When I view this lacy glove
Which is yellow, old and faded—
Faded like that night of love.

There's a bunch of crumbling violets
Pressed between a well-thumbed book—
How they bring to me the music
Of a sun-kissed dappled brook
Where in childhood's happy morning
I would gather them for hours
As I wandered through the wildwood
'Midst the bees and blooming flowers.

Hidden in its deep recesses
Is a photograph or two
That bring tender recollections
Of some old friends that I knew—
Friends that long since have drifted
From these old familiar scenes—
Drifted like the leaves of autumn
On the bosom of a stream.

Strands of beads and bits of ribbon
And a lock of golden hair—
Each one tell to me a story
As they lie in silence there—
Just heart-throbs along life's journey;
Some brought gladness—some brought tears
Now they bring sweet consolation
At this Shrine of Yester-years.

—CAPTAIN JOHN S. MADDEN.

Solace.

EDWIN H. HARKINS.

I sat beneath a stately pine
One afternoon in May,
I cared not for the day or time,
I came to get away.
Away from the noise of busy streets;
Away from the horns' loud blare,
To rest my soul in this retreat,
In Mother Nature's care.
As I sat beneath this mighty tree,
My soul at rest within,
The song of a lark came to me,
Softly, on the sweet May wind.
This distant note, sweet and clear,
Drifting softly o'er the dell,
Was music to my distraught ears—
T'was a song I love so well.
I heard the murmur of the brook;
The tinkling of a lone cowbell;
I saw a squirrel stop briskly and look,
Then realize that all was well.
Surrounded by nature so sweet and pure,
My restless soul has found
Once more the courage to endure
The noise of this busy town.

Mission Founded

Mission and presidio of San Carlos was established at Monterey by Spaniards in 1770, and California's mission period or settlement days began.

One glance and Iowans and Kansans are Californians, but Spanish visited and explored California 150 years before they began settling it! What stirred the action finally was fear California would become Russian.

First Law.

The first law enacted by the congress was approved by George Washington in 1789. It was "an act to regulate the time and manner of administering certain oaths." The citizens may have felt like uttering some oaths. Congress had been in session for three months before it squeezed out that first law!

Lower Cost of Flying

Critic Describes Two Schools Of Writers of Southern Fiction

Readers Are Cautioned to Differentiate Between Plain Fiction and Social History of the South.

Editor's Note: Donald Davidson, of Vanderbilt University, poet, critic and contributor to many national magazines and several books, including the famous "I'll Take My Stand," is one of the original southern agrarians, and is a leading spokesman for the group. In this article he outlines the widely varying interpretations of southern life that are being presented by current southern novelists. The views expressed in the following article are those of the writer and are not necessarily those of The Constitution.

By DONALD DAVIDSON.

Imagination is at a discount nowadays. People do not want stories, one hears, or any sort of myth, legend or poetry. They want something hard and scientific and real. Don't let the children get hold of Cinderella, say the progressive educators, for that incredible old thing will do something bad to their psychological complexes.

Life would certainly be more peaceful for southerners if this were true. One would then know what to say to northerners who insist on asking whether Erskine Caldwell's spectacular stories of southern life are "really true." One could answer them by saying, "Mr. Caldwell is a story-teller. If you believe Cinderella, then believe Mr. Caldwell."

But nowadays one gets nowhere with such an answer. Our northern friends and foes (as well as some southerners) may often be skeptics in religion, but they are downright fundamentalists when they read fiction. They want to treat fiction as fact, and then, vice versa, to treat fact as fiction. They take the southern novel of our day as social history. And they view authentic history, no matter how laboriously buttressed with documents, as a dubious myth. The novel as social history then becomes, as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did once, the starting point of social action, and the "real" history gets waved back into some region of fancy or inaction—the library or the classroom. This is one of the penalties of being civilized, in 1936.

What, then, is a southerner to say when the accusing finger lifted from between the pages of "Tobacco Road" and "God's Little Acres," wags with the charge: "So this is your boasted southern civilization! Lester Jeeter and his hare-lipped daughter, starving and depraved! Ty Ty and his clan, digging aimlessly for gold, their only pleasure an abandoned, animal-like sexual indulgence! Innocent negroes foully abused! Harmless old men eaten by hogs!" For so runs Mr. Caldwell's tale. And he is a native southerner, not a Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Type in Minority.

There are two possible answers, one matter-of-fact and one literary. The matter-of-fact answer is simple. The south has always had its quota of Jeeters and Tys Tys—unlucky and misbegotten souls. But a southerner would swear that they are a small minority—a minority of about the same proportions as the Simon Legrees over whom the north raged in the 1850's.

If Jeeters and Ty Tys have increased betwene 1850 and 1936, as is possible, the responsibility is by no means entirely southern. The same forces that built the towers of New York imposed upon the south a system favorable to the multiplication of Jeeters and Ty Tys. Whenever the towers of New York are content to give up a part of what makes them so splendid, then the south can. . . .

But this argument will get nowhere with a really determined Caldwellite. He will simply insist that the south continue to support the towers of New York and at the same time clean up old man Jeeter—take out his tonsils, equip him with sanitary plumbing and electric refrigeration, and put the hare-lipped daughter under the care of the county health service and the consolidated school. But I think it

POPE TO URGE PEACE ON 79TH YEAR TODAY

Weakening Pontiff Will Call for Intensive Drive on Communism.

By HENRY GORRELL.
(Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.)

VATICAN CITY, May 30.—(UP) Pope Pius XI tonight was ready to celebrate his seventy-ninth birthday tomorrow with a renewed appeal for world peace and increased vigilance against the communist menace.

"The missionary pope," known to be weakening as he wages a struggle against infirmities of age, allows none to think that he is relaxing the vigor with which during his 14 years as vicar of Christ he has battled communism and preached the extermination of war as methods of remedying the world's ills.

Vatican officials expected the pontiff would take advantage of the presence of thousands of the faithful gathered from all parts of the world to attend the birthday ceremonies to set the pace for a new Catholic drive having the double purpose of dealing a death blow to communism and averting a European conflict.

Birthday Message.

Contrary to previous announcements indicating the pontiff would broadcast his birthday messages, it was decided tonight that his appeals would be directed to a large group of Catholics and dignitaries of the church during an afternoon audience in the Vatican's consistorial hall.

Tomorrow's services will be more elaborate than any attending the pope's birthday in recent years. At 10:30 a. m. the holy father will be carried in the gestatorial chair to the basilica of St. Peter's, where he will witness celebration of the high mass by Gennaro Granito Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte, dean of the college of cardinals. The public will be admitted.

It was recalled in this connection that on Easter day the pontiff did not participate in the five-hour ceremonies at St. Peter's because physicians had cautioned him against overstrain.

After a series of private audiences Sunday the pope will greet Catholic delegates and deliver what is expected to prove a most important speech.

Will Dine Alone.

The holy father will adhere to his custom of dining alone. However, Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, will preside over a gala birthday dinner in honor of the diplomats accredited to the Holy See.

The occasion will mark the third time the Vatican's secretary of state has offered dinner under the reign of Pope Pius. The first was the occasion of the celebration marking conclusion of the Lateran pact under which the Italian government and the Vatican reconciled their differences.

Sunday evening the basilica of St. Peter's will be illuminated gaily to mark the birthday.

Monday morning Catholic delegates will gather from various nations for discussion of numerous important problems faced by the Catholic action movement.

Welcomes Visits.

The pope is understood to have rejected elaborate plans for world-wide celebration of his birthday because he does not desire to break precedent. There was no indication that the pontiff would sanction designation of the coming 12 months as a jubilee year.

It was known, however, that pilgrimages to Rome will be encouraged during the coming year because of the pope's desire to further cement personal contacts with leaders of the movement to propagate the Catholic faith.

O'BRIEN RENOMINATED FOR U. S. TARIFF POST

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt sent to the senate today the nomination of Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Massachusetts republican, for reappointment to the tariff commission.

Senator Coolidge, democrat, Massachusetts, yesterday withdrew his opposition to the reappointment at the President's request. Coolidge had contended that O'Brien, as chairman, and other members of the commission were responsible for lowering duties on many manufactured articles to the detriment of New England.

O'Brien recently suggested that the republican party indorse President Roosevelt's reciprocal trade treaty program.

Sho 'Nuff Hill-Billies Seek New York Fame

Hill-billying is our business, said these three youngsters when they dropped in at police headquarters yesterday afternoon on their way to amateur contest glories in New York. They entertained the officers with an unending repertoire of "good old mountain music," and promised to play at the police barbecue Wednesday. They are, left to right, Troy Bryant, 7; Ben Atkinson, 13 and Junior Bryant, 11. Troy and Junior live near Moultrie and Ben is an Atlanta city cousin. Staff photo.

Budding "Professional Amateurs" To Play Here at Police Barbecue

A radio team in the making dropped in at the Atlanta police headquarters yesterday afternoon and "hill-billied" on their violin and guitar until the officers voted a unanimous "mighty fine" and invited the three youngsters to play at the annual police barbecue at Lakewood park Wednesday afternoon.

The boys were Junior Bryant, 11, and his brother, Troy Bryant, 7, who live near Moultrie, and their city cousin, Ben Atkinson, 13, of 528 Oakland avenue, Atlanta.

Between numbers which varied in character from the song of a lonely and heart-broken mountain youth to the flying rhythm of an old-fashioned "breakdown" the boys allowed they were on their way to New York to become "professional amateurs." Winning an amateur contest would be as easy as wading a creek after a long dry spell, the youngsters opined and their only worry was getting the New York.

But they aren't much worried by that even, they declared, because Ben and Junior have had a lot of experience getting from one place to another during the past three summers, when they would travel from city to city over the south playing wherever there was a post to prop against.

The enthralled policemen declared they "never heard anything like it before" and would not let the boys go until they promised to play for the barbecue.

The Moultrie boys' father, Ivy Bryant, is in Atlanta with them and they are all living at 319 Pryor street until transportation to New York turns up.

A glance inside the ancient violin almost caused a reporter to have heart-failure. An inscription read, "Special model, Antonius Stradivarius." Closer inspection, however, showed that it must have been a very special model indeed of the Mr. Stradivarius.

Asked where he got the violin, Junior replied:

"A lady in Moultrie gave it to me. I don't know her name, but she dug it out of an old closet and now I'm going on the radio with it. What do you want us to play next?"

Bannister Swears Out Warrant As Ann Harding, Daughter Sail

Actress Outwits Former Mate in Trans-Continental Race; Ex-Husband Charges He Is Illegally Deprived of Daughter.

QUEBEC, May 30.—(UP)—Ann Harding and her seven-year-old daughter, Jane Bannister, on board the S. S. Duchess of Athol steaming out of the St. Lawrence river to the open sea, were in full flight to England tonight while her divorced husband prepared for a court battle to bring them back.

Bewildered and angered by being outsmarted in a transcontinental race, Harry Bannister, the divorced husband who objected to being known as "Mr. Ann Harding," swore out a warrant for the arrest of the blond film star charging that she was illegally depriving him of his daughter.

Then, after his attorney and a detective had searched the liner on which Miss Harding originally was to sail, he returned to New York. His attorney said that whether they would seek extradition of Miss Harding would depend on whether she would agree to have the child back in the United States by December 10.

The blond film star, victor in a transcontinental race with Bannister, an actor, was en route to England to make a picture. Bannister charged that she was going there to take a permanent residence so that he never again could see their daughter, a privilege, he says, that was granted him when the couple was divorced. Miss Harding, denying his right to have custody of the child two months each year, said that she paid Bannister $100,000 to renounce the right and that, although he accepted the cash offer, he now was trying to boost the ante.

Both arrived here yesterday. Miss Harding and Jane came from California by train. Bannister and his attorney flew here from New York and promptly began a series of skirmishes in which Miss Harding completely outwitted them by sailing ahead of schedule.

Fuming over the defeat, Bannister swore out a warrant for the arrest of his former wife on the charge that she was unlawfully depriving him of opportunity to see their child. He and his attorney, Stanley J. Harte, asserted that Miss Harding and the child did not sail on the Duchess of Athol last night but were aboard the Empress of Australia, which sails for England tonight.

While Bannister was leaving superior court where Judge Laetare Roy signed the warrant, the United Press received a wireless from the master of the Duchess of Athol verifying the fact that Miss Harding and the child wre aboard the liner and that the next stop would be Southampton, England.

Bannister immediately announced that he would invoke the fugitive offenders' act in an attempt to force her to return here with the child.

The warrant, the first step in what threatens to be a spectacular transatlantic court battle, charged Miss Harding "with intent to deprive the father of Jane Bannister of possession of Jane Bannister, a child under the age of 14 years and did unlawfully detain and take away the said child."

It charged that her action violated a section of the criminal code relating to custody of children of divorced parents. Section 314 of the Canadian criminal code makes it an indictable offense punishable by five years in prison to take away from possession of her family any female child under the age of 16 without the consent of the father or mother.

Appears in Court.

Harte and a Canadian attorney accompanied Bannister before Judge Roy. He told the court that under terms of the separation agreement, which included a $100,000 payment to him, he was to have had custody of the child two months each year but that since their divorce in 1932 he had seen his daughter but twice and then for only brief intervals.

"There is no vindictiveness in my seeking to have Miss Harding detained," he said. "My only object is to see my lovely daughter again and have her companionship."

With the warrant Harte and Rene Chateauneuf, a provincial detective, went to the Empress of Australia late today an hour before the steamer sailed. Refusing to believe that Miss Harding had sailed on the Duchess of Athol, Bannister ordered them to search the liner.

They searched the ship from stem to stern and from top to bottom but failed to find her. Ship officers were not inclined to aid the attorney, advising him merely that Miss Harding had a reservation for Suite 145 on B deck but had cancelled it.

Searched All Cabins.

Detective Chateauneuf went to the cabin to find baggage belonging to Mrs. George Murchie. Then, on the theory that Miss Harding had changed cabins, Harte and the detective started the search all over again. They opened cabin doors on all decks, heard themselves called names by irate occupants and even went to the sailors quarters and to the control room.

Assured again that Miss Harding had sailed last night, Bannister called off the search after posing for cameramen in the cabin originally reserved for Miss Harding. Then he went to the airport to return to New York.

Harte issued a statement before leaving in which he said that Bannister hoped that he would not be driven to such an extreme as swearing out a warrant charging abduction.

"The sole object of the hurried trip to Quebec was to get Miss Harding to sign a statement that she would return the child to the United States by December 10 and allow his daughter to visit him at his New Jersey farm," the attorney said.

Lie Is Charged.

"Miss Harding's attorney deliberately lied to us by leading us to believe that she was still in Quebec. He stalled us until 2 a. m. today before announcing that she had sailed on another boat. It was another subterfuge typical of those which have marked this case from the very beginning."

Harte said that his next step would be determined after his arrival in New York.

"We hope that we will have some real assurance from Miss Harding which will not make it necessary for us to ask her extradition from England," he said.

Miss Harding's attorney called at the Empress of Australia pier shortly after noon and arranged to have her trunks and luggage, left behind in her hurried departure on the other liner, forwarded to London. When the Empress of Australia sailed Miss Harding was 350 miles down the St. Lawrence river. The liner passed Rimouski early today, the last possible place where she could have been apprehended in Canadian territory.

MISS HARDING DEFIES DIVORCED HUSBAND

Editors' Note: Ann Harding, blond film actress, in the following dispatch challenges her divorced husband, Harry Bannister, to obtain a court order demanding her return to face a legal contest over custody of their daughter.

By ANN HARDING.
(Written for the United Press.)

ABOARD DUCHESS OF ATHOLL, AT SEA, May 30.—(UP) I fear no charges or court hearings in Canada, the United States or anywhere else in the world as I have the full custody of my daughter, Jane Bannister, granted me by the superior court in California and a court order specifically approving this trip.

My Canadian attorneys advised me that Harry Bannister might wangle several weeks' postponement of my trip to England while the Canadian courts reviewed my documents. There is no question as to the ultimate results, but I could not afford to delay as my contract with an English film company requires that I report in London not later than June 8.

Therefore, I merely availed myself of the earlier sailing aboard the liner Duchess of Atholl instead of the Empress of Australia to comply with these contractual obligations.

All Saints To Observe 33d Birthday at Services Today.

Members of All Saints church this morning will celebrate the thirty-third anniversary of the founding of their parish. A special musical program will be presented by the choir and Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector, will relate the history of the church since it was named on May 31, 1903.

Ground was broken for the present church building on November 16, 1904, and on April 8, 1906, the congregation of All Saints church held the first regular service in the new edifice, situated at West Peachtree street and North avenue.

The movement for establishing the church began in 1901, when Mrs. Richard Peters notified Bishop C. K. Nelson, of the diocese of Georgia, that she would give 175 square feet at West Peachtree and North avenue to be used for church purposes, as a memorial to her husband. In less than three years the cornerstone of a chapel was laid on the lot by Bishop Nelson.

The first service in the chapel was conducted May 31, 1903, by Bishop Nelson. The bishop announced that a service would be held that night, but the service was called off because of a severe thunderstorm that broke the electric wiring in the church. Despite the storm, about 50 persons gathered for a conference, at which the bishop himself sugested the name "All Saints."

Since the founding of the church in 1906, a parish house has been built on another piece of land given by the late Mrs. Peters. In addition, the parish now owns the property in the rear of the church building, which fronts 60 feet on North avenue, and the rectory at 168 Peachtree circle.

Madam—

There Is No Set Formula For

Permanent Waves

A Free Test Curl will not insure you a good wave—Permanent Waves must be personalized, all characteristics and activities of the individual considered before permanents are given.

At the Artistic Wave Shop you are considered as an Individual, and your Individual problems are solved by experts, trained not only in the Craft of Beauty Culture but also in the Art of Permanent Waving.

Our waves are prescribed for your hair—your features, your Individual personality, just as your physician prescribes for your health.

For the past 15 years the Artistic Waves have been the talk of the South—they are soft, natural-looking waves with perfect ringlet ends—waves that give to your hair the grace and dignity of an original creation.

Don't make the common mistake of taking your hair just anywhere to have it waved—the lustre—sheen—the alluring loveliness of your hair depends on the permanent you get. The Individual beauty of an Artistic Permanent Wave is now within easy reach of every woman.

Nation's Retail Trade Shows Gain; Industry Postpones Summer Lull

Consumer Buying in Atlanta Brings Record Upturn; Seasonal Apparel is in Brisk Demand.

By THOMAS E. FLANAGAN,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

Despite cool weather in some regions, the nation's retail trade gained last week, while industry, aided by heavy goods demand, stubbornly postponed its march toward the usual summer decline.

Although chilly spells in scattered districts tended to slow the retail buying pace, the swelling tide of summer buying served to push the country's general consumer demand to levels from 10 to 15 per cent ahead of the like week of 1935, according to an authoritative trade report.

With farmer cash income expanding and soldiers' bonus payments ahead, wholesalers enjoyed materially heavier volume.

Industrial activity, in terms of the Associated Press seasonally adjusted index, was slightly lower at 89.0 compared with 89.2 the previous week.

Somewhat slower steel mill operations which reflected a trifling loss in automobile output tended to weigh the index down a little, but the sharply better than seasonal advance in residential building afforded strong support.

Automobile output, estimated by Cram's, totaled 108,346 units, compared with 109,821 last week and 65,675 in the like week a year ago.

Meanwhile reports from the automobile industry showed pay rolls in April at the highest peak since the spring of 1929.

Notwithstanding the decline in steel mill activity from 69.4 to 67.9 per cent of capacity, steel leaders gathered at the spring meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute in New York said second quarter earnings should top those of the first three months.

Furthermore, they forecast further production gains throughout June as the probable result of buying to fill requirements in advance of the scheduled third quarter rise in prices.

Also from this sector of the industrial front came word of employment gains. At Youngstown a canvass disclosed that most mills are employing more men than in 1929.

Freight carloadings for the week ended May 23 pushed ahead to a new high for the year at 683,406 cars, a gain of 0.3 per cent over the preceding week and 14.2 per cent over the like week of last year.

Along with the heavier movement of freight were sharp railroad net operating income rises for April over a year ago. Also encouraging were preliminary estimates that important systems would hold or improve gross returns in May.

Detailed reports on trade by individual federal reserve districts follow:

ATLANTA — Consumer buying brought record gains over the preceding week and a year ago. Home furnishings and summer apparel were in brisk demand.

CHICAGO—Ideal weather aided retail trade and business held its wide margin of improvement over a year ago. Gains ran as high as 25 per cent. Mail order volume continued at or near record levels.

NEW YORK—Department store sales maintained April levels, thus resisting the normal tendency to decline. Retail collections were better than a year ago, while wholesale collections were even.

BOSTON—Wool had a slight revival, although trade authorities expressed concern that rising prices might bring an increased demand for substitutes. The leather trade was quiet.

PHILADELPHIA—With the exception of textile activity which tapered off, other industrials lines kept recent gains. Favorable weather helped retail business maintain its advantage over a year ago.

RICHMOND—Cool weather pulled retail turnover down. Wholesale trade held its ground, aided by price stability.

CLEVELAND — Steel operations were steady in spite of the usual tendency to slacken at this time. The machine tool industry turned in a good record.

ST. LOUIS—Employment expanded, especially in farming, building and railroad divisions. Home rents rose. The strawberry crop was cut by lack of moisture.

KANSAS CITY—Preliminary figures for five leading wholesale lines show May sales about 20 per cent ahead of last year. This was the largest increase in several years.

DALLAS—The Dallas Railway & Terminal Company restored its 10 per cent pay cut to 750 employes. Rains deluged Texas. The entire state prepared for the influx of visitors with the opening of the Dallas Centennial scheduled for next Saturday.

SAN FRANCISCO—West coast trade was uneven although generally a little above last year. Industry was steady, building active, and cement and lumber output double last year. The potato market boomed to a 10-year peak.

MINNEAPOLIS—Weather stimulated building activity. Hardware sales scored marked upturns with some gains running 20 per cent ahead of a year ago.

BUSINESS TO BENEFIT BY BONUS, SOLON SAYS

Special Machinery Used by Government to Prepare Checks.

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—Printing presses banged out checks at the rate of more than 1,000 an hour tonight as the Treasury made last-minute preparations for June 15 when the first of 3,500,000 World War veterans present bonus bonds for payment in cash.

Special machinery hummed without cease 24 hours a day preparing checks, currency and bonds expected by businessmen to start unprecedented nation-wide spending.

By the time the last penny of the soldier's bonus has been paid the Treasury cost will reach $2,300,000,000. Merchants laid in extra stocks, reflecting upon the words of Representative Wright Patman, democrat, Texas, who said:

"This will be new and added purchasing power that will quickly flow into the channels of trade and producing and not only help the veterans, but help everybody."

Threat of Inflation.

Unofficial estimates indicated tonight that industrial marts in five great metropolitan states will receive the first full thrust of the bonus boom. These include the marketing centers in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Ohio where not quite $750,000,000 is expected to be added to circulation when the veterans cash their bonds.

While the Treasury completed final groundwork for the flotation of a $1,000,000,000 cash loan, for which subscriptions will be taken Monday in the largest single peace-time financing operation in American history, Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr. and officials of the Federal Reserve System studied ways to suppress undue credit inflationary tendencies which might arise when the great pay-off comes.

Aware of the recurrent rise in excess reserves, the federal government will seek to avoid any additional impetus to this ticklish tendency when bonus payments begin to pour out.

The system's open market committee conferred last week with Morgenthau on the handling of the financial aspects of the world's greatest check-cashing operation.

Won't Touch Reserve.

It was indicated that the most satisfactory way to pay off the bonds would be to draw upon federal cash already deposited in commercial banks. If the funds are withdrawn from government balances with federal reserve institutions and transferred to the private accounts of the veterans in commercial banks, an enormous upsurge in reserves would necessarily arise.

The final commitment of the government to bonus payment will cost $2,300,000,000 all told. It is expected that about $1,700,000,000 will go directly to the soldiers and that $500,000,000 will be transferred to the adjusted service certificate fund. About $60,000,000 will be paid to banks who have loaned money on veterans' bonds.

No accurate estimates have been made on the velocity with which money will pour out into merchandise and industry or how great a proportion of the total cash payment will be made this summer. However, businessmen are looking for vast upswing counting upon strong impetus from bonus money to create at least a short-lived "boom" upon the foundation of steadily improving trade.

The best available unofficial estimates indicated tonight that the bonus will be distributed among the states, and veterans in the proportions listed below:

GERMANY MAY CONTROL BIG MUNITIONS PLANT

Leaders Declare Nationalization Leans Toward Peace.

BERLIN, May 30.—(AP)—Nationalization of German arms factories is under discussion as a stroke to help the reich hold her own in the next war. This would mean the bringing into the hands of the state of such big munitions plants as the world-famous Krupp and Thyssen Works.

Nazi party leftwingers are for it but army men are against it. Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has not yet stepped in to umpire the dispute.

Military men hold that German industrialists have shown themselves public spirited enough to be relied upon to make guns and munitions as fast and as well as desired.

Criticize View.

Socialistically minded nazis criticize this view and call for nationalization not only of munitions plants but of all industrial trusts. They say that the new German state leads toward state control similar to that which Premier Mussolini recently put through in Italy and that nationalization is directed towards peace while private operation tends in the other direction. Munition makers, they say, have an interest in pushing the nation into trouble.

Bound up with this is a whole new conception of preparedness called "wehrwirtschaft" which is occupying the attention of military men and party leaders.

"Wehrdwirtschaft," as defined by its authors, is the organization of the nation to the nth degree for what authorized general staff spokesmen call the "coming totalitarian war" which "more than likely will be long." By "totalitarian war" is meant one in which every ounce of the nation's energy will be mobilized under strong unified leadership.

Private enterprise, however, forms the basis of "wehrwirtschaft" as developed by army men instead of full state control as desired by the left wing nazis.

Basis of New Drive.

The optimism of the kaiser and his staff as to the probable length of the war in 1914, forms the basis of the new desire to be well prepared for the next struggle.

A "wehrwirtschaft" office is at work in the war ministry to bind the nation into a working unit to support the defense forces. Everything is being delved into, from a survey of birth rate and physical and spiritual development of human beings, to the growing of potatoes, conservation of raw materials and manufacture of submarines.

As Hitler's new army sees it, rearming is not merely the increasing of guns, but a planned marshaling of all phases of life under the same strong rule as the army itself. This is explained as a fundamental principle of the "totalitarian state."

Sold Patents.

"Before the idea of developing the nation into one unit came into being," said Colonel George Thomas, head of the "wehrwirtschaft" office in the war ministry, "inventors sold their valuable patents abroad, contractors built without regard to military needs, promotors dealt solely with the interest of stockholders in mind and public employes had their own interests in view.

"In short, self-interest was trump in all affairs and if the soldier asked for something for the purpose of defending the country, he met opposition and considerable lack of understanding."

"The whole nation," says Colonel Thomas, who is attached to the general staff, "must be instructed and the consciousness of responsibility instilled."

NEW YORK, May 30.—The month closing Sunday has added much to the market values of securities, offsetting the losses of April. A considerable part of the decline that started in March has been recovered.

There is still an absence of the speculative enthusiasm that ruled for over a year, for both professionals and the public are not disposed to make commitments of any size on the eve of the political conventions and with such a tense situation prevailing throughout Europe. It is evidence of the improved technical condition of the market for stocks and for junior bonds that they have stood their ground so well under discouraging conditions and when the dullness in Wall Street carried a bearish implication.

Business Index High.

In spite of a decline in iron and steel output, the general business index stands at about the highest of the year. Aside from the remarkable proportions of retail trade in nearly every section of the United States, reflecting, no doubt, the approaching soldier bonus payments, the two factors that give new encouragement to industry are the expansion in railroad car loadings and the revival in building. Current loadings make a new high record for 1936. They are 15 per cent better than a year ago. April net operating income was 20 per cent above that for the corresponding period 1935. A number of systems that have paid no dividends since 1930-31 are considering a moderate disbursement to their patient stockholders within a few months.

A substantial part of the increased employment last month was due to more demand for durable goods and to a rising tide in the building industry. In April, residential construction contracts were about 60 per cent more than last year. Nothing like a building boom is anticipated; rather a steady broadening out of the demands for residential projects, especially of the low cost home type. There is still too much high cost property on the market at sacrifice values to permit the speculative contractor to extend his commitments. The banks, insurance companies and building and loan associations are proceeding cautiously with respect to new developments. The weak situations in real estate, however, are gradually being adjusted. Improvement in them during 1936 will help the building outlook for 1937.

Supreme Court an Issue.

With Chief Justice Hughes this week aligning himself with the minority of the United States supreme court in its adverse decision in the municipal bankruptcy case, the layman is more confused than ever by the apparent lack of a uniform judgment by this court on questions that appear to contain a common problem in law. The platform adopted by the socialist party at Cleveland includes a plank asking for a constitutional amendment limiting the powers of the court and protecting social legislation. Arthur Krock, in the New York Times of May 26, says the court is recessing next Monday "to go more or less on trial in a presidential campaign for the first time in years." The outbreak of labor troubles this week is said to be due to irritation over the recent decision in the Guffey coal case. Comparisons of the platforms of the two parties, with respect to the court and its prerogatives, will be interesting.

Clear French Plan.

Next week should bring a clearer notion of what the French government proposes to do in the matter of supporting its currency. The trend of franc exchange the last few days suggests devaluation for the discount on futures has reached nearly 30 per cent. In Hungary, de facto devaluation occurred. Flight of capital from Holland was reflected in a heavy loss of gold by the Bank of Netherlands. The gain of the communists in Belgium affected Belgian currency, while London markets were somewhat disturbed by the outbreak of the Arab population in Palestine. Each week furnishes some evidence of the great safety of American capital compared with that of foreign nations.

On this basis, the treasury is again able to sell a large amount of new bonds and notes to retire about $1,000,000,000 of outstanding loans and provide for additional working capital. Recently, nearly all of the long-term treasury issues have sold at record prices. This makes desirable the refunding at an early date, and with the advantage of the current low interest rates, of a considerable proportion of the short-term government debt. Nearly $5,000,000,000 of such paper matures in the next year. It would seem to be a hazardous policy for Secretary Morgenthau to permit this cheap money period to lapse without provision for substituting treasury notes for bonds even at some increase in the immediate cost of such refunding.

Bond Investment Income Cut.

Among the corporation offerings this week was an issue of $55,000,000 Brooklyn Edison 3 1-4 per cent Consolidated Mortgage bonds, the proceeds of which are to retire an equal amount of General Mortgage 5 per cents. This effects an annual saving for the borrower of about $1,000,000. But what does it do to the individual lender? On each $1,000 bond, it cuts down his income $17.50, or 35 per cent. Four of the large life insurance companies held, at the end of 1935, approximately $12,000,000 of the old Brooklyn Edison bonds. If they take the new ones, their annual earnings will shrink by $210,000.

It was shown in a recent series of articles by this writer how, in 1935, life insurance income had been sharply reduced by reason of unprecedented refundings, primarily of power and light bonds, and by the increase in investments in United States treasury notes and bonds. As a result, one life company last year realized an average of only 2.85 per cent on its investments, compared with a five-year average previous to 1935 of 3.60 per cent, while another was forced to replace bonds that had returned an average income of 3.80 per cent with new issues on an average basis of 2.55 per cent. From present indications, the results in 1936 will be even less favorable, as many urban and farm mortgages held by the insurance companies are being refinanced at a lower interest rate.

If a corporation is able to borrow at 3 1-4 per cent, and thereby can pay off loans costing 5 per cent, and does not have to retire outstanding bonds at too high a call price or accept too much of a discount for the new ones, this is the prudent policy to pursue. There are indications, however, that underwriters are unduely stimulating the refunding process. Not all of the new issues have been a success.

It was admitted this week by a partner in one of the largest investment houses in the country that the prices at which bonds are now being brought out are high and that they will undoubtedly decline. "But," he said, "the banker is not responsible for the high level at which investment securities are selling today. The government itself, by the various ways in which it has contributed toward easy money, is one of the responsible factors."

Street Blames Washington.

Wall Street says to the harassed investor, who complains of a dropping income on his securities: "Don't blame us. Blame Washington." As if easy money—money the lowest during this generation—were unknown to other financial centers of the world than New York.

Actually, money is lower in London than it is here, and investment securities there are on a lower yield basis. To a certain extent, the Bank of England and the London joint stock banks have made money cheap to facilitate the government's relief and armament program. But the unusual supply of money, even in the countries of the "gold bloc," is due to tariff barriers and a war complex, resulting in stagnation or strangulation in world trade.

So, even if the United States treasury should, at the end of this fiscal year, adopt a balanced budget policy and adhere to it, it is doubtful if, for months to come, there would be any great change in interest rates over the country as a whole. And we have to admit that there have been benefits from easy money and from the competitive pressure that the government has put on lenders who insisted on exacting the old-time rates from corporation and real estate borrowers long after it was apparent that the world was in an era of low interest returns. An illustration is the $3,704,000,000 loaned farmers by the Farm Credit Administration in the last three years to liquidate other loans at higher carrying cost.

Another Phase.

There is another phase of the present corporation bond refunding activity that deeply affects the investor. the Brooklyn Edison 3 1-4 per cent bonds may be called at any semi-annual interest date on 30 days' notice. This is a shorter period than most, but in the Standard Oil of New Jersey 3 per cent indenture, there is a similar provision. It makes new securities of this character, what James Truslow Adams calls "short commercial paper," not a true long-term investment. It is plausible to expect that it drives some investors into common stocks, either for larger yield or for appreciation sufficient to cover income loss. From every angle, therefore, the borrower has the day's advantage over the lender. That more permanency may be given to new issues, the SEC might well demand in all a period of at least five years before a call to retire would be valid. From the investor's standpoint, this is more important than much of the required regulations supposedly for the greater security of the buyer.

Earnings.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Paramount Pictures, Inc., reported net income of $718,921 for the quarter ended March 31. Of the excess cost of certain pictures for which a reserve was provided out of earnings in 1935, about $800,000 was charged to operations for the quarter and a similar amount of the reserve was credited to operations.

For the first quarter of last year an audited report was not available due to the company's reorganization, but earnings were estimated at $1,472,000.

STEADINESS IN COTTON IMPARTED BY BUYING

Holiday at Other World Markets Keeps Trading at Low Ebb.

NEW ORLEANS SPOT COTTON.
NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—Spot cotton closed steady, 2 points up. Sales 1,582; low middling 10.73; middling 11.33; good middling 12.43.

AVERAGE PRICE.
NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—(AP)—The average price of middling cotton today at four southern spot markets was 11.71 cents a pound. (Other markets closed, holiday.)

NEW ORLEANS, May 30.—(AP)—Scattered buying in near positions imparted steadiness to the cotton market today but prices held around former closing levels during the two hours of dealings.

At the close October was a point higher at 10.54. December was net unchanged at 10.46, while January at 10.45 and May at 10.46 bid, reflected little net change for the day.

The holiday in other important world markets tended to keep dealings at New Orleans at a low ebb. Purchasing that did develop was mostly for trade account, while a moderate amount of hedge selling met ready takers. Continued dryness in the eastern part of the belt and a bullish goods report aided the buying side.

At the start the market appeared headed for a moderate decline as active options dipped below their previous close on evening-up operations on the part of speculative interests for over the week-end. But the minor recessions were soon recovered and the market worked back to its previous close.

Most important of the overnight news items was the Commodity Credit Corporation's report on loan sales and pool holdings. The government announced that 926,307 bales of loan cotton had been contracted for, somewhat of a surprise to most of the trade who had expected the figure would exceed the million-bale mark. Pool holdings were placed at 441,900 bales of futures and 256,407 bales of spots.

A halt to the heavy rainfall in the western part of the belt, notably Oklahoma and Texas, partially offset the bullish influence of continued dry weather in the Carolinas and north Georgia.

Reports from interior markets told of an easier basis for most grades of spot cotton. Greenwood, Miss., however, reported demand for most all grades of staple continued good. Demand from domestic mills for certain grades picked up at New Orleans during the past week also. Offerings continued liberal, however, mostly from the loan holdings.

Port receipts 12,410; season 6,861,371; last season 4,332,348. Exports

STRIKERS RELAX HOLD ON PARIS ARMS MILLS

60,000 Evacuate Plants After Crippling Government's Rearmament.

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—The government announced tonight that 60,000 strikers who had been occupying French factories had evacuated them after independent agreements had been reached with their employers.

The decision was announced just before midnight. A conference between union officials and employers to draft elective contracts for metal workers was called for tomorrow.

Agreements still were to be reached with 10,000 other workers.

Earlier France's strikers were given the unanimous backing of Leon Blum's socialist party.

The party opened its thirty-third congress in Huygens hall and a resolution was read which greeted "the magnificent movement of the French metal trade workers, solidly lined up in defense of their freedom."

Blum, prospective premier, did not appear at the opening meeting of the party. Instead, he attended a gathering of the socialist parliamentary group, of which he was elected president.

A coincident strike in a large Paris restaurant also led to unconfirmed reports a general walkout of waiters and cooks was imminent.

Fifty factories were affected, including the French subsidiaries of the American S. K. F. Steels and Goodrich Rubber concerns.

In two cases, company officials were reported held prisoners in their own factories by workers.

The strikers want higher wages and a shorter work week.

ETHIOPIAN BONDS OFFERED BY ITALY

Mussolini Seeks Foreign Cash to Develop Conquest.

ROME, May 30.—(AP)—Italy's cabinet opened the credit development of Ethiopia to the rest of the world today.

The ministers approved creation of a Public Works Credit Institute in the African "possession," with the power to issue bonds in both Italian and foreign currencies.

Financial sources said the action meant the institute might offer the bonds in foreign markets, to bring in much-needed foreign exchange.

The institute will be capitalized at 100,000,000 lire (about $7,000,000).

Il Duce's ministers also provided 50,000,000 lire (around $3,500,000) for housing of government employes in Ethiopia. At the same time, the Italo-Ethiopian administration, in Addis Ababa, forbade the export of thalers ande precious metals.

MAN BADLY WOUNDED IN GAS STATION FIGHT

Jeff Smith Shot in Scuffle With Operator; No Charges Are Booked.

A man was shot and seriously wounded at about 8 o'clock last night by the operator of a gasoline station at Piedmont avenue and Cain street, according to police, during a scuffle over alleged refusal to pay for gasoline.

The wounded man was listed at Grady hospital as Jeff Smith, 30, of 61 Waddell stret, N. E. He was shot with a .38-caliber pistol, the bullet striking the left arm and penetrating the chest.

According to Radio Patrolmen J. M. Jones and R. L. Mosley, his assailant was B. G. Glass, 38, of 503 Wabash avenue, N. E. Glass told police that Smith and two other men, with three women in the car, drove into the station and asked how much gasoline could be bought for $1.

He told them, he said, and filled the tank with the fuel. The men then refused to pay, and one of them began to beat him in the station's office. He fought back, he said, until one of the other men ran in and also began to beat him. The shooting followed.

The occupants of the car fled. Later the radio patrolmen picked up a man who gave his name as Carroll Meadows, 29, of 653 Highland avenue, N. E. He was charged with suspicion of fighting. No charges were booked against Glass.

M'KELLAR WOULD TAKE AIR MAIL FROM I. C. C.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Chairman McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, of the senate postoffices and post roads committee, proposed in a bill today to eliminate the Interstate Commerce Commission's co-authority with the postmaster general over air mail contracts.

McKellar's bill would take from the I. C. C. the power to fix rates of compensation for transportation of mail by airplane and would amend other sections of the 1934 air mail act.

"There ought not to be a divided authority and this bill is intended to end that," McKellar said.

The INSIDE STORY of

The 1936 Republican and Democratic Political Battle

To keep you well informed, from the first shot in this year's presidential political battle, THE CONSTITUTION'S regular superior news-gathering facilities have been augmented with an imposing array of political "news hounds" who will bring to you each day the last-minute happenings from every session (and many off-the-record sessions) at both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

At the Republican Convention, which opens June 9, in Cleveland, and the Democratic Convention, opening June 23, in Philadelphia, The CONSTITUTION will be represented by nearly a hundred nationally famous political writers. To read their realistic stories and profound interpretations, and their apt forecasts of what may be expected will equal, if not exceed, actual presence in the convention halls. They will give you the inside, the outside, the low-down and much you might miss if you were there.

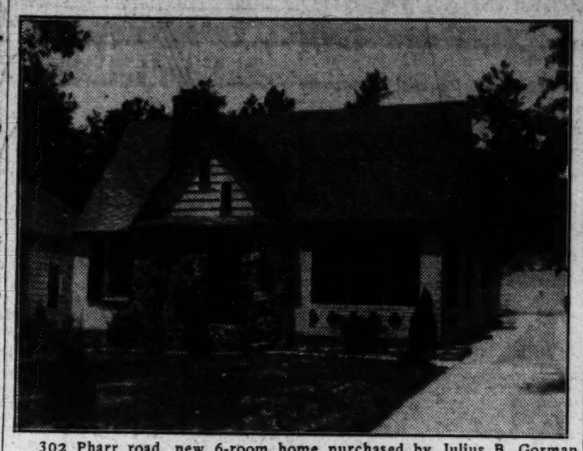

Gladstone Williams, The CONSTITUTION'S Washington correspondent, whose "scoops" appear regularly in this newspaper, will be at both conventions to give you his views of the "inside" on things Georgia folk want to know . . . Paul Mallon, that brilliant Washington columnist, whose "News Behind the News" is a daily CONSTITUTION feature which has lifted him to enviable heights as a political commentator, will make his way inside and through the smoke-filled back rooms that he may tell you today what tomorrow's headlines will be . . . And, Glenn Ramsey, a native Georgian, who for six years has starred as a political writer on the Atlanta staff of the Associated Press, will follow every move of the Georgia delegations—Democrats and Republicans—from the time they leave for Cleveland and Philadelphia until they return. His personal acquaintance with all of Georgia's leading politicians enables him to give you first-hand information on all developments, especially those affecting the home state.

In the heat of battle, from start to finish, The CONSTITUTION will have representation by the nation's most renowned political writers. Those veteran behind-the-scene newsmen of the world's greatest news-gathering organizations, the dominant Associated Press, the United Press, North American Newspaper Alliance and the Central Press Association. The ablest from each of these great organizations will be there . . . men, and women, too, who from years of experience in watching the machinery of political conventions can and will give you understandable stories of the strategy and issues at both conventions . . . They will tell you what you want to know of the great national political personalities and what-why-when and where of each day's happenings.

The CONSTITUTION'S more elaborate preparation for covering these two great events is done only to assure you of complete knowledge of everything that happens, and remember it will reach you while it is still NEWS!

Conventions or otherwise—you get all the news first in The CONSTITUTION.

CONCEALED BANDIT USED IN RIDE-ROBBERY

Something new in the technique of ride-and-rob banditry was reported to police last night by H. M. Guyton, of 1073 Shelby place.

Two white men riding in an automobile, he said, drew up alongside the curb where he was walking at Boulevard and Hansell street, and one of the men asked for a match. When the request had been granted the men then offered Guyton a ride downtown. When he got into the car, a negro who had been concealed in the rear seat of the car arose, brandished a revolver and covered Guyton while they took him to a point near the federal penitentiary.

After $11.42 had been taken from him, Guyton was put out of the car.

Thorough Survey Embodied in Reports Of Lithonia Club

At the May meeting of Lithonia Woman's Club a comprehensive survey of the activities for the year was embodied in the annual reports of officers and chairmen. The 12 programs for the year were carried out as planned in the yearbook, according to Miss Birdie Chapman, first vice president and program chairman. They were centered around the community as a theme, and each program was presented by a committee comprising clubwomen especially interested in each subject.

Mrs. J. J. Summers, second vice president and membership chairman, reported six new members, and no withdrawals, except those moving away. From time to time, non-club members in groups of ten or 20 have been guests of the club at the meetings.

The clubhouse has been in charge of Mrs. Della Rogers, who has supervised painting, repairing the roof, maintaining interior, building eight banquet tables, hanging new drapes and renting clubhouse, netting $26.50. Expenses were $129. Since the clubhouse is local granite, it has required no painting. Mrs. Leo Rainey, as recording secretary, has kept accurate minutes and recorded all club transactions. Mrs. W. H. Hollingsworth, corresponding secretary, sent 50 letters and cards to club members in cases of illness or bereavement.

The treasurer, Mrs. E. E. West, gave total receipts of the club as $391, and total expenditures $427, closing the year with a balance of $64 in the treasury. Major items received are the work of the finance chairman, Mrs. C. J. Tucker, and include the carnival, netting $200, cooking school $37, American Legion dinner $15, fifth district luncheon $41. Major expenditures include drapes $100, library $75, yearbooks $28, donations to Boys Scouts, P.-T. A., Community Chest, national endowment, Tallulah Falls, etc., $60. Mrs. Neil Cameron, auditor, reported the books as correct.

Work at Library.

Mrs. Wheeler Davidson, library chairman, reported a library workday, when all books were mended and replaced on the shelves of the library maintained by the club in the clubhouse. Library programs have been given, the work maintained throughout the year, the club voting $10 a month for new books and librarian's salary. Dr. Park Speaks To Jefferson Club

Dr. R. E. Park, of the state university, was guest speaker. He began his address by telling of the many changes that have taken place, even since his childhood, and that these changes are not comparable to those that will take place in the future. He spoke of naziism, fascism and communism and of their threatening influence over the country.

America has never been a true democracy, Dr. Park stated, but a plutocracy, as 20 per cent of the people own 98 per cent of the wealth. In speaking of the deplorable plight of the southern farmers, he stated that President Roosevelt has recognized that unless the farmers have some purchasing power, this country can't and will not stand. Sixty-six per cent of the farms are operated by tenant labor, and the constant influx of the country boys and girls to the city has weakened these farms. Dire poverty, from years to year, has rendered the tenants unreliable. Dr. Park stated that for each farmer to own a small farm, and know how to properly run that farm, would surely be the best weapon against communism.

He spoke at length on taxes, and stated that there were only three just taxes, namely, inheritance, income and sales taxes.

"The true test of any Christian," Dr. Park concluded, "is good citizenship, and when we cast out all the petty envies and jealousies, and develop more breadth of spirit, coming back to the real issues of life, striving to bring to ourselves the realization to make life a little cleaner and better and happier, and that in spite of all the jangle and confusion about us, we must at all times do our duty."

Not only are posters and pictures placed along highways to call attention to the danger of drinking and driving, but alcohol education exhibits are being used in school rooms and in church school training courses.

Miss Sarah Anne Wright, of Elberton, state director of this department, has been invited to present an alcohol exhibit at district missionary meetings. On Wednesday she gave an exhibit at Royston when the Elberton District Missionary Society met there.

It was like the W. C. T. U. exhibit at the state P.-T. A. and state G. E. A. conventions in Macon which attracted so much favorable comment, and which has been repeatedly copied. This alcohol education exhibit shows what alcohol is and what it does to human life, to plant life, to gold fish, sprouting seed and growing flowers. It visualizes the findings of scientists, economists and social workers on the nature of alcohol and its effects on the individual and on society.

The hearty endorsement given to the W. C. T. U. by the general conference of the Methodist church in Columbus, Ohio, is gratifying to this organization which has in its membership thousands of women of that denomination.

A resolution adopted by the general conference indorsed the five-year program of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in honoring Frances E. Willard; that it urge the women of the church to become members of the W. C. T. U.; and that the church through its ministry and laxity do all possible to call the attention of our people to the life and work of Frances E. Willard, and the contribution she made to the moral progress of America and the world."

The W. C. T. U. is also gratified at the stand against the liquor traffic taken by the Southern Baptists at their recent convention, and that the Presbyterian Church in the United States urged "an educational campaign against liquor" at its meeting in Augusta.

Dr. Mary Harris Armor, national director of evangelism, and Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, president of the Georgia W. C. T. U., will reach Tulsa, Okla., in time to attend the executive committee meeting of the National W. C. T. U. June 10, 11 and 12.

Dr. Armor will lead the worship service on June 12. She will speak on Oklahoma Day at the convention on the subject, "Repeal Is a Failure." On June 18 she will make her department report.

Mrs. Russell will lead the prayer on world's night, when the World's W. C. T. U. president, vice president, treasurer, and Mrs. J. R. Chitambar, president of the W. C. T. U. of India, will speak.

On Sunday evening the address will be made by the president of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas, Charles Claude Selecman, LL.D. His subject will be "Destroying Ethical Foundations" and he is well qualified to speak on such a vital theme, for few men in this country have had wider experience in social service work in its broadest sense.

After taking special graduate work Dr. Selecman began his career along this line at Kingdom House, St. Louis, and later went to New Orleans. He has served some of the leading churches in the southwest.

Mrs. Max Mayer, of Des Moines, Iowa, will be the peace speaker. A few years ago she was voted the Des Moines community award in recognition of her public service. She is described as "an astute scholar and orator." She is a past president of the Service Star Legion. She is president of the Des Moines chapter of Hadassah and regional vice president of that society.

As has been announced Amelia Earhart will speak on Sunday afternoon.

En route to Tulsa for the convention, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, the national president, will stop in St. Louis to make a 15-minute radio address on June 8 over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 4:45 o'clock (eastern daylight saving time). Tune in.

He finished a three-year course in theology at Emory University in Atlanta, and will receive his B. D. degree from there on presentation of his thesis. Mrs. Hornady Heads Rome Branch Of Federated Church Women

A permanent branch of the National Council of Federated Church Women was established in Rome recently, with the following officers elected: Mrs. John R. Hornady, president; Mrs. Ross Bosworth, first vice president; Mrs. Claude Wimbish, second vice president; Mrs. W. B. Nunnally, recording secretary; Mrs. James Maddox, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. F. Barron, treasurer.

Mrs. John H. Wood, member of the state board of Federated Church Women, called the initial meeting, at which time temporary officers were chosen, including representatives from each of the central Rome churches. Following this meeting a delightful luncheon was given in compliment to visiting state officers, when Mrs. C. R. Stauffer, state president, addressed more than 50 representatives of the various churches in the Rome district. The ministers of the central churches of the city attended the luncheon and entered into the discussion of a local council.

At a mass meeting held at the First Presbyterian church following the luncheon, when Dr. William M. Danner was the guest speaker, the council was definitely organized, and officers installed. The Rev. John W. Melton, pastor of the church, and other ministers were present and took part on the program.

Though the Federated Council is a new organization in Rome, two phases of the federated movement have been carried on for some time, namely, those of the world day of prayer and the church hospitalization work.

Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, of the First Methodist church, has been for many years the efficient treasurer for the church hospital board, which was organized in 1922, and which is sponsored now by nearly all of the churches of Rome of every denomination. This fund is sent by the women's departments of the churches to Mrs. Yeargan, the treasurer, monthly, and it is used for the maintenance of hospital facilities for the needy. During the past year 119 patients have been benefited through this fund, at the cost of $2,417. Mrs. Cliff King is at present the chairman of the church hospital board. The Rome doctors have given their services to this cause.

Other phases of work have been planned by the executive committee of the council, and will be worked out in the near future.

Urban League.

"Kinckle Jones."

Under the above caption, the New York Times, on Wednesday, May 6, devoted a leading editorial to the man whose name is indelibly associated with the progress and usefulness of the Urban League during more than a quarter of a century. Such a tribute, from such a source, deserves reproduction wherever the Urban League is a factor in the community. In part, the editorial is as follows:

"Kinckle Jones is an institution himself, for, though the league was organized under the presidency of the late William H. Baldwin about 30 years ago, it is Kinckle Jones who has carried on (beginning with a total budget of $2,500) and more than any one other person made it an agency of national usefulness.

"It was not surprising that Secretary Roper should have called him into counsel, saying at the time of his appointment that he felt the 13,000,000 negroes in the United States were "entitled to be consulted about the general program of the department." But Kinckle Jones still continues to give his best and most direct service through the Urban League. He ascribes to the board that has planned its activities, to the staff that has directed its activities, to the staff that has directed the affairs of the movement, and to the discriminating donors, all credit for the excellent record that has been made in the contribution to a "more resourceful and freer negro," which in turn means a contribution to a "more resourceful and freer America."

"The Urban negro has relatively suffered most industrially during the past few years, but it is also true that his spirit has been the most hopeful. The league has had much to do with keeping up his spirit and deserves continuing and increasing support, for it has one of the most serious social and economic problems to deal with."

SCHOOL PATRONS OPPOSE PAY CUTS

Spring Street Parents Deny Reports They Favor Lower Teacher Salaries.

Assurance that it is not the intention of the patrons of Spring Street school to force a further reduction in the salaries of school teachers and branding reported propaganda to that effect as "absolutely untrue," the organization yesterday issued a statement advocating "restoration of salary cuts as rapidly as possible."

The statement pointed out that the drive of the organization is "against waste, extravagance and unsound business methods in the school department" and further set out that the organization "will not countenance any effort to reduce the earnings of teachers or to further burden the teachers of Atlanta with items of maintenance which could, without sacrifice of efficiency, be eliminated."

"We advocate a curtailment of unessential activities and extravagencies that we feel are maintained at the expense of the school teachers and at the expense of the physical growth of the school system," the statement pointed out.

"We ask you, who know the needs of our public schools, to stand by the parents of Atlanta school children, help us to give you the opportunity to serve better and to accomplish the purpose of your calling to your own satisfaction.

"We ask you to ignore rumors to the effect that we are politically allied with any person or faction. We are parents independently associated to affect better school conditions. You may be confident that we will not advocate any program which would decrease the efficiency of our schools or lower the standard of instruction."

MUSICAL SERVICE

Emory To Present Thursday Night Concerts.

Continuing a practice instituted several years ago, Emory University will offer to music lovers of Atlanta a series of Thursday evening concerts during the summer under the direction of Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, professor of fine arts at Emory and director of the glee club. The concerts, open to the public, will be held in Glenn Memorial auditorium.

Plans for the series call for the presentation of talent by students in the summer school, assisted by prominent Atlanta musicians. The concerts will close in August with a pretentious choral offering, according to Dr. Dewey.

For the benefit of those interested in music and art appreciation, Dr. Dewey is offering two courses of study during the summer term. Art appreciation, a course designed to open the way for an intelligent enjoyment of painting and sculpture, will be taught by illustrated lectures and general discussions. The course in music appreciation will offer historical treatment of the various forms of music and a characterization of the most prominent composers.

400 DIVORCE CASES IN COURT THIS WEEK

The traditional month of brides will see many become ex-brides as the Fulton superior court this week takes up the undefended divorce calendar, with Judge Virlyn B. Moore presiding.

More than 400 cases have been scheduled for hearing this week by Lillian Jenkins, calendar clerk, while in the ordinary's office Claude Mason and his assistants are preparing to issue several hundred marriage licenses to the June brides.

Husbands and wives desiring to be "put asunder" have listed the usual grounds in their divorce petitions this term. Cruelty, drunkenness, abandonment and non-support lead in the reasons given.

In Italy full fare is collected on trains for youngsters over a certain height. This relieves conductors of arguments with thrifty mothers who insist that their little boy is still under age.

Autogyro Adds Novel Touch to Group of Model Airplanes

Secret of the Summerhouse -- By W. Boyce Morgan

SYNOPSIS.

Summoned by a secret call for help from his sister Betty, Bill Saunders hurries to the home of his Uncle Joel, accompanied by his roommate, Tuck Tucker. They find Betty a virtual prisoner in her uncle's home, and frightened half to death. A few weeks before, an old friend of Uncle Joel, Captain Gregg, came to the house after spending 30 years in the interior of Africa. He is accompanied by Wambi, a big native who was his tribe's witch doctor, and Betty says they are trying to convert Uncle Joel to some fantastic pagan religion. At night they perform weird rites in a summer-house on the estate, and on the mornings following these affairs, Uncle Joel is almost prostrated. Betty is sure that some sheep which have disappeared have been done away with during the ceremonies. The servants have been sent away, and Captain Gregg, with Uncle Joel completely in his control, is ruler of the house. Betty hates and fears him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER V.
A Plan of Action.

After they had heard Betty's story, Bill and Tuck were silent for many seconds. Standing by the sheep pen in the bright May sunshine, it hardly seemed possible that the things Betty had described were true. But when they saw the look of fear that still filled her eyes, they could not doubt her. And they had already seen enough of Wambi and Captain Gregg to believe them capable of almost anything.

"Well," said Bill finally, "the question now is what to do."

"I think the thing to do is get out of here as fast as possible," said Tuck with emphasis. "I agree with Betty that she's not safe, and we won't be either, after we've been here a while."

Betty shook her head soberly. "I don't think they'd let us go. And we can't just leave Uncle Joel to the mercy of those two horrible men."

"How about the police?" demanded Bill. "There must be some sort of county or state officers around here."

"Do you think the police would believe this yarn?" Tuck scoffed. "They'd think Betty was crazy, that's all. And we really haven't any direct evidence that they are doing anything wrong."

"We can get it," snapped Bill. "Suppose we go down to that summer-house and have a look at it."

"No!" gasped Betty. "You mustn't! They'd find out, and do something terrible to you."

"They don't need to find out," retorted Bill. "We can sneak away from the house after dark. How about it, Tuck? Are you game?"

Tuck nodded quickly. "Count on me. Betty, your uncle told you to give us a room. Can you give us one that would allow us to get out easily?"

"There's a room that looks out on the roof of the side porch," Betty replied. "Look—you can see it from here. If you could get down those pillars—"

"Easy!" said Bill. "Or we can make a bed sheet rope, which will enable us to get back in again. All right, Tuck. We'll do it tonight. And in the meantime, we'll act as though this were just an ordinary visit. Don't let them think we know or suspect anything."

The others agreed, and after wandering around the grounds to carry out the illusion of an inspection tour, they returned to the house. Betty showed them to their room, and they carried up their bags.

"I suppose you're hungry," Betty said. "I'll get some lunch in a little while. The meals around here have been sketchy and uncertain since the servants left. I usually get my own, and Wambi looks after the others."

Gripping the rope in his hands, he lowered himself along the pillar.

It was shortly after lunch that Bill encountered Captain Gregg in the hall. The short, powerful built man held up his heavy stick in a gesture of restraint, and Bill paused, facing him inquiringly. Captain Gregg, leaning on his stick with one hand, passed the other over his scarred cheek in a thoughtful manner.

"Young man," he said in his rasping voice, "your uncle asked me to find out how long you plan to stay. Your arrival here is rather—er—inconvenient, as your uncle is not well, and he is very busy."

Bill flushed with anger. "Are you inviting me to leave?" he demanded hotly. "What right have you got to talk like that?"

Captain Gregg's eyes became hard. "It's not a question of right, boy," he growled. "Your uncle and I have important business with each other. Visitors are a nuisance. The sooner you clear out, the better we'll like it—and the better for you."

Bill was almost speechless with anger. For a second he could hardly keep himself from bursting into violent accusations against this repulsive man, but his better judgment prevailed. He swallowed hard.

"We don't expect to be here long," he said shortly. Then he turned and quickly climbed the stairs to his room, leaving Captain Gregg glaring after him.

They did not see Uncle Joel all that day. Somehow they managed to put in the time until after dinner. Once Bill and Tuck went for a walk, but they had not gone far when they discoveren that Wambi was following them, apparently aimlessly, but always keeping them in sight.

They made the excuse of being tired from their trip, and went to bed early. As they said goodnight to Betty in the hall, Bill patted her shoulder.

"Don't worry about is," he reassured her. "We'll be careful. You must keep under cover, and we'll tell you what we find out in the morning."

In their room, Bill and Tuck faced each other, and a grin stole over Tuck's face.

"Some fun!" he whispered. "I'd think the whole thing was a wild dream if it weren't for the way Wambi and Captain Gregg look at us. I can just imagine that bird Wambi cutting you up in small pieces and boiling you in a pot."

Bill smiled, but he did not feel amused. He was thoroughly convinced that the situation was serious.

Quickly and quietly they made their plans. Undressing only partly, they turned out their light and waited impatiently for the house to become dark and quiet. They dozed a little on the bed while they waited, and two hours later decided that the time was ripe for their perilous visit to the summer-house.

It was the work of only a few moments to knot two sheets into an effective rope. Then, as noiselessly as possible, they climbed out on the porch roof and crept across it to the edge. The capital at the top of the pillar provided a place to tie the rope. Bill went first, and gripping the rope in his hands, he lowered himself along the pillar. Tuck followed immediately.

"That sheet rope is practically invisible against the white pillar," Bill whispered. "Come on. There's not a light showing in the house. We'll dodge from tree to tree and keep out of sight as much as possible."

Stooping low, they ran quickly across the lawn. They gained the shelter of a big tree, and then proceeded quietly down the slope toward the summerhouse.

But had they paused to look back, they might have seen a dark shadow steal away from the house to follow them. It was Wambi.

Blades Are Easy To Handle When Material Is Pine

Better Than Brittle Balsa Wood Often Used For Models.

BY RAY J. MARRAN.

A tiny model of an autogyro plane, whittled from soft white pine, is a novelty which will inspire many nice compliments on the ability and craftsmanship of the builder. The autogyro is easily whittled from pine because the thin rotating blades and the struts can be handled better than with the thin, brittle balsa wood usually used in model making.

Cut the fuselage from a block of soft pine 7-8 inch by 1 1-8 inches by 6 1-4 inches long, shaping it to represent the outline in the sketch for the fuselage. Note the stabilizer slot and the two seat cutouts.

The wing is cut from a piece of pine 1-16 inch thick by 7 1-4 inches long by 1 1-4 inches wide through the center, tapering the wing ends to 1-2 inch wide. To secure a piece of pine 1-16 inch thick, use a hand plane and sandpaper to shave the stock to this thickness. Cardboard or berry box material may be substituted for the wing stock.

The tail skid, the wheel struts and the propeller are whittled from strips of pine 1-8 inch thick and are cut to the sizes indicated in the sketch.

The Rotating Blades.

The rotating blades (two pieces are needed) are shaped from straight grained pine, 1-16 inch thick. Cut both strips to the shape shown, making the finished size 8 inches long by 5-16 inch wide at the ends and 3-8 inch at the center. Cross these blades at the center and glue together.

The rudder and the stabilizer may be cut from cardboard by outlining the shape and the sizes of these parts with a pencil, then cutting them with scissors or a sharp pointed knife. The wheels may also be cut from cardboard; or use tiny wooden wheels taken from a broken toy.

After shaping all of the parts, sandpaper the wooden pieces, then start assembling the model, using a good grade of tube glue. Allow the glue to dry thoroughly, even if a couple of days are required in assembling.

How to Assemble.

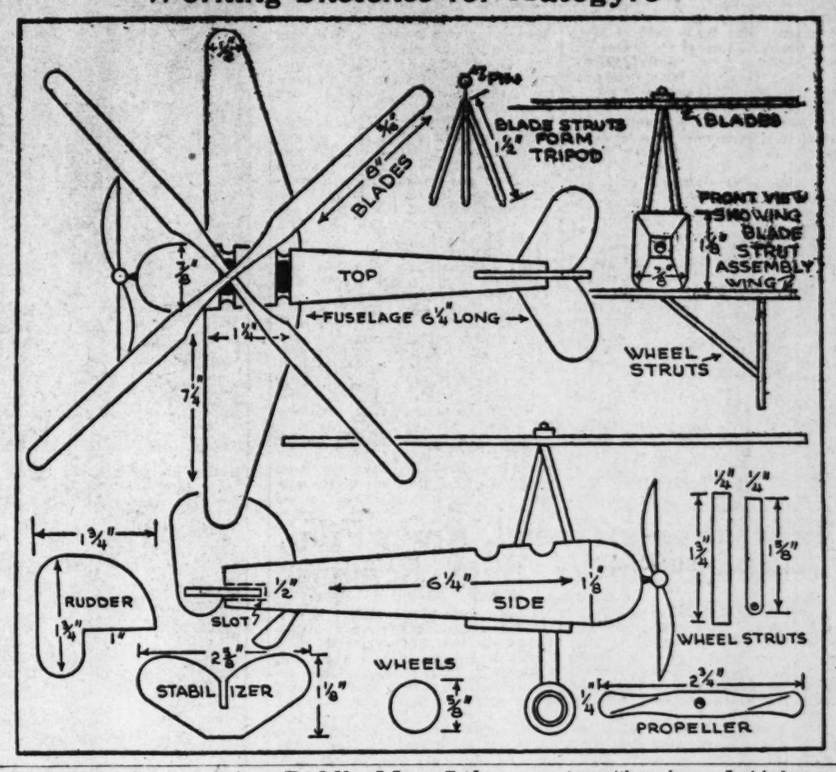

The wing, the stabilizer, and the rudder can be glued at the same time. Get these pieces centered in correct positions. When the glue on these parts has dried, erect the rotating blade struts, gluing them into a tripod, with the front legs glued in tiny holes punched in front of the front seat notch in the fuselage, and the rear leg in a hole in the center of the fuselage in front of the rear seat.

Now glue the wheel struts into position. Allow the glue on these parts to dry partially before placing them in position. By so doing, you will find that the struts will stay in position until the glue is dry.

Pin the wheels, the propeller and the rotating blades into position.

Paint this model a dark blue, with the struts, propeller and blades in aluminum. Motor hood markings and wings are lined with black.

TODAY'S PRIZE STORIES.
MY MOST INTERESTING STUDY.

BY ELIZABETH WALLACE OWEN.

My most interesting study this year has been, "Bible."

First, our class studied about Jerusalem and we took an imaginary trip to Palestine right here from Atlanta, Ga. We learned how each country manufactures its goods and about their different ways of living.

Then we had pictures sent to us from New York city and we made biographies on the lives of Solomon and David. That I enjoyed very, very much.

But I enjoyed even more reading First and Second Kings about the kings of Israel and Judea. Each student in the class made outlines on the Kings and told what each one did.

We also wrote themes on the traits of David as a king. And under the careful supervision of our religious instructor, we had a very successful year and have accomplished a good deal.

Bible is truly an interesting study and is man's best guide at all times.

MY SCHOOL TERM, 1935-36.

BY KATYE HARRIS.

This term of school of 1935-1936 was very interesting. I was in the sixth grade and it was not as hard as some of the grades I have just passed.

My favorite subjects were history and geography because history told about the United States events that had passed when our mothers and fathers were children like we are now, and before they were on earth. And another important thing, about the World War. Geography told us about North America and other continents, and important seas, lakes, oceans, bays and other important bodies of water. We also had a little about earth as a whole. The others were interesting but not as much so as geography and history.

Accurate Throws Are Rewarded In Broomstick Game

A game where there's a chance to win something—that's the sort of a game this is, and any number of players may get in it.

The first thing to do is to dig a hole, six inches in diameter and six inches deep. A 15-inch piece of broomstick is then placed in the center of this hole and driven into the ground until it projects only one or two inches above the hole.

When this has been done, one player is chosen "keeper" and he places some object of his own on the top of the stick—a marble, a top, or some other inexpensive toy. The rest of the players take their station 20 feet from the stick and, procuring pieces of broomstick eight inches long, throw these sticks at the object resting on the stick in the ground.

Keep Prizes Won.

Any player who succeeds in knocking the object from the upright stick in the ground with his own flail, may keep the prize thus won. However, the object must fall outside of the hole to be claimed as a prize. A player who merely hits the upright stick with his own will seldom win, because the object is almost certain to fall into the hole when this is done.

If the prize is still on the stick after all the players have had three throws at it, the keeper may take it up and choose who is to be the next keeper. The players may throw from either a standing or a kneeling position, and will soon become quite expert. Increase the distance if it becomes too easy to knock the article from the stick with a 20-foot throw.

CARELESS.

Father: Why were you kept in at school?

Mike: I didn't know where the Azores were.

Father: In the future, just remember where you put things.

WHY HELP A WORM?

Junior: "Say, Daddy, that apple I just ate had a worm in it, and I ate that, too."

Parent: "What? Here, drink this water and wash it down."

Junior: "Aw, I will not. Let him walk down."

THE REASON FOR PLAY.

Have you ever wondered why boys and girls play so much more than grown men and women do? One reason, of course, is that men and women are busy with their work, and therefore have less time for recreation. But that's not the whole story.

If you own a dog which you have raised from puppyhood, you will remember how frolicsome he was when young. He simply played every minute when he wasn't sleeping or eating. Romping seemed to be his main business in life.

But as he grew older, he became more serious, more dignified. He still liked to play, but it wasn't the only thing he thought about.

Human beings are much like dogs in this respect, and for the same reason. The purpose of play, in a dog or in a boy or girl, is to develop the young body and the young mind. Muscles grow strong only through use and exercise. That's why you like to play so much when you are young.

So, you see, play isn't a waste of time. Just be sure that the playing you do is the kind that will help you the most.

One Cat Masters Door Trick; Another Needs Change in Diet

By HORACE MITCHELL.
Pet Editor.

Carl Edison Crews, age 11, sends us the following letter:

Tippy's Trick.

My cat has a white tip on her tail so I call her Tippy. She is almost too clever because she learned how to open our back porch screen door. I expect you will want to know how she did it and what happened.

With her right paw she pulled open the door, and with her left one slipped inside, she wedged her head through and went in. If there was food in sight she helped herself. I'm sure she felt guilty because when she saw or heard me coming she went out faster than she came in. The door would bang and when I got outside she would be washing her face or trying to look as if nothing had happened.

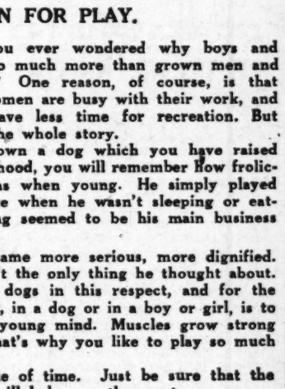

But smart cats can be broken of bad tricks because they can remember other things which follow after them that spoil their fun.

Helen C. Dreher writes:

I have a kitty two years old which I am very fond of. He is a lovely little pet, eats well and looks well, but he has some trouble although he isn't sick. All he seems to do is pull at his fur in various places all over his body.

A friend told me you call that the mange and it comes from feeding him salmon. Then again the man in the fish store said he can't believe it, for salmon is a fish and is good for cats.

My cat won't eat any other fish, such as tuna fish, etc. So I feed him salmon, but never plain. I mix it with bread and he loves that. For if I don't give him that I guess he would starve. I am anxious to know if my kitty has the mange and what to do or feed him. I bought a bottle of mange cure but he just licks it off and it's no different. Would you kindly give me your advice?

She went out faster than she came in.

Answer: Sounds more as if your puss had some sort of deficiency in its diet. Give him some fresh raw beef about twice a week, or maybe three times. A freshly killed English Sparrow or mouse would be a good tonic for him. Some thoroughly boiled liver wuld be good, too. No need to use the expensive calves' liver; beef or pork is just as good for this purpose. Hope the cat makes out okay!

ON THE RADIO WAVES TODAY

Hal Kemp's Band To Broadcast With Maxine Gray as Songstress

Bentonelli, Phil Baker and Jack Buchanan To Be Heard Today.

"LITTLE BORED HAUNTLEROY."

Phil Baker's production entitled "Little Bored Hauntleroy," starring the noted comedian in his favorite juvenile role, will be heard over WGST at 6:30 o'clock this evening.

The musical accompaniment to Baker's drama will be provided by Hal Kemp's orchestra, Maxine Gray, soloist, and the Seven G's. Their contributions will include "You Can't Pull the Wool Over My Eyes," "It's You I'm Talking About" and "Pursuing the Blues."

A special treat is in store for the dance-loving college contingent of Atlanta next week. Hal Kemp and his orchestra will play for the Georgia Tech interfraternity council dances and will also be heard over WGST at 10:30 o'clock next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The distinctive manner in which this southern maestro presents his arrangements is, in part, the reason for his popularity. He has set a standard of excellence in musical entertainment. This is particularly exemplified in his brass section.

GLUSKIN SALUTES LINER.

Jack Buchanan, English musical comedy star visiting this country, will be the guest of Lud Gluskin during a special salute program to the liner Queen Mary, to be heard over WGST at 9:15 o'clock tonight. The half-hour of music and songs will add to the last night of festivity on board the huge liner.

Gluskin, opening with the salutary theme of "Sailing" and "Rule Britannia," will feature a dance arrangement of "It's Time to Say Good-Night," a hit tune written by Henry Hall, musical director of the British Broadcasting Corporation on board ship.

Other selections of the half-hour will include the Blue Flames harmony team singing "When I Take My Sugar to Tea" and "Everything Stops for Tea"; Buddy Clark, baritone, offering "The Touch of Your Lips"; pretty Gogo deLys presenting her version of "Us On a Bus" and the orchestra playing "In Town Tonight."

BENTONELLI GUEST SOLOIST.

Joseph Bentonelli, American tenor of concert and opera, will be the guest soloist with the Symphony orchestra and chorus directed by Victor Kolar during the Sunday Evening Hour to be heard over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

Bentonelli's first group of selections will include "Where'er You Walk," by Handel, and "Salut Demeure," from Gounod's "Faust." Later in the program he will feature the aria. "Ah, Fuyez," from Massenet's "Manon," to be followed by Bartlett's ever popular song, "A Dream."

Kolar's features for the orchestra and chorus will open with Sir Edward Elgar's march, "Pomp and Circumstance," to be followed by the Andante from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Following Bentonelli's first group of songs the orchestra will play the "Nocturne" and "Dance of the Dwarfs," from Grieg's "Lyric Suite."

Bentonelli was born in Oklahoma and, after graduating from the state university with high honors, went to France where he studied for two years in the studio of Jean de Reszke.

THE FRENCH TRIO.

An all-German program, including three compositions by Bach and two by Schumann, will be played by the French trio consisting of Elfieda Bos, violinist; Sallie Possell, flautist, and Lydia Savitzkaya, harpist, to be heard over WGST at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

Numbers to be heard include "Gavotte," "Sicilienne" and "Two Bourees," by Bach; Schumann's "Bird as Prophet" and "Slumber Song"; Karl von Dittersdorf's Scherzo; a "German Dance," by Mozart; Brahms' Waltz in A Major and the universally loved Minuet in G by Beethoven.

HAL KEMP.

SENATOR INTERVIEWED.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, republican, of Michigan, will be interviewed by H. V. Kaltenborn, veteran CBS news commentator, at the studios of WJSV in Washington, D. C., to be heard over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

This program is one of a series arranged to take place just before the republican national convention starts in Cleveland to allow presidential candidates to present their views on the questions of the day.

Vandenberg, a native of Grand Rapids, was editor and publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald until his appointment to the United States senate in 1928. He is the author of several books dealing with the life of Alexander Hamilton.

Hollywood Air Drama

Clark Gable and Marlene Dietrich will co-star for the first time on either screen or radio when they are heard in the "Radio Theater" presentation, "The Legionnaire and the Lady" over WGST at 8 o'clock Monday night.

CLARK GABLE.

This is the first broadcast of the "Radio Theater" since their move to Hollywood. The radio dramatization of this play, based on the motion picture, "Morocco," will be directed by Cecil B. DeMille.

Although both Gable and Miss Dietrich have been favorites for several years, they have never appeared together in the movies. The teaming of the two together at the microphone is said to be the greatest co-starring bill ever heard in a radio play.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

Capitol Offers 'We're Only Human' And Stage Unit of 'Jolly Jesters'

Owen Bennett, Atlanta's own contribution to the large field of stage show producers, brings his newest girl and vaudeville show, "Jolly Jesters," to the Capitol theater for a week's engagement, starting today.

On the screen the feature offering is to be "We're Only Human," a novelty picture, starring a large cast with Preston Foster, Jane Wyatt, James Gleason and many others.

In addition to the stage show and feature, the Capitol will offer several added short subject on the program, including the world's latest news events in Pathe News.

The Royal Nymphs, a line of beautiful and talented girls, form one of the featured attractions in the stage unit. Line girls as a rule are merely in a show just to have the presence of girls noted, but the girls Bennett is bringing to Atlanta are highly trained in the profession and each is a star in her own right.

But girls is not all that "Jolly Jesters" has. There are several acts of big-time vaudeville headed by Collins and Anita, famous ballroom dance team; Jerry Manning, singer of sweet songs; Al Bartee, who has been featured in Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" as the upside-down piano player; Adele Philips, a fast tap dancer who at one time was a star pupil of Pat Rooney; Elmer, Arkansas' favorite son, the comedian with the show who also plays popular tunes on an ordinary Boy Scout bugle. There are many, many others.

"We're Only Human" is a vivid story of a police officer on the force in a metropolitan city. An officer who likes to hunt his men down alone, until one day in capturing a well-known gang leader, he misses the chance of catching the entire mob, through his failure to call additional officers to his help.

He is suspended from the force, but in the meantime has fallen in love with Jane Wyatt, a girl reporter who is assigned to crime cases.

After Foster has been reinstated on the force, he and his partner, James Gleason, answer a burglar call. In the battle, Gleason is killed, and Foster tells that his former partner lost his nerve. But later on, in another battle with underworld characters, Foster is wounded and he too, loses his nerve.

From then on the picture carries a vivid story of love triumphing over cowardice, but all works out well before the final fade out of the picture.

'TransatlanticTunnel,' RialtoFilm, Combines Thrills With Romance

A delightful combination of surprising thrills and delightful romance is to be found in "Trans-Atlantic Tunnel," screen production that blazes new paths in technical accomplishment and in the visualization of ideas, and which is now showing at the Rialto theater.

It is, basically, the story of an engineering dream of a future, when the genius of two engineers makes possible the boring of a great tunnel beneath the bed of the Atlantic ocean, forming a direct link between London and New York. The climax of this angle of the story comes when the prime minister of Britain and the president of the United States clasp hands after the two groups of workers, drilling below the sea, have broken through to each other and completed the titanic task.

George Arliss as the prime minister, and Walter Huston as the president, give remarkably telling characterizations.

The romance of the picture is provided by Richard Dix and Madge Evans, in the two principal roles. Theirs is a story of love and faith, a human story very closely interwoven with the progress of the tunnel about which the entire story revolves.

Such a picture, perforce, contains innumerable moments of suspense, thrill and excitement, but the height of it all is reached when the tunnelers inadvertently bore into a seething undersea volcano, which lets loose a cataclysm of horror and death. The heroic recue work, the anxiety and the brave carrying on of the project in the face of mob opposition, brings the picture to its dramatic close.

With clever short subjects, "Trans-Atlantic Tunnel" provides something very different in the way of screen entertainment and it will undoubtedly be the theme of much fan conversation for many months to come. It will be at the Rialto today and next week through Thursday.

Jack Haley Enacts Leading Role In 'F-Man' Film Farce at Georgia

"Take off that beard, Hawkshaw, we know you!" A full, flowing beard is only one of the hilarious disguises which Jack Haley feels called upon to don, during the course of "F-Man," brilliant comedy of a would-be "G-Man," which opened Friday at the Georgia theater.

"F-Man" is a logical designation: "F" is lower than "G," so when Haley is appointed an "F-Man" by William Frawley, a government agent with a habit of playing practical jokes, he accepts Frawley's explanation that this lower rating gives him a sort of amateur standing, until he is able to work his way up higher in the alphabet, to the letter "G."

Haley is a very earnest young "F-Man," so earnest he turns down a date with his girl to concentrate on the capture of Public Enemy No. 1, a criminal whom the entire department is seeking. Haley evolves a plan but it turns slightly sour; his first false move being to mistake the chief of the "G-Men" for the wanted criminal, slipping the chief some knockout drops and locking his unconscious form in a closet until a rescue squad arrives. In his frantic efforts to redeem himself, Haley succeeds only in upsetting the "G-Men's" plans for capturing the public enemy, permitting him to escape.

Just before the gangster can make his successful get-away, however, Haley's luck changes for the better and,

Romance, Thrills, Chills and Comedy Mingle on Local Screens

'The Walking Dead' at Paramount, Eerie Thriller, Stars Karloff

What is proclaimed as a new type of murder mystery is now playing at the Paramount theater under the startling title of "The Walking Dead," a Warner Brothers production, starring Boris Karloff.

The picture has as its central theme the bringing back to life of a man who has been electrocuted for murder, but whose innocence of the crime is proved immediately after his execution. The victim of a band of racketeers, who have framed him, the man who was dead walks as in a dream among the living, but with an uncanny instinct, seemingly supernatural, of ferreting out the men who had caused his death.

The theme is hair-raising enough in itself, but the strange occult methods by which the "dead" man proceeds to avenge himself is calculated to freeze the blood and make the flesh quiver.

The process of bringing the man to life is shown in detail and is done along the line of scientific experiments conducted by eminent doctors in the past several years. The method in particular follows that of Dr. Robert Cornish, the Berkeley (Cal.) scientist, who claims to have revived a dead dog.

A duplicate of the tilting table he used as well as the electrical apparatus was specially constructed for the scene by expert technicians. A replica of the Lindbergh heart, a mechanical device that pulsates like the human organ, and which was used by Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute and a Nobel prize winner, in his experiments, was also constructed by scientific experts.

While the picture is largely one of chills and thrills, it is relieved by comedy elements and a fascinating romance. It was directed by Michael Curtiz, who handled the famous mystery pictures, "Dr. X" and the "Wax Museum." The story is by Ewart Adamson and Joseph Fields and was adapted for the screen by Adamson, Peter Milne, Robert Andrews and Lillie Hayward.

Montgomery and Russell Stars Of 'Trouble for Two' at Grand

A prince and princess, arch enemies as children, learn with repugnance 15 years later that they are affianced, for reasons of state. Each remembers the other with considerable distaste, and to forget the forthcoming marriage, each flees to London for a month's respite. En route they meet, neither recognizing the other, and being in a desperate mood, they join an organization of men and women who claim to be tired of living. The Suicide Club is designed to aid them to escape life.

This is the comic situation encountered in the early sequences of "Trouble for Two," adapted from Robert Louis Stevenson's story, and made into a highly diverting story with Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell heading the cast, and with Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Louis Hayward, David Holt, Virginia Wiedler, Tom Moore, Guy Bates Post and Pedra de Cordoba in the cast.

Presently Prince Florizel (Robert Montgomery) is selected as the next member of the Suicide Club to be slain, and Princess Brenda (Rosalind Russell) is assigned to the task of dispatching him. Simultaneously these two members discover that the Suicide Club is really a political organization, composed of revolutionists from their country. Their purpose is to eliminate the popular prince and princess, thus weakening the royalist party and preparing the way for revolution.

This discovery considerably changes the attitude of the royal members. Learning each other's identity, they are surprised to find that their former hatred has vanished—that they are not only very good friends, they are also in love with each other. The marriage, once so unpromising, becomes highly desirable. The immediate problem, however, is to escape the blood-thirsty members of the Suicide Club, intent upon exterminating the pair.

All of which provides an exciting entertainment, and, with Montgomery and Miss Russell in the chief roles, a story of unusual liveliness and gaiety, for the serious plot of the film is considerably lightened by the bantering manner in which it is played.

PONCEY IS SHOWING 'LORD FAUNTLEROY'

Dolores Costello Barrymore and Freddie Bartholomew Are Costarred.

Today and tomorrow the Ponce de Leon theater will present Frances Burnett's novel "Little Lord Fauntleroy" which features Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello Barrymore with C. Aubrey Smith, Guy Kibbee, Mickey Rooney and Henry Stephenson. As a special added attraction the Ponce de Leon will offer "Major Bowes' Amateurs on the screen.

Tuesday only Gary Cooper and Ann Harding will be costarred in "Peter Ibbetson." It is a touching drama of a man and a woman who went through life in love with other but separated by fate.

Wednesday only a thrilling mystery story "Dangerous Intrigue" will star Ralph Bellamy. There is plenty of action in this fast moving story.

One of the greatest masterpieces of modern motion pictures is "Captain Blood," the attraction for Thursday and Friday which features Errol Flynn and Olivia De Havilland.

Saturday only Robert Allen and Florence Rice will be in "Guard That Girl," a fast-moving action picture.

MAE WEST STARS AT TENTH STREET

'Klondike Annie' Booked for Three-Day Showing Opening Today.

"Klondike Annie," at the Tenth Street theater today, tomorrow and Tuesday, is Mae West's latest and one of her most discused films. The story is a gay and gusty one of the gold rush days of the gay nineties. Ever-popular Victor McLaglen has the leading male role, as Miss West's sea going boy friend.

"To Beat the Band," coming Wednesday, is a fast-moving comedy romance with Hugh Herbert, Roger Pryor and Helen Broderick.

Thursday and Friday bring "The Story of Louis Pasteur," a rich drama based on actual events in the life of the great scientist and humanitarian. Paul Muni is ideally cast in the title role.

"Don't Get Personal," coming Saturday is a colorful story of the storms and trials of young love with James Dunn and Sally Eilers starring.

Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray Co-starred in Production at the Fox

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray have done it again. The pair proved themselves ideal screen sweethearts in "Hands Across the Table." In "The Princess Comes Across," current attraction at the Fox theater, they have shown that the success of their first teaming was not accidental.

It is not easy to explain either. Neither Miss Lombard nor MacMurray will fit easily into any past categories of sweetheart types. If you call Fred "handsome," you do not describe him justly. He's a good egg. If you call Miss Lombard "glamorous" you are only telling half the story. She's a good egg, too.

Both, somehow, are like the people you know and enjoy. You enjoy them because they are people, and because they seem to enjoy themselves.

In "The Princess Comes Across" the two are placed in a story peculiarly suited for their type of romance. Miss Lombard is a beautiful American girl, posing as a Swedish princess in order to gain a film contract. MacMurray is an accordion-playing, singing band leader. The story, from start to finish, is set aboard a trans-Atlantic super-liner.

They fall in love as the picture opens, when there is conflict as to which shall occupy the ship's suite of honor. Before the liner has docked at New York, the romantic tale has been punctured by two murders, much snooping by five international decitives, and an expose of the real identity of the "princess."

The story has suspense, music, laughs and romance. It has Alison Skipworth outdoing herself; William Frayley and a host of other good supporting players. But most of all, it has the unusual natural charm of the team of MacMurray and Lombard.

William K. Howard directed the picture. Members of the excellent supporting cast include Douglas Dumbril, Forter Hall and George Barbier.

EMPIRE OFFERING 'LORD FAUNTLEROY'

Hit Film To Be Seen Today and Tomorrow at Georgia Avenue.

Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello Barrymore are co-starred in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," the attraction at the Empire theater today and tomorrow. The story follows the adventure of an American boy who became a noble man and went to England to live in Dorincourt Castle with his grandfather, the irascible old earl who refuses to recognize the child's adored young mother, "Dearest," because his son had married against his wishes. Others featured in the cast are C. Aubrey Smith, Henry Stephenson and Guy Kibbee.

Tuesday's treat is "Your Uncle Dudley," with Edward Everett Horton as the star. Horton enacts the role of a small town booster who was just a flat tire to his girl, Lois Wilson.

Wednesday offers James Cagney in one of his greatest role, "Frisco Kid," while Thursday finds Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi in "The Invisable Ray," a tale of a mad scientist who kills with the aid of radium. Friday presents Harold Lloyd in "The Milky Way." In this hilarious comedy, Lloyd has the role of a milkman who leaps in fistic fame. The cast includes Alolphe Menjou, Verree Teasdale, Helen Mack and Dorothy Wilson.

Saturday's attraction is "Hopalong Casidy," starring William Boyd and co-starring Jimmy Ellison, new screen find. The story deals with the exciting adventures of the courageous "Hopalong" and his two range-riding pals. Others in the cast are Paula Stone and Robert Warwick.

The new Sermon Library at Leipzig, which is to contain every book or publication in German anywhere in the world, is to have a smokers' terrace, where patrons may sit and smoke while they read.

In a corner of Holyrood Palace grounds in Edinburgh is a small tower called "the queen's bath," where Mary Queen of Scots is said to have bathed in white wine.

NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN

Famous Picture Has Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello.

Today and tomorrow the Hilan theater will present for the first time in Atlanta at popular prices Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel "Little Lord Fauntleroy" which features Freddie Bartholomew and Dolores Costello Barrymore with C. Aubrey Smith, Guy Kibbee, Mickey Rooney and Henry Stephenson. It is a touching drama that will warm the hearts of everyone who sees it. As a special added attraction the Hilan will offer another of the Major Bowes' Amateurs on the screen novelties.

"Sylvia Scarlett" as played by the vivacious Katharine Hepburn will be the featured attraction for Tuesday only. Cary Grant and Brian Aherne will also appear in this exciting adventure story.

Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall will be on the screen Wednesday only in "The Lady Consents" with Margaret Lindsay and Walter Abel. It is a heart touching drama.

The king of comedy, Harold Lloyd, will be in "The Milky Way" Thursday and Friday with Adolphe Menjou, Verree Teasdale, Helen Mack and William Gargan.

Saturday only the Hilan will offer Zane Grey's "The Wanderer of the Wasteland" which features Dean Jagger, Gail Patrick, Buster Crabbe and many others.

KREISLER MELODY IN COMING PICTURE

Grace Moore Has Best Production Yet in Coming 'King Steps Out.'

Hauntingly beautiful music composed by Fritz Kreisler, including his tantalizingly lovely "Old Refrain," is one of the distinctive features of "The King Steps Out," new Grace Moore picture which is coming to the Rialto theater in the near future.

Miss Moore sings "The Old Refrain" and, well known as the melody has always been, it is certain it will truly haunt the voices and musical memories of all Atlanta after they have heard it from the screen.

It is concensus of critical opinion that, despite the glories of grand opera, that Grace Moore has given to the screen, she was never blessed with so charming a story and such perfect music as in this, her newest picture. The story is lighter and more rollicsome than she has had before and the direction brings out all the fun and blithesome romance at which she is so capable.

Franchot Tone plays the leading male role, that of the young king who forms the other half of the romance, while Walter Connolly and Herman Bing are at their best in the principal comedy roles.

It is, throughout, a gay, delicious romance and should take Atlanta by storm.

DAMON RUNYON STORY ON SCREEN AT CENTER

Today and tomorrow the lovable lad of David Copperfield, Freddie Bartholomew, the star of "The Informer," Victor McLaglen are together for the first time in "Professional Soldier." The picture is adapted from a Damon Runyan story. It is about the fascinating adventure of a boy king and his soldier pal who always loved to fight, but who had to learn to fight for someone he loved.

On Tuesday, "Ship Cafe," a comedy drama with music of a ship stoker's singing career in a waterfront night club, features Carl Brisson and Arline Judge. Wednesday brings "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo classic, starring Fredric March, Charles Laughton and Rochelle Hudson.

On Thursday two outstanding favorites of the screen, Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall, are united for the second time in "The Lady Consents." The picture has the unusual theme of a woman who dare to send her husband into the arms of another woman in order to prove it really is his wife whom he loves.

Friday, "Laughing Irish Eyes," comes with Phil Regan, Walter C. Kelly and Evelyn Knapp. For Saturday, Harold Lloyd in his new comedy farce, "The Milky Way," reveals a story of a timid milkman's meteoric rise to fistic fame.

HALEY IN 'F-MAN' FILM AT GEORGIA

in one of the most hilarious scenes of the picture, he manages to turn the tables, capturing the gang, and earning enough money as a reward to let him forget all about being a "G-Man" and return to his home town to open a new soda fountain there, going back to his old job.

"F-Man" was directed by Edward F. Cline. Adrienne Marden, Grace Bradley, Onslow Stevens and Edward McWade head the large supporting cast.

More About the Vegetable Garden

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

It is about the time of year that there are lots of little things to be done in the garden that are very important, but it is not the time of year when there are any major planting problems or major cultural problems. So today we want to remind you of a number of little things that still may be done in the vegetable garden for late summer and early fall vegetables.

We hear a great deal nowadays about herb gardens. Interest in cooking herbs seems to go with a fancy for antique furniture. Few of the cooking herbs which used to grow in every garden, and season many of the dishes which our grandmothers served, are known to present-day home cooks.

But one herb which has held its flavor, both as a flavoring, and a decorative garnish to improve the appearance of the dish, is parsley. Every garden should have a row of parsley, and a short row will suffice, for this vegetable is in the "cut-and-come-again" class and each plant will continue to produce crisp leaves all season.

The latest development of parsley has come to amateurs through the all-America committee on new vegetables and flowers, which have a 1936 award of merit to the new variety called Paramount.

It has rich dark green leaves, triple curled, and is destined to decorate many a juicy steak or bowl of creamed new potatoes. When thinned properly, the plants grow 12 inches high with a spread of almost 20 inches, and the tendency to turn brown at the edges with age or during the cooler days of fall has been eliminated.

Parsley seed is slow to germinate, requiring from two to three weeks, but it makes a speedy growth when once started. It is a good idea to combine a planting with radishes to mark the row. The radishes will mature and be used before the parsley progresses enough to be bothered by them. Thin out scrupulously, especially with the big Paramount variety, and when the plants get about three inches high, cut them off. The new growth will be more curled and better-looking.

Many gardeners provide themselves with a year-around supply of parsley by bringing a plant or two into the house when the cold weather sets in. This is a good idea because the plants will grow well in a sunny kitchen window, and are always there when a spray is needed. Besides, you cannot always depend upon a supply in the market, and don't care to pay five or ten cents for a bunch when you need only a very little of it.

The best varieties of parsley are really handsome foliage plants, their finely curled, mossy sprays making excellent edgings in the garden. There is little reason why one could not raise a few plants in the window box, as when closely planted they do not become the massive bushes which you would grow in the vegetable garden.

Tomatoes.

An increasing custom is to sow the seeds of tomatoes where the plants are to remain. When this is done the plants seem to be more resistant to disease. It is also a practice among those who are familiar with the growing of tomatoes never to grow them on the same soil two years in succession. Tomatoes generally suggest the color red, but with the numerous varieties developed, there is sufficient variation in color to be of interest. There are three distinct color types: the scarlet, referred to as red; crimson, referred to as pink, and the yellow tomato.

Garden favorites include Standard Marglobe, Earliana, Bonny Best, Ponderosa, First Early and others.

To insure early ripening and perfection of fruit, it is well to train up and trim the vines. Unstaked, they require spacing of four to five feet, but staked plants may be set two and one-half feet apart, since the growth is all upright. On staked plants, begin trimming when they are about a foot tall. They will show two main branches then. First remove the secondary growth which has started at the roots. Next, at the place when the leaf stems join the branches, will be found young shoots started—pinch these out, being careful not to cut off the leaves.

The fruiting stems grow out of the branches between the leaf joints, and can be distinguished by the buds of flowers they bear. These should not be removed. A 5 to 6-foot stake driven into the ground about one foot will suffice for staking the plants.

Grow Gourds for Decorations.

The gourd has come to stay as a decorative motif in fall. Everyone knows that a coat of ordinary shellac applied to the colorful gourds will act as a preservative and enable one to keep them all through the winter months.

Gourds are members of the squash family, and require the same treatment. A fine crop may easily be grown in openly exposed, fairly rich soil, which should be warm, fairly moist and loose. Planting should be delayed until all danger of frost is past. Seed should be covered about 1-2 inch deep. Plant in hills 3 to 5 feet apart, about the same as one does melons, cucumbers, squash, etc. Gourds may be grown to advantage as a covering from unsightly fences, so long as they are exposed to the south or west sun. The plants require very little water once they are established.

The bees and the wind do the crossing, and if one starts out with a good selection of varieties, the chances for striking novelties and coloring and form are better. It is best to delay picking the gourds off the vines until they are thoroughly matured. The complete drying of the vines is an indication that this stage has been reached. Properly matured gourds always keep better than those which have been picked while the vines are still green.

Swiss Chard—Year-Around Vegetable.

It is not so many years ago that Swiss chard was grown almost entirely like Jersey kale is today, for feeding poultry. The variety used chiefly for this purpose is known as Lucullus. With the introduction to the household of scientific health cooking, the American housewife is becoming more and more vegetable conscious, and the food value and health-building qualities of different vegetables is given full consideration.

It is claimed for Swiss chard that it is fully as rich as spinach in iron, mineral salts and vitamins. In addition to having these qualities, it is more adaptable to year-round culture than spinach, for the simple reason that spinach is primarily a cool weather plant. Swiss chard was probably first introduced to the American table through the Italians. It is well known that the basic vegetable content of the best ravioli is Swiss chard. Frequently, spinach is substituted for the chard in the ravioli, but only at a sacrifice in flavor.

Some varieties of Swiss chard are grown principally for their foliage, which is ground as an ingredient of many delicious dishes. Other varieties are grown principally for the ribs, which may be prepared like asparagus or celery. The Italians find the ribs a delicacy when cut into pieces about three inches long, breaded and fried. And then, of course, chard may be used for ordinary greens in the same manner that spinach is used.

The home gardener will find it very easy to grow a patch of chard, for no special attention is required. It is cultivated like beets, except that it should be thinned to 8 to 10 inches apart. If only the outer leaves are gathered, the inner leaves continue to grow, and repeated pickings can be made. The seed may be sown at intervals to insure a stock of chard through the growing season.

WHAT TO DO IN JUNE!

SPRAYING—The bugs are having a big time now. Those that chew may be controlled by any of the arsenical sprays such as arsenate of lead, calcium arsenate or pyrox. The lice, flies, aphis and other sucking insects may be controlled by the use of the pyrethrum sprays, or nicotine sulphate. For the mildews, blights and black spot the Massey Dust, Bordeaux or Volck; for bean beetles a mixture of calcium arsenate, sulphur and lime is recommended by the Department of Agriculture of Alabama.

FERTILIZER—If your dahlias and gladiolus are about to bloom give them an application of a good high grade, complete commercial fertilizer. If they will not start blooming for a month or more use a mixture of sheep manure and bone meal. For the vegetable garden and the cutting flowers an application of good, high-grade commercial fertilizer about 12-4-4, will make them grow off quickly.

LAWNS—For best results lawns should have a monthly application of a good, high-grade fertilizer followed by a thorough soaking. Patch the bare spots with a few seeds and a handful of fertilizer in each spot.

SPRING BULBS—Tulip and daffodil bulbs may be taken up and transplanted at this time, now that the tops are turning yellow. These bulbs should be dried in a cool, shady, well-ventilated spot. This transplanting is not necessary.

Linwood Garden Club.

W. L. Monroe spoke to the Linwood Garden Club recently on rock gardens. He urged that more care be given to building rock gardens so that each one will be a spot of beauty not only to the yard in which it is built but to the city. Mrs. A. N. Anderson was hostess and served a course luncheon. The club planned a pilgrimage in June to the mountains of north Georgia and will be overnight guest at the home of Mrs. Clyde Withers. The attendance prize was won by Mrs. Earl Stanford.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown.

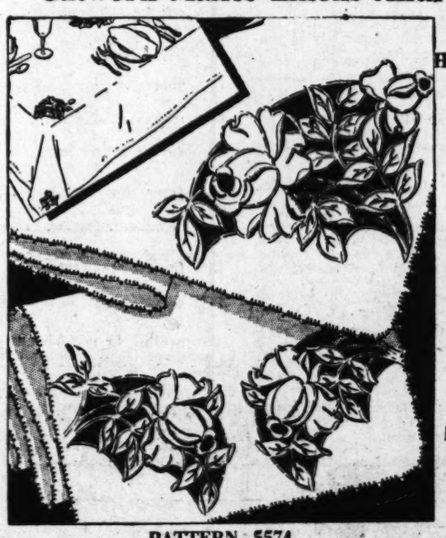

Question: Mrs. Crown, what are you doing in your garden now?

Answer: Pulling weeds and making resolutions. Half of a gardener's time is spent in making resolutions, usually something that he will do, this time it is something that I hope never to do again. In the early spring "ole uncle" came driving by with a small load of good manure. The weather was just right for intense garden enthusiasm, I had just attended the spring garden school of The Constitution, so I fell for buying it. I had many places where I felt that just this particular manure was needed, so before I realized it I had used every bit of it. Rather than let these other plants do without I ordered a big load next time and soon my entire garden was top dressed with a covering of well rotted stable manure and I was all enthused over the lovely blossoms that it would bring forth. Soon I began to notice a tiny green fuzz all over the ground wherever the manure had been placed. Grass and weeds, and they are still coming. I have never stopped a day trying to get them out, even in all this dry weather they have continued to come. So I am resolving each day never again to be tempted to scatter this carrier of weed and grass seed all over my place. I will use sheep manure, knowing that all seed have been destroyed by heat. It is so much easier to use, being dried and pulverized.

But the other garden duties must be carried on despite the time devoted to weeding. Roses need to have all old blossoms cut off, not merely snapping the head off when it is faded. They also need spraying or dusting, to keep black spot off and chewing and sucking insects from ruining your bush and blossoms. You can now give your roses a feeding, for as I write this the rain clouds are gathering, and if you fertilize just before a rain it gets into the soil with a minimum trouble. I am sure most gardens would do better for having the soil stirred, in other words worked. The moisture will enter better, making your plants thrive.

5. She sent four teams to the big field day.
6. Whitefoord's school garden has given more joy to the student body, community and passers-by than ever before.
7. Whitefoord had 65 children in the chorus at Bass Junior High.
8. Miss Bird was chosen president of the Georgia Association of Childhood Education and given a trip to New York to the national convention.

10. Mary Dean Mann, our news writer, won the silver loving cup offered by the Georgian for themost outstanding school-letter writer during the year.
11. The new cafeterial equipment with our bowls of yellow flowers on each table is a source of inspiration and joy to the children, making for better table manners, social life and better assimiliation of the good foods to be had there.

Landon Holds Big Lead in Final Pre-Convention Poll of G. O. P.

America Speaks

Popular Majority Backs Kansan in Nomination Dash

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Landon first, the Field second.

That is the way the candidates run today in a home-stretch national poll of republicans, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Four times since December the Institute has asked representative citizens in each of the 48 states:

"If you favor a republican today, which candidate would you like to support?"

The result—as thousands of ballots came back from American voters—has been an increasing chorus for Governor Alf M. Landon.

Today—on the eve of the national convention—Landon is still in front, and by a wide margin. After him the voters place Senator William E. Borah, former President Herbert Hoover, Colonel Frank Knox, Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Senator Lester J. Dickinson. The six candidates divide the total vote as follows:

	Percentage Favoring
Governor Landon	55.4%
Senator Borah	18
Herbert Hoover	14
Colonel Knox	6
Senator Vandenberg	6
Senator Dickinson	.6

As indicated above the vote for Governor Landon exceeds the combined votes for the other five.

The Race for the nomination—as reflected in Institute polls—has been like a long, grueling steeplechase. Of the score or more of potential nominees in the G. O. P. race a year ago, only a handful of the most successful remain today. The hazards of age, geography and politics have accounted for the rest.

The most significant tendency of the race has been the spurt of the newcomers—a middle west governor like Landon, a Chicago publisher like Knox, a Michigan senator like Vandenberg—who have outdistanced some of the greatest names of their party. Today the "newcomers" poll two-thirds of the republican preference vote.

A year ago a private unpublished survey by the Institute of Public Opinion reflected a different situation. In March, 1935, first place went to Senator Borah, with 32% of the republican vote. Second to him was Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice of the supreme court but a republican presidential nominee of 20 years earlier. Several newcomers were climbing into the race, among them Governor Landon, who stood ninth.

By December the race was on in earnest. From that point, five Institute polls have charted the ups and downs of the leaders' popularity:

	DEC.	FEB.	APRIL	MAY 3	TODAY
Landon	33%	43%	56%	56%	55.4%
Borah	26	28	20	19	18
Hoover	12	17	14	14	14
Knox	8	7	5	5	6
Vandenberg	3	4	4	5	6
Others	18	1	1	1	.6

Obviously from a comparison of these figures republican opinion was in flux all winter. By late March Landon had reached his highest point—56%—and republican opinion was ready to solidify. During April and May the picture has changed only in minor details.

This raises a problem.

If republican sentiment solidified three months before the national convention, republican strategists may well ask themselves, will major party voters become similarly unmovable before the November elections? If so, how much time is left for the republicans to do missionary work?

It may be that the republicans' biggest remaining chance to change votes will come when they nominate a flesh and blood candidate next week.

Landon will get first consideration. The Kansan's supporters claim about 350 votes for him on the first ballot—substantially more than any other single candidate will have—and Institute polls show that he has strong popular followings in every section of the country.

In the critical west central states—the corn belt—Landon polls 61% of the republican vote, which is several points higher than his average for the country as a whole. In old-line republican New England, furthermore, he is the first choice of 59%.

One thing more may turn the final tide in his favor: This year the republican party seeks to clear itself of the charge that its candidate is selected in a "smoke-filled room," that is, in the interests of expediency rather than of popular demand. Landon, the polls show, has zoomed to a popular lead in the short space of six months and holds that position today without faltering.

Borah would have been the popular favorite a year ago. But 1936 is not 1935. His single-handed battle against the traditions of the republican "Old Guard" has not increased his authority with party leaders, and, more important, has apparently not added to his popular following.

Ironically, Senator Borah probably judged the temper of public opinion correctly months ago, when he decided to enter as many primaries as possible. In public opinion at that time he was the favorite. But that was 1935. The results in the Ohio and New Jersey primaries—in addition to Borah's showing in recent Institute polls—indicate that, far from being the convention favorite, he is likely to be fighting against tremendous odds.

Hoover will have votes on the early ballots at Cleveland it seems certain, in spite of his declaration that he is not a candidate. But the evidence indicates that for him, too, 1936 is not "the year."

From 17% in February he dropped to 14% in April. He has remained exactly at this figure in two subsequent polls.

New England esteems him next to Landon and he has gone up a few points to 21% on the Pacific coast in an aftermath of the "Hearst vs. Hoover" primary in California. But he is substantially less popular among midwest farmers and among those 1932 democrats who want to vote for a republican candidate this year.

If Hoover is out of the race, where will Hoover strength turn?

In a test poll recently, in which only three names were proposed to the voters—Landon, Borah and Knox—the Institute found that Landon benefited more than the others by the elimination of Hoover, Vandenberg and Dickinson. This may indicate that popular sentiment for Hoover turns most naturally to Landon as second choice.

Knox-Vandenberg occupy trailing positions in the race today, but one fact about their standings is important: They have remained available. Colonel Knox's popular strength is substantially what it was in December, at the beginning of the contemporary boom for Landon. And Vandenberg has boosted his national rating a few points during the present session of congress.

Unlike Borah, neither Knox nor Vandenberg has suffered decline from a previous majority. If Landon falters after the first ballots, one of these two might step up to win the prize.

The white-haired senator is by this time the most conspicuous dark horse of 1936. His name has been mentioned so often as a potential compromise candidate that his nomination could hardly be a surprise. Republican campaign managers might have a somewhat difficult time in beating Roosevelt with the Iowan, however, whose popularity with G. O. P. voters slid from 1% to .6% during May.

After Next Week---

Or will it be some other candidate not now so conspicuous? Only the convention, beginning a week from Tuesday, can give the final answer. Institute polls reveal, however, that Landon is the favorite of rank and file republicans, and a stronger candidate with all voters than Borah or Vandenberg at present.

American Voters Write a Platform

NEW YORK, May 30.—When the republicans and democrats meet in their respective national conventions shortly, it will be possible for the first time in history to adopt platform planks that have already been approved by the voters.

This is how it is possible:

Ever since October a nation-wide group of leading republican, democratic and independent newspapers have made possible the weekly polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion. And ever since October these weekly polls have revealed the way American voters regard the vital issues of the day.

One week it has been the supreme court; another week, national defense. Or again, the Institute has reported public opinion on the relief set-up. Nation-wide opinion—like any other nation-wide activity—has been measured and recorded in newsprint.

The question before the republican and democratic parties is the practical one—how to bring their platforms into line with public opinion.

From the evidence of successive Institute polls, summarized below, two things are apparent:

1. Unless the republicans want to flout public opinion they will have to write into their platform liberal concessions to social security.

2. The democrats will have to move toward a more conservative fiscal policy.

All the following reports are from weekly polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion since October.

Pre-Convention Analysis of Candidates, Parties, Platforms

Today The Constitution and more than 70 other leading American newspapers present in AMERICA SPEAKS the most ambitious pre-convention analysis of candidates, parties and platforms ever attempted in the history of journalism.

The information, based on returns from the latest impartial nation-wide poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, make known these significant facts just nine days before the opening of the republican national convention:

1. The final popular vote among republicans on the six men mentioned most frequently for the nomination.
2. An analysis of how the country feels about leading issues that may be discussed by democratic and republican platform makers.

This preview of the 1936 presidential campaign marks the first attempt ever made to obtain an impartial and scientifically accurate pre-convention picture of nation-wide public opinion toward campaign personalities and issues.

The American voter holds the fate of politicians and parties in the palm of his hand. That's why you'll want to know at all times exactly how he feels about political matters and national affairs that most concern him. Watch for his views each Sunday in AMERICA SPEAKS in The Constitution.

America Speaks

Special Polls Show How Landon, Others Would Race F. D. R.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AIPO)—Because Landon is the most popular candidate in the republican party today, does that mean he would make the best race against Roosevelt?

The American Institute of Public Opinion set out to find the answer to that question this month. The questions submitted to a cross-section of American voters in a series of polls follow:

"If Landon and Roosevelt are the candidates for president, how, will you vote?"

"If Borah and Roosevelt are the candidates for president, how will you vote?"

"If Vandenberg and Roosevelt are the candidates for president, how will you vote?"

The results of these polls reveal that Landon would today fare better against Roosevelt than either Borah or Vandenberg. Senator Borah would make the second best race, whereas Senator Vandenberg would today fare worst.

In the balloting Landon polls 2 per cent more of the national vote than Borah does, and 6 per cent more than Vandenberg.

The Institute emphasized that these rankings, which were compiled from thousands of "public opinion" ballots, are strictly on the basis of the three candidates' pre-convention fame and popularity. Landon stands out as the popular favorite, Borah as the runner-up and Vandenberg as a highly eligible compromise candidate, in the event that the front-runners collide with each other. But the Institute offers no judgment of how these candidates would fare after the national convention, when one of them may receive the tremendous build-up that will come to the republican nominee.

Poll Throws Light On Borah's trength

Nevertheless, the results throw considerable light on what would be the effect of a bolt by Senator Borah, in the event that he cannot be reconciled at the national convention.

Although Borah is 2 per cent weaker than Landon for the country as a whole, he is actually 1 per cent stronger than Landon in two important sections: The east central states and the mountain states.

Following are tables showing the national vote by sections:

New England	Landon 6 points better
Middle Atlantic	Landon 5 points better
East Central	Borah 1 point better
West Central	Landon 2 points better
South	Landon 1 point better
Mountain States	Borah 1 point better
Pacific Coast	Landon 1 point better

These figures have practical significance as soon as they are applied to the political battles being waged in these sections. In its survey of Roosevelt's popularity, published May 10 in The Constitution, the institute revealed that no less than 15 states are politically "doubtful" at this time.

In these states neither party is today able to obtain more than 53 per cent of the popular vote. Shifts may throw these states either way before November. Among them are all four east central states (Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan), and three mountain states (Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado).

As of today, Borah's popular vote in these states would top Landon's by an average of 1 point—no small concern when a state like Ohio, with 26 electoral votes, hangs on the 50-50 line, or when Illinois, with 29 electoral votes, stands at a bare 51 to 49 for the republicans.

But other sections counteract this Borah advantage. In New England a Borah nomination today might throw several states to the democrates. In the middle Atlantic states, where Borah lags five points behind Landon, the republicans cannot afford to throw votes away. And in the west central states, south and Pacific coast, Landon is substantially stronger than the Idahoan.

Indicated strategy for the republicans is to nominate Landon, reconcile Borah.

Would Vandenberg Grow Stronger With Build-Up?

Very few axioms of politics are reliable.

Is it a reliable axiom that "any republican nominee would poll about the same against Roosevelt?"

This reasoning assumes that the only issue of the campaign will be Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt, and probably does not pay enough attention to the positive appeal which the republican nominee should have.

The poll indicates that today—before the build-up that will follow the nomination—Borah would not poll so many votes against Roosevelt as would Landon.

Would the relative newcomer Vandenberg do any better?

The poll shows him weaker than Landon in every section:

New England	Landon 3 points stronger
Middle Atlantic	Landon 5 points stronger
East Central	Landon 5 points stronger
West Central	Landon 6 points stronger
South	Landon 4 points stronger
Mountain States	Landon 10 points stronger
Pacific Coast	Landon 5 points stronger

As of today, three leading republican candidates would not poll "about the same against Roosevelt."

The problem of the republican national convention, within the next fortnight, therefore, resolves itself to this: Can Landon be "built up" any further during the free-for-all of the campaign, and, if not, can Borah, Vandenberg, or some other candidate be "built up" beyond Landon's present position?

Two Important Polls Coming

Ten days from now the republican national convention will be in session in Cleveland to pick a nominee to race Roosevelt. As soon as his name is announced, the American Institute of Public Opinion will begin a nation-wide poll between the two candidates.

Next Sunday, meanwhile, the institute will report in The Constitution how many American voters say they would vote for "the republican candidate" no matter who he is.

Miss Bruce Weds Herman E. Short Jr At Home Ceremony

A marriage of cordial interest to many friends was that of Miss Dorothy Allene Bruce to Herman Everett Short Jr., of Decatur, which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. McGee, on Wilton drive in Decatur. Rev. S. B. Wingfield, of Maysville, greatuncle of the bridegroom, performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends. Miss Helen Schaid, pianist, and Miss Elizabeth Jackson, violinist, rendered a program of nuptial music. Paul Crutchfield sang "At Dawning," and O, Promise me."

The altar of palms and ferns was arranged in front of the mantel at the end of the living room. In front of the effective background were two baskets of calla lilies and alternating were seven-branched candelabra which held burning white tapers.

Wedding Party.

Ushers included Horace Denning and Billy Walthour, Miss Vera Spell, of Fitzgerald, acted as maid of honor. Her gown was a summer model of pink mousseline de soie over taffeta. The neckline was edged with narrow ruffles of the material. The tiny ruffles were also introduced to outline the edge of the graceful floor length skirt. Her hat and accessories matched her gown and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses, snapdragons and sweetpeas tied with green satin ribbon.

Little Doris Robbins, niece of the bridegroom, served as junior maid. Her frock was fashioned of blue mousseline trimmed with narrow ruffles and she wore a band of blue with a touch of pink in her hair. She carried a nosegay of sweet peas and pastel garden flowers.

Lovely Bride.

The lovely bride entered with her brother, Edward P. McGee, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the bride-groom and his best man, John Coxwell. The bride's blonde beauty was enhanced by her wedding gown of ivory satin and was fashioned along graceful princess lines. Made with long sleeves and high neck, the gown's only trimming was a slightly rolled collar in front and small satin-covered buttons outlined the center back of the close-fitting bodice. The gown extended into a long train that was covered entirely by her bridal veil of point d'Alencon lace. It was attached to her hair in halo effect which was outlined across the front with seed pearls and fastened under the chin with a cluster of orange blossoms on either side. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and swainsona.

Following the marriage service, an informal reception was held. Mrs. E. C. Bruce, mother of the bride, wore powder blue chiffon with matching accessories and her shoulder bouquet was of pink rose buds and swainsona. Mrs. H. E. Short, the bridegroom's mother, wore a model of hyacinth blue chiffon and her flowers were a spray of Roosevelt roses and sweet peas. Mrs. McGee, sister of the bride, wore a gown fashioned of peach lace with a shoulder bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and sweet peas.

The lace-covered tea table was centered with a crystal bowl of white roses, snapdragons, sweet peas, feverfew and delicate fern. Crystal candelabra held white lighted tapers. Sweet peas, larkspur and the feverfew were used in artistic arrangement on consoles and tables throughout the reception rooms. The bride's book was kept by Miss Katherine Strong, and assisting in serving were Misses Mary Givens, Emma Whitchly, Nell Moss, Lucile Hamby, Mrs. W. T. Bell and Mrs. Charles Visscher.

Wedding Trip.

During the evening Mr. Short and his bride left for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Toronto, and New York, after which they will reside at 305 E. Ponce de Leon avenue, Decatur. The bride chose for traveling a blue crepe, fashioned on tailored lines with a small cluster of valley lilies at the high neck. Her hat and accessories were of navy.

Among out-of-town guests were Mrs. E. C. Bruce, of Ocilla; Mrs. Pearl Witchly, of Miami; Rev. S. B. Wingfield, of Maysville; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Cheny, and Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Skinner, of Athens; Mr. and Mrs. Tom McLain, of LaGrange, Misses Vera Spell and Frances Harris, of Fitzgerald.

A group of business girls wore this slip every day for six weeks, washing it daily. They're simply mad about it. Here's what they like—

- It fits without a wrinkle, under the tightest dresses.
- It doesn't cling, twist, ride up or sag.
- The comfortable elastic straps don't slip or bind.
- There's no strain on seams—they won't pull out.
- It keeps its color after all the many washings.
- It's made of fine silk for softness, with added rayon for long wear.

You'll like this slip so well you'll tell your friends about it!

Just squeeze it in suds like your stockings.

Hang it on a hanger to dry.

The back seam is the secret of the perfect fit.

Shadow panel—is sheer-frock necessity.

Idalakers Forms Attractive Name Given Summer Home of Atlantans

By Sally Forth.

APPROPRIATE, as well as attractive, is the name Idalakers, which has been given the charming summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William Akers out on Spalding drive. The name was inspired by the name of the home's gracious chatelaine, Ida Akers, and the 45 idle acres surrounding the white clapboard cottage. Sally vouches for the fact that Idalakers is just as attractive as its name implies. And those fortunate enough to be counted among Ida and Bill Akers' friends can testify for the genuine hospitality that is dispensed by the owners of Idalakers, as well as by their daughter and son, Ida and Bill Jr.

Situated atop a high hill, the home commands a picturesque view of encircling hills and valleys. Every detail of the house bespeaks friendliness and homeliness, even to the old-fashioned well, from which one can draw a bucket of clear cold spring water, that stands on a side porch. The porch is built around the entire house and green and white iron furniture, hammocks, cushioned swings, pingpong tables, etc., make either side of the porch an inviting spot. Old-style iron lanterns, hanging from wrought-iron hooks and in which burn red and green lights, add their cheery welcome to guests as they approach the house up the long driveway leading to Idalakers.

Incidentally, there is a beautiful flower garden gracing one side of the drive. Close observation reveals that iris of many hues predominate in the variety of blooms planted in the garden. No doubt this is due to the fact that Ida Akers is a valuable member of the Iris Garden Club and a beloved past president of this organization which bears the name of her favorite flower. A clear cyrstal lake, fed by numerous near-by springs, lies at the foot of the sloping garden and there is no doubt that the lake will prove a popular spot this summer for friends of Ida and Bill Jr., who are as popular with the school set as their parents are with the married contingent. Divingboards, boats and floating rafts are a few of the devices provided for those enjoying the lake during the warm months. Tennis courts, croquet grounds and horseshoe rings are also provided for the entertainment of those visiting Idalakers.

Sally could go endlessly on describing the exterior of the Akers' summer home. Bnt trusting to the imagination of readers of this column, Sally invites them to make a visit with her inside the lovely home. Entering the spacious living room through wide doors from either side or end of the porch, the room presents the setting of an attractive hunting lodge. Over the big gray stone fireplace is the head of a deer, known to hunters as an eight-point buck, and on either side stuffed owls blink their bleary eyes. Mounted tarpon and other silvery-like fish, hooked by Bill Akers Sr. in tropical waters, grace the side walls of the room, whose high ceiling rises into a peak-like shape in the center. Knotty pine with maple finish forms the woodwork throughout the house and gives a mountain lodge appearance to the home's interior. Maple fnrniture was selected for the home, the chairs and divans in the living room being upholstered in delft blue linen. Blocked linen of the same shade of blue, with white squares, hang from the glass-covered doors and windows.

Treasures collected for several years by Ida and Bill Akers for their "dream house" occupy important places throughout the home. A pair of wrought-iron chandeliers holding white tapers hang from the living room ceiling. They were copied from the historic chandeliers that hang from the quaint old Raleigh tavern in Williamsburg, Va., where Ida and Bill have visited on several occasions. The floors are covered with bright-colored hooked rugs bought by the Akers' on their last trip to Nova Scotia. Strings of flaming red peppers hang from the end of the stone mantelpiece, these being brought by the Atlantans from South America, as were the copper kettles standing on each side of the fireplace. A heavy steel gun, called a blunderbuss in olden days, stretches full length across the mantel and is one of the Akers' most valued possessions. It was given them by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haverty, who bought the historic old gun in New Orleans' famons French quarter.

Ida Akers' pride and joy is a fire screen on which is depicted a marsh scene. Brown cattails, in the marshlands, decorate the lower part of the screen. Greenish, squatty bullfrogs are seen amongst the cattails and wild geese wing overhead.

The upstairs bedrooms, with their connecting baths, continue the summer lodge effect. Maple furniture, hooked rugs, red and white monks' cloth bedspreads are only a few of the furnishings responsible for this informal atmosphere.

The kitchen and dining room are connected to the main part of the house by an open runway 50 feet in length. Maple wood and cherry red upholstery make a striking contrast for the tall green pine trees seen through wide glass windows from the dining room. The kitchen boasts the last word in modern equipment and Sally was intrigued with the hickory-cured hams hanging from the adjoining pantry's ceiling, which, no doubt, will play an important part in making the picnics never-to-be-forgotten occasions this summer at Idalakers.

WHEN Bob Candler was a medical student at the University of Chicago, little did he dream that his future wife was also studying away in the vicinity. At Northwestern University, to be exact. You see, at that time he had never met Sarah McCray, who is to become his bride on June 24.

But since they have become acquainted, they find they attended the same dances and parties many times. And what fun they have discussing the affairs, always beginning, "Did you happen to attend ——," or "Were you at ——?"

Fate decreed that the couple would not meet until the Christmas holidays of 1934. The occasion was the beautiful dinner party that Sarah gave at the Driving Club for Bob's cousin, Rena Candler, just prior to her marriage to Bill Chambers. You remember the party, of course, for it was society's favorite topic of conversation for many days. The sheer beauty of the table fairly dazzled the guests with its cellophane cloth over shimmering silver, its centerpiece of white orchids, and its silver appointments.

But to get back to the engagement, Bob was a stag at that party. Being a medical student with several years more of college as a prospect, and also being a young man of very sensible views, he felt that he had no business falling in love.

But Cupid took a hand, entirely disregarding such sane ideas. Bob fell in love the minute his eyes met Sarah's.

And where do you suppose Sarah received her engagement ring? On top of Lookout mountain! Bob had met her in Cincinnati and they were motoring to Atlanta. En route they stopped over in Chattanooga, and the top of a mountain seemed just the right place for such a ceremony.

"For the reason that it seemed nearer heaven than any other place," explained Bob.

MR. AND MRS. A. D. ADAIR have just returned from Washington, D. C., where they had the pleasure of seeing their attractive daughter, Roline, receive her diploma for several years of excellent work at Gunston hall. Roline was quite popular at the school, and proved herself as capable in scholastic affairs as in those of a social nature. Roline received many lovely gifts at graduation, among which is an exquisite diamond watch given her by her grandmother, Mrs. J. S. Clarke, who motored with Mr. and Mrs. Adair to Washington to see the service.

One very unexpected and wonderful present that she and the other members of the class received was from the father of a classmate, Mary Ellen Corby, who is prominent and widely known in affairs of the capital city. Mr. Corby invited all 25 seniors to spend a week at the Sea View Country Club, near Atlantic City, and everything in his power was done to make the visit enjoyable. Flowers and candy were in the rooms of all the girls during their stay, and the days were completely filled with memorable events.

Roline and the family will journey to Princeton, N. J., the early part of this month to attend the graduation at Princeton University, where Dick, Roline's brother, is a prominent member of the senior class. It is with pleasure that the young Adairs' friends hear of their graduations, for they await their return to Atlanta circles with much interest.

A DELIGHTFUL tea on the terrace overlooking the lake at the Brookhaven Country Club will follow the annual spring meeting of the Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls school, which will be held tomorrow afternoon. The tea will be a compliment to the new officers of the circle, who will be elected at the meeting, and in honor of Mrs. Irving Schweppe, the retiring president, and her capable corps of officers.

Miss Sarah McCray To Wed Robert W. Candler in June

Social significance and the cordial interest of a host of friends throughout the south and the midwest attend the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ellsworth McCray, of Kendallville, Ind., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sarah McCray, to Robert West Candler, of Atlanta. The ceremony, which will be brilliantly solemnized at the McCray home in Kendallville on June 24, will unite families who have written important chapters in the social, cultural and financial annals of the country.

Miss McCray is the only child of her parents, who rank among Indiana's most prominent and influential citizens. Her mother, is the former Miss Lena Orr, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William F. Orr, of Georgia and South Carolina, and she is the niece of the late W. W. Orr and of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Miller, of Atlanta.

The bride-elect's father is a financial and industrial leader of Kendallville, being president of the Refrigerator Sales Corporation which bears his name. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hiram McCray, the latter having been before her marriage Miss Amanda Reynolds, whose family founded the city of Reynoldsburg, Ohio.

Miss McCray is well known in Atlanta, having spent much time here as the feted and admired guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Miller. She has never made a formal debut, but she has been a recognized belle in whatever circle she has chosen to move. Inheriting much of her mother's charm and beauty, she is a slender, graceful brunet, possessing dark hair with a beautiful natural wave, and grayish-brown eyes.

Her natural gifts have been augmented by unusual educational privileges and the cultural advantages of world travel. Following her graduation from Kendallville High school, she attended De Pauw University at Greencastle, Ind. Upon completion of her sophomore year, she entered the University of the Southwest of England at Exeter in Devonshire, England. Returning to the the States, she matriculated at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., from where she was graduated in 1934 with an A. B. degree. She was a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity and of Alethenai, honorary literary society, at Northwestern. She also holds membership in Tri Kappa, a state organization in Indiana that is devoted to charity.

Mr. Candler is the son of Mrs. Asa Warren Candler and the late Major Candler, U. S. A., who held a distinguished army record. His mother is the former Miss Hattie Lee West, daughter of Mrs. Robert Lee West, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and the late Mr. West. On his paternal side, the groom-elect is the grandson of Judge John S. Candler and the late Mrs. Lula Garnier Candler. His brothers and sisters are Mr. and Mrs. John S. Candler II, Asa Warren Candler Jr., William Harold Candler and Miss Marguerite Louisa Candler.

The Candler name is indelibly written upon the pages of Georgia history, the members of the family having for generations been prominently identified with the development of the state. The groom-elect inherits from his forbears the mental capacity for which they have been famous, as is indicated by his splendid scholastic record. He graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in 1933 from Emory University, where he was a popular figure in campus activities. He was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and the D. V. S. honor society, was editor of the annual, The Campus, and a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Following his graduation at Emory, Mr. Candler entered the medical school of Chicago University where he was a member of the Phi Chi medical fraternity. After a year in Chicago, he returned to the Emory medical school and will graduate from there next year.

Following their marriage, Mr. Candler will bring his lovely young bride to Atlanta where she will be royally welcomed by a host of friends and by members of the younger married contingent.

The bride-elect's father is one of Birmingham's leading physicians and prominent educators.

Mr. Breitenbucher's parents are among Atlanta's most beloved and well-known citizens and his sisters are Mrs. J. Ware Holliday and Mrs. William Lamar Fulghum, of Atlanta.

The late Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitenbucher, who were among Atlanta's earliest pioneers, were the groom-elect's paternal grandparents, and the late Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Ackerman, of Cleveland, Ohio, the latter being the former Miss Lydia Kennedy Robertson, of Madison, Ga., were his maternal grandparents. Morris Ackerman, of Cleveland, Ohio, the noted newspaper columnist, is the groom-elect's uncle. Mr. Breitenbucher's mother was before her marriage Miss Isabelle Ackerman, of Madison, Ga., and she is prominently identified with Atlanta's cultural, civic and educational circles, having held many high offices in prominent patriotic organizations in that city.

The groom-to-be was educated at the Georgia School of Technology, where he belonged to the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. Since coming to Birmingham over a year ago, where he is connected with the Hooper-Holmes Credit Bureau, he has become prominently identified with this city's business and social circles and he and his bride will be popular additions to Birmingham's young married ranks following their marriage in the late summer.

BRIDGE ACCORDING TO CULBERTSON

By ELY CULBERTSON.

HUMAN ELEMENT COUNTS A LOT IN BRIDGE.

THOUSANDS of letters reach me every week requesting bridge information that ranges from the proper bidding of a hand to the correct procedure in case of a card overturned in the deal. Questions involving rules are usually easy to answer—the official rule book always is ready.

Nor can there be any trouble in deciding how a certain hand should be bid. It is when the two hands of partners, or all four hands are submitted that difficulty creeps in.

It is all very well for me, sitting in my office perhaps thousands of miles away from the scene of the crime, to decide that this or that is the technically correct bid. Obviously that can be my only basis for decision, which is precisely why my own decisions do not satisfy me. How can I point out to my thousands of correspondents that they must temper and adjust my advice to the particular psychology and skill of both their partner and their opponents?

I cannot say too often that bidding which is merely technically correct and does not take into account the personal equation cannot be considered expert bidding.

Time and again when I am sent such a hand as:

♠A K 10 9 7 5 ♥2 ♦K J 10 3 ♣A 5

and asked for the correct rebid (the hand having been opened with a one spade bid and partner having responded one no trump), I am unable to give a clear-cut answer. Taking it over as a personal problem, I know that with some partners I would make the semi-forcing rebid of three spades, relying on their imagination or perhaps aggressiveness to raise me to game on little more than a hope and fair distribution. With other partners, such a bid is futile; I know them to be so stolid or conservative that even if they hold an ace and adequate trump support, they will drop my three spade bid like a burning biscuit. With them, I must do my own gambling and bid four spades. Similarly, if I am so fortunate as to pick up this hand:

♠A Q 6 ♥A 5 ♦K Q 10 4 ♣A 10 3 2

and open the bidding with one diamond, partner responding with one no trump, I must base my next bid on my appraisal of partner's bidding tendencies, plus his playing ability at a probably difficult no trump contract. Whether I now bid two no trump, two clubs, or three no trump depends entirely on such appraisal. Each bid is correct with a certain type partner, consequently two out of the three bids must be wrong in any given case.

Let us arbitrarily assign partner a typical no trump response to a one diamond bid.

♠J 8 5 ♥Q 9 6 ♦J 7 3 ♣K 8 6 5

Suppose now that we raise his no trump response to two. Can there be any doubt that a conservative player would promptly pass? Not in my mind! And of course he would just as promptly drop a two-club rebid by us.

Therefore, if I have a conservative partner I assume he has some such hand, and since our combined holdings make a no trump game an excellent opportunity, I take no chance that he will hang 'twixt heaven and high water at two odd I bid three!

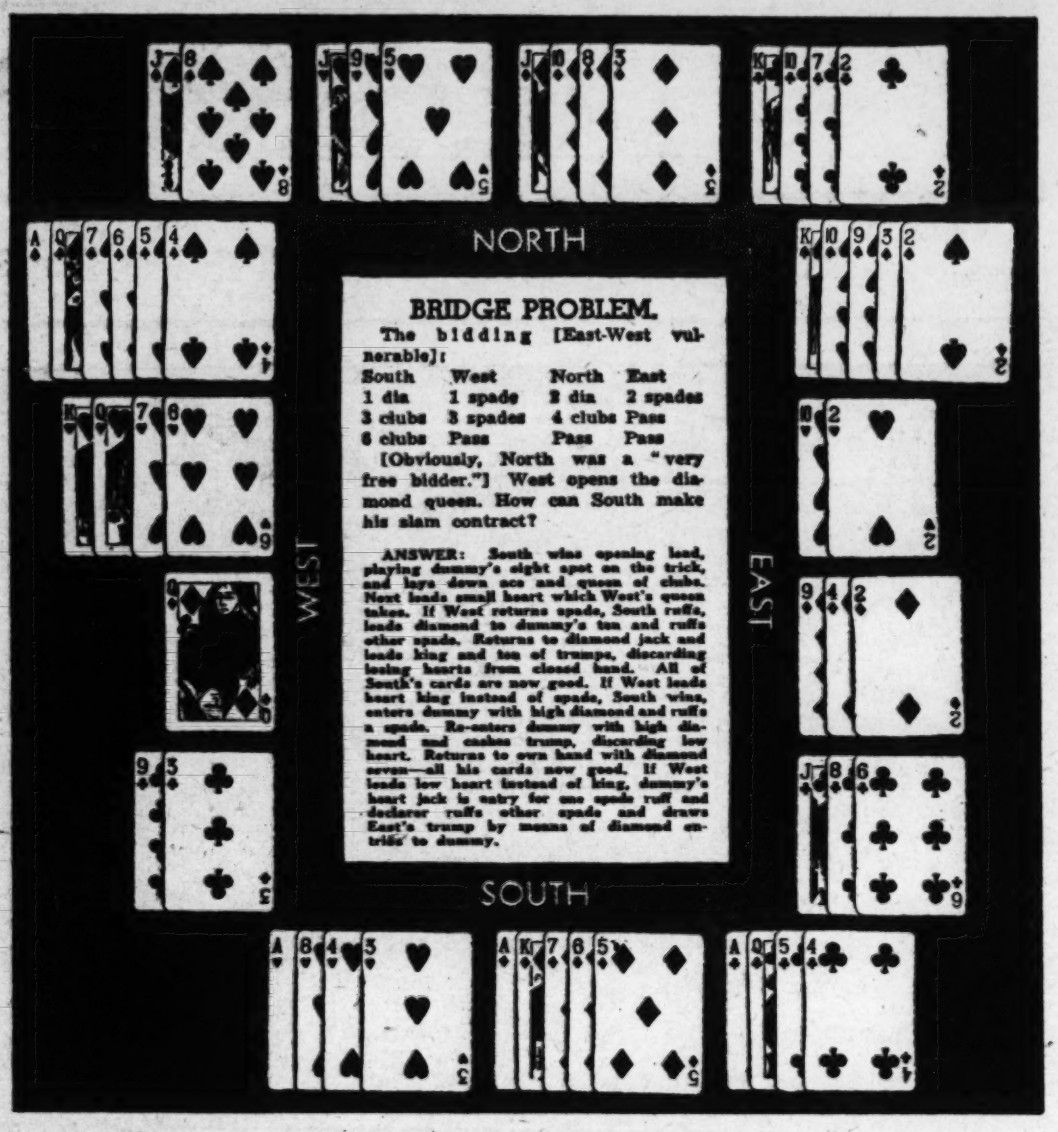

With an aggressive partner, by jumping to three I am merely running an unnecessary risk. I may not find him with so well balanced a hand nor with an honor in each suit. If he has it, a bid of two no trump by me is plenty—he will go on to game himself.

With a third type that I cannot describe better than by the phrase "bidding maniac," I would bid neither two nor three no trump. With these leapfrogs, I would be ultra-conservative, contenting myself with a rebid of two clubs. I would feel quite confident that they would strain to find another bid—that they would certainly find one if they held better than two queens. If they should pass, I would be satisfied there was no game in the hand.

In the final analysis, therefore, it must be seen that knowledge of honor and distributional values is almost worthless without the ability to appraise just people!

Usually there are better guides to the play of a hand than a mere knowledge of percentages. This is fortunate: Mathematics is not a favorite subject of most of us. But occasionally there is no other sign post to follow, and then it is well to know the relative chances for success of two different lines of play. The declarer in today's hand did not know percentages, and lost a vulnerable slam as a consequence.

NORTH
♠Q J 8 5
♥A 10 9 5 3
♣A 7

♦J 8 7 3
♣Q J 10 8 4 2

EAST
♥K Q J 8
♦K 10 5 2
♣9 5 3

SOUTH
♠A K 10 9 7 3
♦A Q 9
♣K 6

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 hearts (1)	Pass	4 no tr (2)	Pass
5 dia (3)	Pass	5 spades (4)	Pass
6 spades (5)	(final bid)

(1) Asking bid.

(2) Response tells South that North holds heart ace and club ace—he cannot hold two "outside" aces and second round heart control.

(3) Second asking bid.

(4) No control in diamonds, North signs off.

(5) South decides to gamble for the slam.

West opened the club queen, South won the king, drew two rounds of trumps and led a heart to the ace. The second round of hearts went to East's king and East now led a low diamond. Declarer saw that if the hearts were divided 3-3 in the opponents' hands, one ruff would establish two heart tricks for diamond discards, and he decided to play for that chance. So he went up with the ace of diamonds, entered dummy with a trump and led a third round of hearts. To his great disappointment, West failed to follow suit and there was nothing to be done except concede defeat.

A knowledge of percentages would have told declarer that it was 44 to 20 against the heart suit breaking 3-3, where as the diamond finesse was exactly an even chance. Such knowledge would have paid a handsome dividend.

(Copyright, 1936, for The Constitution)

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: What is the penalty for a pass out of turn before the bidding has begun?

Answer: The pass is canceled; the auction reverts to the player whose turn it is to bid and the offender must pass at his first opportunity to bid, but may thereafter enter the bidding.

Question: Is the following hand a good one no-trump bid first hand, vulnerable?

♠A J 4 ♥K J ♦A J 9 7 ♣K J 10 8

Answer: No. The distribution favors an opening bid of one diamond.

The Planets—Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

SUNDAY, MAY 31.—Make the most of the hours before 2:30 p. m. for previous to this time you can attain success along any active line. This is a very favorable period for written matters, traveling, and work that requires diplomacy. People born the latter part of May are likely to feel a strong urge to be up and doing. Under such an influence, the mind is quick, witty and keen, so those who attend Sunday services are very apt to hear a good sermon. After 2:39 p. m. and continuing throughout the afternoon and evening, you are likely to feel restless, uneasy and desirous of making changes, but it will be better to follow established methods, customs and routes.

MONDAY, JUNE 1.—Activity and forcefulness may be well applied in mechanical and industrial affairs before 4:48 p. m. Friendships and associations with older people will prove beneficial, especially if your dealings are in conservative matters. However, the entire day does not favor departures from the ordinary, and after 4:48 p. m. you will find that regularity and system are difficult to maintain.

TUESDAY, JUNE 2.—This is an excellent day for making steady progress, for organizing and systematizing your affairs. Friendly contacts should be renewed or established, and this is an auspicious date to improve social, business and artistic matters.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3. — The same good influence as outlined for yesterday are in force through 2:43 p. m., and with increasing force. Therefore the hours previous to 2:43 p. m. may be well used for launching new and important affairs, asking favors, buying and selling. This is a good period to begin journeys and for legal affairs. After 2:43 p. m. you are likely to meet with turmoil and strife, and will find that diplomacy will bring better results than will force.

THURSDAY, JUNE 4.—The combined influences operating throughout the entire day, make this the least favorable day of the week. Important changes are not favored, and more care than usual should be given to diet. Carelessness, vacillation, misunderstandings will be encountered, and it will be better to consider only routine matters.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5.—New beginnings today will meet with slow progress, and if the things you are wanting to start depend on the time element, wait for a more favorable opportunity, or start them earlier in the week under better influences. Mines, land, property interests, and electrical devices are least favored.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6.—Aggressiveness along mechanical and industrial lines will bring good results in the forenoon, but don't use force. In other words, don't over-do, for the prevailing influence is so strong that you may find it difficult to hold yourself in check. The afternoon and evening favors dealings with influential friends or officials and for asking favors.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

Should you receive an important telephone call giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

"I'm Just Lucky"

by Bing Crosby

Fate Smiles, If It's Horses or Careers

Bing Crosby: Ready for "Rhythm on the Range."

I SUPPOSE I've got nobody to blame for this but myself. I admitted to a Paramount publicity man that I would like some day to find time to write. And the next thing I know he is introducing me to an editor who thinks it would be a swell idea for me to write an article about Bing Crosby.

That puts me on a spot. If I could write about my golf game, or having Bob Burns and his bazooka with me on the radio and now in a picture, it wouldn't be so bad; I could boast a little about my golf and a lot about Bob. (Give an actor a chance to talk and he is bound to want to boast a bit.)

But as for writing about an actor named Bing Crosby, I'm stymied. He's just a lucky guy who happened to be in the right places at the right times—and there's the whole story.

Anybody who has read this far can think of somebody who could go on the set of the picture I'm making now ("Rhythm on the Range") and do as good a job as Bing Crosby can. The new guy could be better looking, he could sing better and he might be able to act. That would be something to talk about.

For when I said a minute ago that Bing Crosby is an actor, I used the word advisedly. Bing Crosby appears in pictures, and anybody who appears in pictures is called an actor. But—well—

THE other day the studio publicity man on the set said:

"Say, Bing, there's something I wish you would clear up for me. I've heard half a dozen different versions of the story, and I have never been able to find out which was right.

"What was the picture of yours that made the studio decide you could act?"

Well, he had me there. I wouldn't know.

As a matter of fact, Bing Crosby hasn't the soul of an actor. The first time he was on the stage proved that, back when he was a school kid playing Julius Caesar in Shakespeare's play. He gave the play an ending that must have turned the author over in his grave.

Everything was all right until Caesar had been killed and the curtain was falling. Then this Crosby kid opened his eyes and saw that the curtain was going to hit him. He was in a spot, all right; those curtains are heavy.

But he had heard all about "the show must go on" and "I'd die for my art." He knew what he should do. But did he do it? He got up and walked upstage before the curtain reached him, and wasn't at all concerned over the fact that the audience howled for five minutes. He even went out and took several bows. Anybody with the soul of an actor would never have done a thing like that.

AND there was the first motion picture in which Crosby played. Ray McCarey, who was then an assistant director at Pathe, sold the studio on the idea of making a short with Crosby. It was called "Rip-Stitch the Tailor," and was worse than it sounds. When studio executives saw it they chased Ray and Crosby out of the studio and threw the film reel after them.

McCarey threw a brick through a window, and got his job back the next day because they liked his nerve. Crosby just kept going until he reached Chicago. He had known in the first place that he shouldn't try to act, and he has never done it since.

A while ago I said that Bing Crosby was a lucky guy who had got by just by being in the right place at the right time. I'm going to prove it.

Al Rinker and Bing left Spokane a few years ago with a broken-down car and about 10 bucks. They weren't loaded with ambition. They had left college because the entertainment business looked like good easy money. Al Rinker's sister, Mildred Bailey, the radio singer, put them up when they landed in Los Angeles broke, got them a job singing in a night club and then a job in vaudeville.

From then on Lady Luck led Crosby around by the nose. Paul Whiteman happened to hear him and Rinker in a Los Angeles theater. He gave them a job, took them to New York, hired Harry Barris to make a trio and there was the beginning of the Rhythm Boys. And why? It all happened because Whiteman was looking for vocalists at the time and Crosby was handy. Somebody else might just as well have got the break.

THEN, three years later, Whiteman's band was back in California to make the picture "The King of Jazz." Crosby didn't have much to do, so he spent his time learning to play golf, having a lot of fun and becoming a Native Son. He went so native that when the picture was finished he told Whiteman he didn't want to go back East.

As it turned out, he kicked around for a while, made that "Rip-Stitch the Tailor" thing, and then went into a musical show on a basis of no profits, no pay. The Crosby luck held; there were plenty of profits. He ended up with money in his pocket and a job singing at the Cocoanut Grove.

That was another case of being in the right place at the right time. Making phonograph records was still a good business. And the movies were just going in for song in a big way. Having a job at the Grove gave a singer enough reputation so that he fell into offers to make records and sing in pictures.

But the best example of what time and place can do came when Crosby went to New York to work in radio. If it had been six months earlier or six months later, he might have been just another radio singer.

BUT at that moment the broadcasting companies were fighting for talent. One had a Morton Downey; one had somebody else; one had a Ruth Etting; another had an Arthur Tracy. Radio was growing, the studios were getting a lot of commercials, and there was a dog-fight over anybody who could be built into a name.

One more point and Q. E. D. When big musical pictures started to make a hit and every studio in Hollywood was looking for new talent and new ideas, somebody decided it would be a good stunt to make a picture around a bunch of radio names. So Crosby came back to California and has been here ever since. Since "The Big Broadcast" he has just been coasting along, not doing anything outstanding, not doing anything too bad (I hope). He has just stayed lucky.

To show how lucky, take a look at his experience at the Santa Anita race meeting. In spite of a lot of cracks that have been made about "Crosby's Folly," the horses didn't do so badly. Six Crosby horses were at the meeting, and at one stage of the season they came in with six straight seconds.

But on the last day Crosby was five or six thousand dollars down from betting on his entries. He was disgusted. He wasn't sure he would go to the track that day, and he had made up his mind that he wouldn't bet. One of his mares was going to run, but he didn't care.

As it happened, the mare had turned in a fine trial the afternoon before, and the trainer tried all morning to get Crosby on the phone to tell him to be sure to have a bet down on her. The phone call was never completed.

BUT it was a swell day and Crosby got away from the studio early. He went to the track. Still he had no great interest in the mare and he was not going to bet. Again it was a matter of time that turned the trick.

He reached the track early and, having nothing else to do, strolled out to the paddock, just to see how the horse looked. The trainer grabbed him.

"Say, Mr. Crosby," he said, "this mare is tops today. She turned in a trial yesterday that was a honey. You'd better get a good bet down."

Crosby said "Yeah" and passed it all off as a trainer's enthusiasm. The mare was listed at 35 to 1, and even an owner can't call that a good bet. He left the paddock.

On the way to the clubhouse he walked past the pari-mutuel windows. Then for no good reason he stopped. He walked past the hundred-dollar window three or four times, sort of talking to himself. Finally he decided:

"What the heck. The races are already into me for enough so that a few dollars more won't make any difference."

So he split $400 on the mare to win and show—and cashed in for more than he had lost all season when she came romping in at 35 to 1.

That ought to prove that there isn't anything I can write about this guy Crosby. He's just lucky.

Besides, when I said I wanted to write some day, I meant fiction.

WILL JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

Wendel Case Hirelings in Custody, What About The Instigator?

By PETER LEVINS.

WHAT is going to happen to justice in the case of Paul H. Wendel?

That is a pertinent question right at this moment, despite the fact that matters are still pretty much up in the air. Wendel, as you know, was kidnaped, tortured and forced to sign a false confession that he snatched the Lindbergh baby. His abductors are in custody, there has been a wealth of confessions. Justice has the hirelings—what about the instigator? If the hirelings get, say, 5 years, or 15 years, for this offense against society, what does the instigator deserve?

Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, threw his hat into the ring of the Lindbergh-Hauptmann case last fall. He reopened the investigation, understand, for purely unselfish, non-political reasons. It was as a friend of justice, and not as a possible occupant of the White House, that the chief executive bestirred himself in the interests of truth and Hauptmann. If you believe otherwise, then you are a very cynical person.

Unfortunately, Governor Hoffman could not seem to uncover anything not previously unearthed by the New Jersey state police, the New York department, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This, mind you, despite the fact that Hoffman had working for him none other than Ellis Parker, the celebrated sleuth of Burlington county. Surely, one would expect Detective Parker to perform miracles far beyond the combined ability of the state police, the New York police, and the G-men! Yet for once Ellis Parker could not produce.

Came the evening of January 17, 1936. A rather important evening for Bruno Richard Hauptmann was scheduled to die then, at 8 o'clock.

All efforts of the defense forces had failed. The United States supreme court had refused to review the case, the New Jersey court of pardons had rejected a plea for clemency, Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who presided at Hauptmann's trial, had turned thumbs down. The German ex-burglar paced his cell in the death house, awaiting retribution. Contrary to Governor Hoffman's fervent wishes, he had not made a single admission. Hauptmann was ready to die asserting his innocence.

But the friend of justice still had hopes. Things had gone poorly thus far—perhaps the day could still be saved.

And so Hoffman granted a reprieve.

The days passed. Governor Hoffman's name appeared in the headlines, but the publicity could hardly be described as good, because nothing new could be discovered. Hauptmann refused to talk, Attorney General David T. Wilentz kept saying the case was closed so far as he was concerned, and Mr. J. Edgar Hoover echoed his words.

Confession Came Out of Clear Sky.

It was, we can all readily believe, a desperate situation. Being human, Governor Hoffman wished for something to happen that would restore his tarnished prestige, something that would make people believe that he had done right by justice, after all. If the doomed carpenter refused to talk, then maybe somebody else might be willing to say something.

Well, as luck would have it, somebody else did say something. Out of a clear sky, and without Hoffman knowing a thing about it, Paul H. Wendel confessed that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby!

Fifty-one-year-old Paul Wendel was not unknown to the authorities of Mercer county, New Jersey, nor to the detective chief of Burlington. He was born in Trenton, seat of Mercer county, the son of the late Dr. Hugo Wendel, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church. He became a lawyer but was suspended from practice in 1919 and got nine months for perjury. Eventually he won a complete exoneration and was permitted to resume practice.

Early in 1930 six charges of embezzlement were filed against him in rapid succession, and before Governor Larsen could act Wendel submitted his resignation as a practicing attorney. He won delay after delay and succeeded in avoiding trial, although the indictments never were quashed.

Wendel was a married man, with two children, Paul Jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Phillips.

On February 14, 1936, he was about to enter the Hotel Stanford, on West Thirty-second street, Manhattan, when a man stepped up to him and said, "Hello, Paul!" Wendel looked at the stranger, who added, "De Louie wants to see you at headquarters." (Lieutenant James De Louie was a Trenton detective.) At the same instant another man pressed a gun into his side and ordered him to get into a car parked near by.

Wendel got into the car, and they started off. He was not blindfolded, and so he was able to follow the route they took across the East river into Brooklyn. The car went along Coney Island avenue, into the Sheepshead Bay section. Presently the captive was led into a garage in the basement of a two-story brick house, one of a row, and there the boys told him what it was all about.

They said they were the mob that got rid of Justice Joseph Force Crater and other New Yorkers who have mysteriously disappeared. The victims had been killed, placed into barrels of concrete, then dumped into the river. Wendel would get the same dose, they said, if he failed to play ball.

They told him that he was supposed to confess that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby.

Wendel said he would do no such thing. His refusal to play ball caused his captors to go to work on him at intervals during the next 10 days. They punched him, kicked him, burned his ears, held lighted cigarets close to his eyes, and strung him up by the thumbs. This series of tortures caused him to sign a statment which had to be revised several times before the final version was okayed.

On February 24 Wendel was driven to the home of Ellis Parker, at Mount Holly, N. J. He was told to walk up to the door and ring the bell, that if he made a move to escape they would riddle him with bullets. He obeyed. Ellis Parker Jr., 26, one of the Burlington county detective's nine living children, answered the door. As soon as Wendel got inside he asked that the two men in the car be seized.

But the Parkers were in no mood to comply. After all, had not this man confessed to the crime of the century?

Wendel also asked for a doctor, but none was called.

He remained overnight in the Parker home. The next morning Parker drove him to the New Lisbon colony for feeble-minded males. During the journey Wendel noticed that a car with a New Jersey license was following the Parker car. He wrote the number—X39495—on the lining of his vest.

(Later this 1932 Buick was traced to the New Jersey department of motor vehicles. It had been assigned to Gustav Lockwood, an inspector in the department.)

When Parker arrived at the institution, Dr. C. T. Jones informed him that he could not accept Wendel without commitment papers. Parker asked if the patient would be accepted if Dr. Jones received an order from John Ellis, commissioner of institutions. The doctor said he would. Later Dr. Jones received a telephone call from a man representing himself as the commissioner, and Wendel was admitted.

Occupants of the automobile which had followed the Parker car became Wendel's "companions" during his sojourn at the institution. Dr. Jones had been under the impression that the new inmate would remain there for only three or four days—and when he was removed, Dr. Jones was not apprised of his departure.

Meanwhile the Burlington county servants of justice sought more evidence to back up the confession. It is charged that Parker tried to persuade members of the Wendel family to admit that the Lindbergh baby had been held captive, and had died, in their home. It is charged that he warned the wife and children that Wendel faced death in the electric chair but if they co-operated he would get off with a 15-year term, and serve no more than five years.

Who Mailed Copies Of Wendel's 'Confession'?

The Wendels refused to cooperate. They were not tortured.

Bruno Hauptmann was now scheduled to die the evening of Tuesday, March 31. On Friday, the 27th, members of the court of pardons received by mail copies of Wendel's 25-page typewritten confession, signed by him. Just who sent the copies remained a mystery. At any rate, a copy got to Attorney General Wilentz, the chief prosecutor in Hauptmann's trial, and Anthony Hauck, prosecutor of Hunterdon county, where the trial took place. These two officials were arch-foes of Governor Hoffman in the bitter fight over the condemned man.

When Wilentz learned that Wendel was being held in New Lisbon, he telegraphed Parker demanding that the prisoner be delivered to the Mercer county authorities. The upshot of this was that at about 10:30 the night of Sunday, the 29th, County Detective James Kirkham received word that Wendel would

'I Still Believe in Romantic Love'

Says Barbara Stanwyck

"I want to build all my hopes and dreams around one constant figure," Miss Stanwyck says. And that explains her remarkable statement that romance is still her first goal.

Although Miss Stanwyck's 'Ideal' Marriage to Frank Fay Foundered, She Has Kept Her High Idealism

By Lyle Rooks

"I'M THE kind of a fool who still believes in romantic love," said Barbara Stanwyck.

Her smile was bitter-sweet as we curled in opposite corners of a big divan in the living room of her home in Beverly Hills. You remember that room with affection after you have left it. Simple, comfortable, unpretentious and very attractive, it is a reflection of Barbara herself.

"My life in the past few years certainly hasn't justified such a belief," she continued, "but it persists. It is stronger than anything that has happened to me.

"Somewhere in the world there must be someone who feels as I do—someone for me. I shall go on expecting to find him. Every girl grows up cherishing a romantic ideal of a lover whom she will marry and with whom she will live happily ever after. The difference between me and a lot of other women who get sidetracked is that I refuse to give up my ideal. Experience hasn't cured me of it yet. Probably I'm an incurable idealist.

"Anyway, I can't be fickle. I don't want to be interested in one person today, another tomorrow. I want to build all my hopes, all my dreams around one constant figure. Marriage—real, lasting marriage—seems to me the finest thing life has to offer. And I can't be cynical about it."

IT IS doubtful if Barbara Stanwyck could be cynical about anything. She looks at the human panorama through clear, steadfast eyes, sees its weaknesses and its cruelties, and remains convinced of the fundamental, incorruptible goodness of human nature.

That is a pretty marvelous trait to have. Because of it you spiritually warm your heart in Barbara's presence as you did your hands before the friendly glow of the kitchen stove of your childhood.

Life hasn't been particularly lenient to Barbara, either, that she should be so kindly disposed toward it. She has worked since she was a tad. At 13 she got a job with the telephone company in Brooklyn, N. Y., where she was born. Next she fibbed about her age and her experience and was taken on as a pattern cutter. That didn't last very long because the fibs were found out.

At 15 she was working in the chorus of the Ziegfeld Follies. Later she was a chorus girl with the George White Scandals and danced at roof gardens. It was the nearest she ever came to realizing a childish ambition to be a dancer like Isadora Duncan. She never had money enough to take classical dancing lessons. What she earned had to be used for more practical purposes.

She loves to work. She is happiest when going at top speed. "I have worked so long I don't know what to do with myself when I haven't work to do," she says. "Idleness is punishment to me, and I can't help it."

When the marriage she had staked everything on crumpled at last, she proceeded on the theory that hard work was the best antidote for pain and self-pity. Everybody whose business it is to vivisect the emotions and heartaches of Hollywood for the public prints has let himself go concerning that marriage at one time or another. For long it was the eighth wonder of the movie world—to hear us tell it. Barbara Stanwyck and Frank Fay and their world-well-lost marriage were discussed by the column.

BARBARA'S willingness — nay, eagerness — to submerge her brilliant career to marriage and a man was oh'd and ah'd about through so many pages that you probably grew a bit bored with the idea. Yet, there is nothing very remarkable about a woman in love insisting upon playing second fiddle to the object of her affections. It's an awfully old story.

But Barbara's loyalty was a Hollywood byword.

Well, she gave me the explanation of it when she said: "I want to build all my hopes and dreams around one constant figure."

That's the way she's put together. And she hasn't changed because the dice happened to be loaded the first time.

Naturally, when so conspicuous a marital arrangement as hers fails, all the people who have held it up for admiration rush to type with explanations. Very rarely do they know what they are talking about. Probably nobody ever understands all the things which contribute to an unbearable tension between two persons except those two persons themselves, and frequently not even they do. In this case I'm sure they were both badly hurt by their failure. I'm equally sure the extent of that hurt is nobody's business.

Barbara doesn't talk about it. The only clue to the way she feels came when, in the course of our rapt discussion of matrimony (and two women always get rapt when they talk about the human relation which interests them most), I said:

"But don't you think a marriage has 95 per cent less chance of lasting in Hollywood than in any other place?"

"No," Barbara shot back, "I don't think anything of the kind."

"What about the bugaboo of professional jealousy?"

"That isn't strong enough to separate two people who really love each other. Nothing so fundamentally unimportant can come between a man and a woman whose love for each other is the biggest thing in their lives."

SOMETHING wistful looked out of her level eyes for a moment. Then she plunged to the defense of Movietown, one hand ruffling her red hair in her ardor.

"Marriage is marriage wherever you live, and people are pretty much the same everywhere. I don't know why anyone thinks things are so different in Hollywood.

"Picture people have the same problems other people have and they meet them in the same way. You know very well that girls who are glamorous on the screen act like that because they are paid to. They don't go on feeling glamorous all the time offstage."

Barbara knows several famous sirens who prefer baking cakes, hooking rugs and knitting baby blankets to living up to their reputations. She denies that there is much about the business of acting which interferes with normal reactions to the ordinary circumstances of everyday living.

"Of course, we do work that makes greater demands on the emotions than do most other lines of endeavor," she admitted. "But it is still work to us and usually we can divorce ourselves from it and lead perfectly normal lives when we come home at night.

"Most of the crazy things that are done here are done out of panic. People give and go to foolish, over-elaborate parties, dressed to the eyebrows in clothes that are a burlesque on good taste. That's their way of putting up a front, because they think it is expected of them. They aren't having a good time. They're scared. Down underneath they are just simple, friendly human beings afraid of losing what they realize to be a precarious foothold. Success in pictures is so fleeting. In one way or another we are all afraid of it, afraid we won't get it or afraid we'll lose it.

"But the real things of life are the same here as in any other place—happiness, home, children, friends. Real love is real love no matter where you meet it or live it."

That is the way she feels, and you can't doubt her sincerity. Barbara Stanwyck will marry again. She is the sort of woman who is incomplete without marriage. When she does, the man she chooses is to be congratulated. She will be the kind of a wife that wise men dream of. She will throw all the loyalty and honesty of her being, all her great capacity for unselfish love, into building that marriage to endure.

Her name should be Ruth.

Who Do You Think You Look Like?

By Grace Grandville

IN Hollywood we play a sort of guessing game. We saunter along the Boulevard and barge into public places with a roving eye for girls about whom we can speculate: "Who does she think she looks like?" It isn't hard to pick them and sometimes the resemblance is not limited to their imaginations either.

No one in the Hollywood troupe has been so much imitated as Joan Crawford. Nobody else has even approached the extent of her influence over the modes and manners of young girls. Jack Dawn, head of makeup at M-G-M, says Joan epitomizes everything the society girl should be.

"Joan is sophisticated, well groomed, well bred and well educated," says Dawn. "Girls of her type may use more makeup than many. The eyebrows may be slightly penciled, providing the hair in the brows is not black. The brows should be well arched, but not thinned to a fine line. And the lips should be made up full."

Joan has red-brown hair and blue eyes. She is 5 feet, 4 inches in height and weighs 110 pounds.

has definitely red hair (and freckles) and her eyes are gray. She is 5 feet, 5 inches tall and weighs 125 pounds. Myrna's type is sophisticated also. Eyebrows arched to a thin line are becoming to her and the eyelashes that fringe her slanted eyes are right for a more generous use of mascara than round eyes can stand. She makes up her lips to appear a little fuller than they are naturally.

Wide cheek bones, such as hers, indicate that the hair be brought forward somewhat over the sides of the face. However, Myrna's type can stand moderate extremes of hairdress. And she has the dignity to carry definitely planned and elaborate coiffures. Myrna's red hair is given an egg shampoo twice every week.

On the other hand, great simplicity should be the aim of all girls of the Jean Parker type. "There can be no set kind of hairdress for a girl with a face of this type," Dawn says. "The face and features are so perfectly proportioned that any way the individual chooses to do her hair is usually all right."

Jean's type shouldn't wear much makeup. Lipstick should be made to follow the natural shape of the mouth without deviation. Eyebrows shouldn't be obviously plucked. Jean is 5 feet, 3 inches and weighs only 109 pounds. Her hair is brown and her eyes hazel.

Jean Harlow's round face and low, perfectly smooth forehead is flattered by a carefully arranged confusion of curls with the hair above the brow brushed up and back, almost in a pompadour effect. She needs to have her entire forehead exposed to balance the strong modeling of her nose and chin. Rounding lines in applying makeup are correct for this type of face.

Jean now calls the color of her hair brownette, as countless publicity stories have told you. Her eyes are gray-blue. She is 5 feet, 3½ inches tall and weighs 112 pounds.

NORMA SHEARER

has a sculptored beauty. The shape of her head is so perfect that she can wear almost any coiffure. In spite of her present Juliet vogue of brushed back and massed curls, she probably is at her best when her hair is molded sleekly close to her head. Girls of her type should always show at least part of their ears.

Norma can get along with little if any rouge. The delicate natural tint of her kind of skin is more stunning than artificial coloring can be. She isn't the type to adopt vivid lip rouge, either. She applies a light shade in a delicate, perfect curve.

The thing that sets her apart from other women is absolute, exquisite grooming. And that is worthy of imitation and constant striving to attain. Norma never neglects even the smallest detail of her appearance. Her eyes are best described as blue-gray and her hair is brown. She is but 5 feet, 1 inch in height and she weighs 118 pounds.

GRETA GARBO

is an example of the advantage of daring to be distinctive and different. And don't think she didn't do it by making a most careful study of her own features. She has a complete disregard for prevailing styles of hairdress. None of the popular waves for her. Her hair is curled slightly only at the ends. It happens to be a style becoming to many women if they had the courage to refuse to be standardized.

The great Garbo has golden brown hair and blue eyes. She is 5 feet, 6 inches tall and she tips the scales at 125 pounds.

There you are. Look your face over carefully in your looking glass. Decide whether you really have an undeniable likeness to one of these stars. But for goodness sake, be honest with yourself.

When Radio Welcomes Hollywood

All Is Confusion When Movie Folk Appear on the Air

By William L. Stuart

IF CLARK GABLE or Joan Crawford were to ask you rather pleadingly for a favor, you probably would do three things in rapid-fire order.

First, you'd look behind you for the person to whom Clark or Joan was talking. Second, you'd be surprised upon finding it must be yourself. Third, you'd go into a good old-fashioned swoon.

There are two youngsters named Doris Sharp and Sammy Schiff working for the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York who would do nothing of the kind. They're used to having the movie stars, who appear on that hour-long program you hear each Monday evening, ask them for favors.

And they're even sorry that the program will originate in Hollywood starting June 1.

For instance, they kept Joan Crawford from going completely crazy as she rehearsed for her appearance on the program by spiriting her away from the crowds that formed outside the studio.

The Tones were mobbed all during the time they were in the Columbia studios and there were a goodly number of your radio favorites among the people who slipped up to the twenty-second floor for a peep at their favorites.

WHEN Clark Gable rehearsed for his appearance, even the executives came up.

Doris, who should know, says he's much handsomer off the screen than on, and that he makes incredible faces while speaking into the microphone because he can't make them while playing in front of a camera. Then, he says, you can only wiggle your eyebrows.

Clark reveled in scratching his face during a love scene and in looking bored when he was supposed to be angry. He told Doris this before he asked her if she would please, pretty please, see that he got something to eat.

She saw that he got a chicken salad sandwich, pickles, a pot of coffee and a slice of lemon cream pie. He took it to the control room and opened it. When he came to the pie he shook his head.

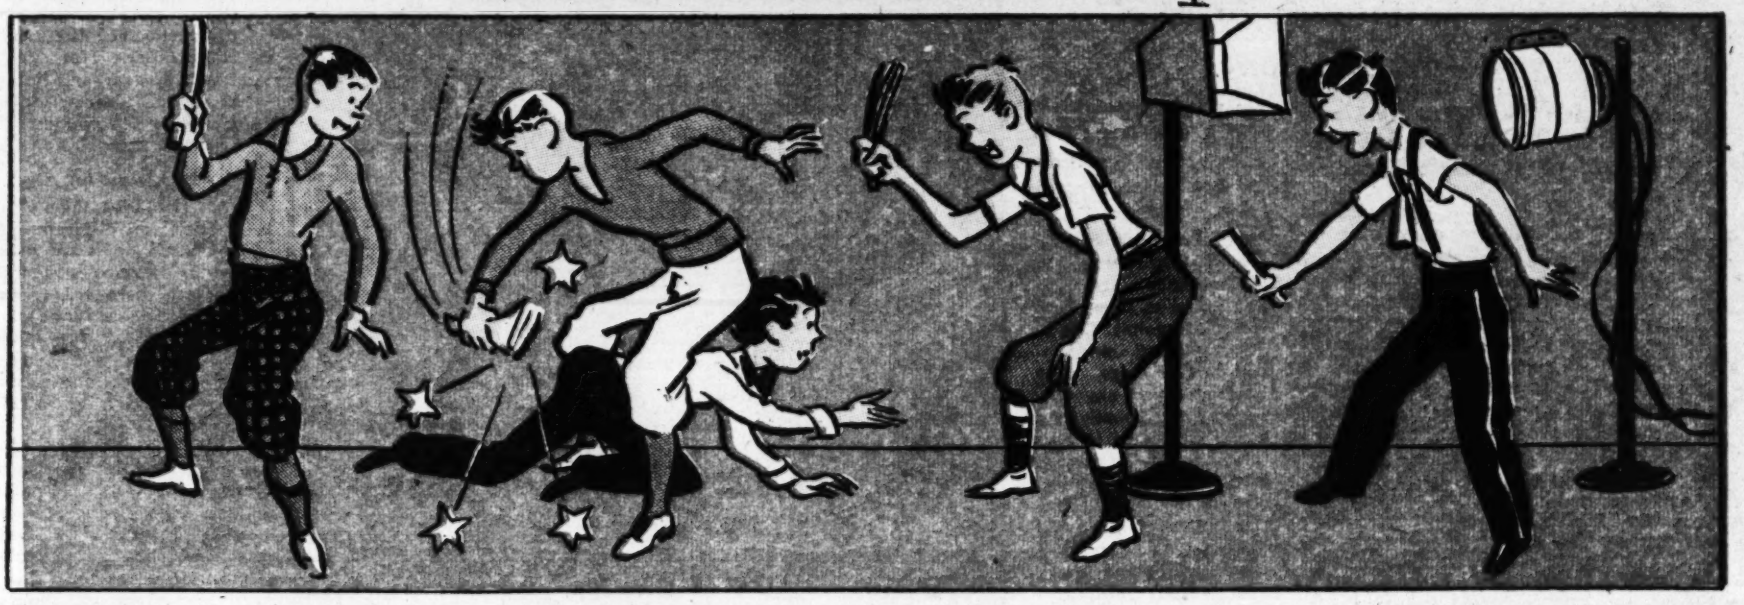

"This isn't squashed," he said. "Lemon meringue pie has to be squashed."

"I'll squash it," said Doris.

She did. Clark put his arm around her and hugged. She still talks to her old friends.

Yes, Doris and Sammy have looked after the stars and have granted them boons, as the saying goes.

Charlie Ruggles looked for their approval on each scene they rehearsed.

Charlie Ruggles gets his first taste of the mike on the Monday night Radio Theater. Below, Freddie Bartholomew collects his own penalty for slipping up on a line.

They squashed Gable's lemon cream pie just the way he wanted it squashed. They saw to it that Freddie Bartholomew got his spankings. And about Jack Oakie—well, we'll start with Jack.

He's a funny lad, according to Sammy Schiff—even funnier than he is on the screen because you don't expect him to be. He talks the same way and makes the same funny faces.

He didn't much enjoy the long rehearsals that radio demands of movie stars. Starting to practice on Wednesday morning on something that he wouldn't play until Monday night is Jack's idea of nothing to do. He worked hard on Wednesday, but that wa. because he was in the studio and couldn't get out.

THURSDAY, he was to have reported at 9. Nine came and went, as did 10 and 11. At noon, the director of the program came to Doris Sharp—"Please," he pleaded, "try to get Oakie."

Doris finally located Jack at his hotel.

"You're three hours late for rehearsal," she reminded him.

She heard him groan. "Look, lady," he demanded, "why do I have to do all this practicing? We're only doing the show once, not taking it on the road."

This was only a few weeks ago, and you'll remember that Mr. Oakie had just gotten himself a Mrs. Oakie. He made an appearance on Ken Murray's show that next week and brought his lovely wife along.

"This," he told her, introducing Doris, "is the reason we didn't have lunch together last week."

Compared with the trouble they had with another pair—Mr. and Mrs. Franchot Tone—Doris and Sammy had a holiday with those newlyweds.

In the first place, Joan Crawford was pretty nervous. It was her first appearance not only as a radio player but also as Mrs. Tone, so she even flubbed her lines once or twice in rehearsal. In the second place, she and Franchot were, of necessity, separated during the greater part of the week and there were arrangements to be made.

So both Doris and Sam worked.

IT STARTED on the first day Joan appeared. Sammy went to call for her at the Waldorf. In some way, information that she would leave for the Columbia studios had leaked out and the hotel exits were jammed.

Sammy's a pretty smart lad. While Joan's car was driven ostentatiously to the front of the hotel and while a couple of photographers lurked there to add authenticity, Sammy led Joan to the garage and placed her in another car.

That was the day Joan and Franchot had arrived in town, so they weren't yet married. No one was absolutely sure they were going to be, either. Least of all, Doris Sharp. Yet she unknowingly fixed it so they could be, according to schedule.

As Joan went into the studio, she asked Doris to remind her of a very important phone call she must make.

After an hour, Doris saw the gal who was about to become Mrs. Franchot Tone leave the studio to make a call. Doris assumed that was the important one. A half-hour later, she decided to ask. She pushed open the heavy studio door and called to Joan:

"Was that the important call?"

"Gosh, no," Joan Crawford cried. She went immediately to the phone and stayed there for 15 minutes. And that, people, is how your Miss Crawford decided upon her wedding ring.

BUT NEVER did they have to see that one of the movie stars got a spanking. That is, except Freddie Bartholomew. It happened this way:

When Freddie began rehearsing for his appearance on the air as Peter Pan—and a swell appearance it was, too—he gathered the rest of the children in the cast around him.

"Let's do this like real executives," he suggested.

"Sure," chorused the rest of the kids.

"Right-o," said Freddie. "We'll draw a contract in which we will all agree to be on time, to obey the director and to perfect our lines quickly. The first who breaks the contract pays a forfeit."

"What is the forfeit?" asked Janet Lee Hutchinson who came from Hollywood to play Wendy.

Freddie looked at the six children around him. "The kid who breaks the contract," he said ominously, "is put through the Old Mill by the others."

Well, the contract was drawn up with the help of the director, signatures were affixed and the contract was broken—by Master Bartholomew.

Doris had to officiate during the paying of the forfeit. She reports that each of the six children got in at least two good swats as Freddie scrambled between their legs. Even Janet Lee.

Joe Penner makes his studio promise not to give him star billing. It's tough enough to be funny, without being the star, too, Joe insists.

Joan Bennett insists on the studio's furnishing her with hose, while sister Constance has it all arranged so that she can drive her car into the studio grounds, forbidden to the automobiles of most of the employees.

By Franc Dillon

"SORRY, old man. I'd love to do it for you, but I can't. My contract, you know—"

It might be any actor or actress in Hollywood speaking, in reply to a request to make a radio appearance; buy an airplane; play polo or endorse a certain brand of cigaret. Almost anything can be found in a motion picture contract today. There are dozens of things the stars can't do, according to their contracts, and just as many little things they won't do. And those things are in the contracts, too!

It was because Marlene Dietrich had it put in her contract that Ernst Lubitsch was to supervise all of her pictures that she was able to walk out in the middle of "Hotel Imperial," leaving Paramount embarrassed to the tune of a few hundred thousand dollars. You see, Mr. Lubitsch was no longer with the company.

Joe Penner (Wanna buy a duck?) is a film star who thinks there are other things more important than top billing. In fact he not only refuses to be billed as the star of a picture but he insists on having it written in his contract that he is not to be the star. Inasmuch as Joe was one of the most popular stars ever on the radio, and he has a tremendous following in pictures, this is quite surprising, but he explains it this way:

"I insisted on having my contract read that I shall not be required to appear in an important way in more than two scenes in a picture and that I am not to be the star of any picture because no one can be funny for more than seven minutes. I'm supposed to be funny. People expect to laugh at me. But if they see too much of me they are going to get tired of laughing. I'm only protecting myself by having that clause in my contract."

AT THE Paramount Studio the importance of a star is not indicated by the importance of his roles, by top billing or the size of his salary but is practically determined by whether or not he is allowed to drive his car inside the studio, a privilege granted to not more than a dozen players.

One young actor, about to sign a contract with this company, asked for the privilege and when told it was granted to a very few stars, offered to accept a much smaller salary if he could drive his car to his dressing room door.

Constance Bennett attempted to drive into the Paramount Studio one night and was stopped at the stage. She explained that she was to work on a special set there, although it was for another company. She explained that she was Miss Bennett, but the gateman was still unimpressed, so she drove home and there she stayed until permission was obtained for her to drive her car inside.

Joan Bennett is a good bargainer, too. Although the studio furnishes all clothes for the stars, Joan did a little quick thinking and asked to have stockings included in her studio wardrobe, thus saving her pocketbook a few hundred dollars a year.

Actors often hold out for gags, as Wallace Beery did when he refused to sign his last contract until a paragraph was inserted giving him the kyak, a small canoe covered with skin, which was used in the picture "Eskimo."

When Marlene Dietrich first came to Hollywood, her contract provided that she was to be directed by no one but Joseph von Sternberg. William Powell, on the other hand, is said to have refused to sign a contract with Paramount one time until it included a clause to the effect that he would never have to be directed by Von Sternberg.

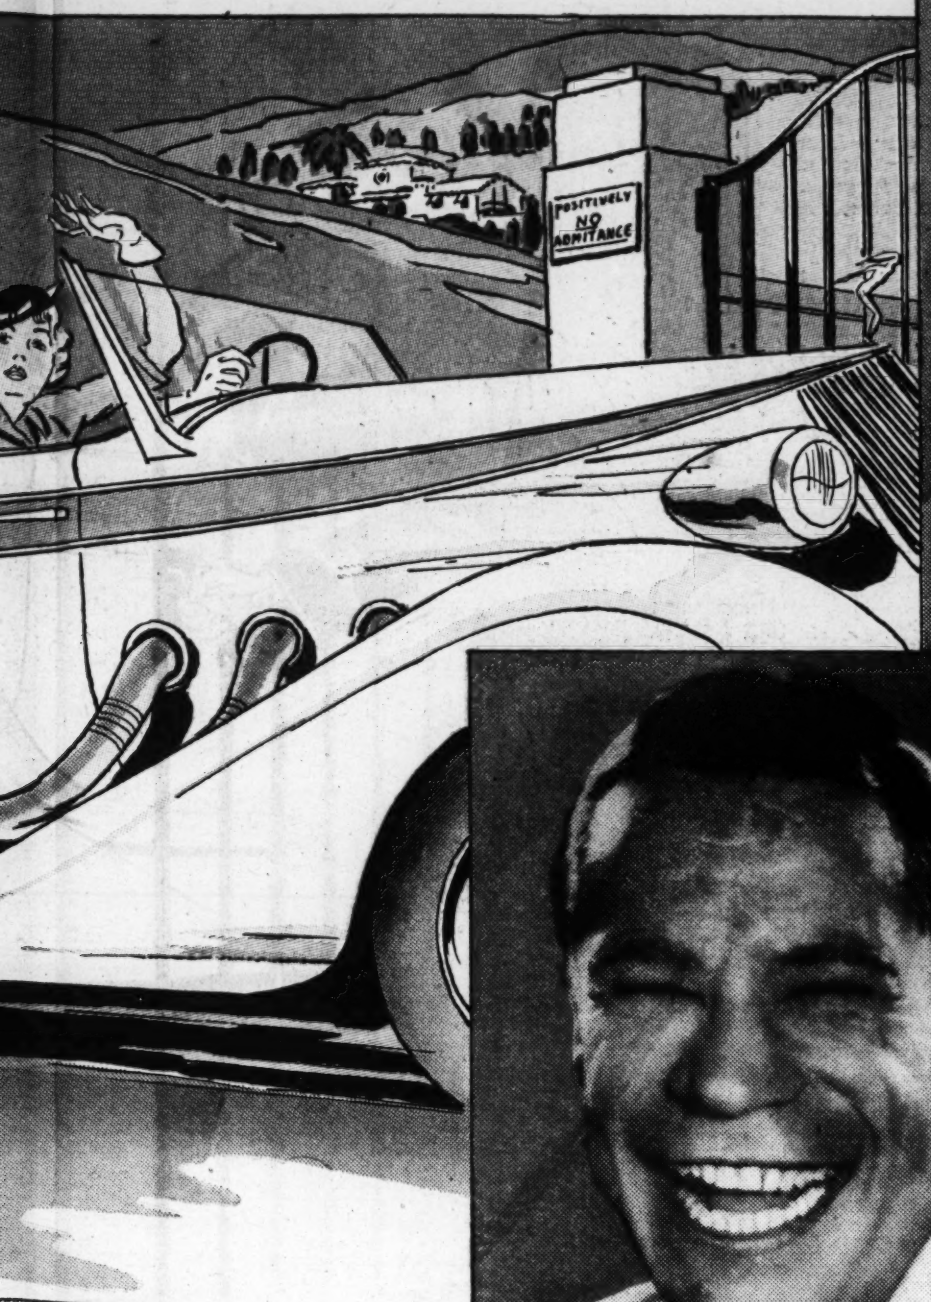

Bette Davis likes to have a cup of hot tea or a bowl of soup when she is resting in her dressing room. To make sure this would be possible, she asked to have it in her contract that her dressing room be equipped with a cook stove.

Shirley Temple has her lunch in her bungalow, too, but for a different reason. It is in her contract that she may not eat in the studio dining room because she attracts so much attention it was feared it would impair her digestion.

MOST contracts are 40-week agreements, leaving twelve weeks when the star may be laid off without salary. It is customary for these layoffs to come at a time convenient to the studio. If there is no story for the star, he or she can be laid off until there is one. Joan Crawford is taking no chances on snatched vacations a few weeks at a time. She demanded a three-month vacation, all at one time, which will allow her a real rest and time for a long trip. Miriam Hopkins is allowed eight weeks between pictures, which enables her to spend a few weeks frequently in her charming house in New

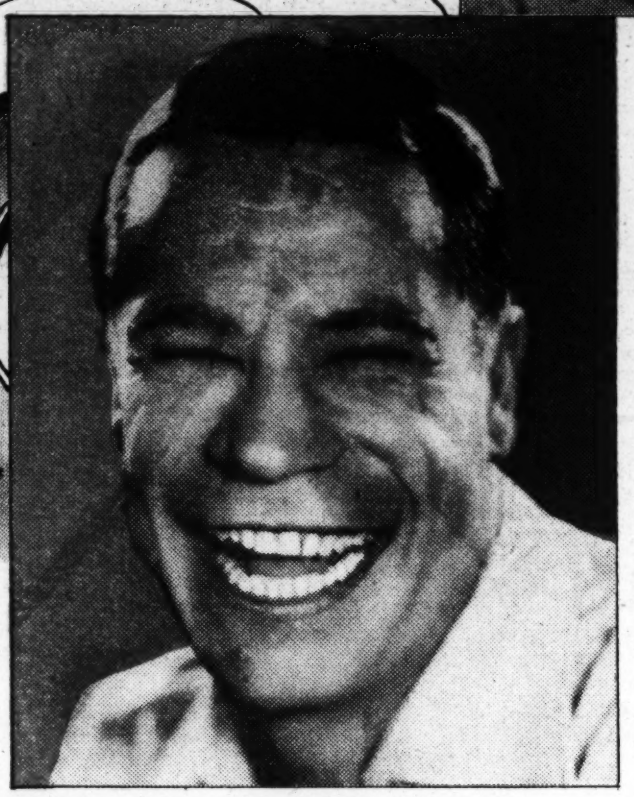

On the Dotted Line

e Odd Clauses in Their Contracts

Marlene Dietrich was able to walk out of "Hotel Imperial" because her contract states that Ernst Lubitsch is to produce her films. Joe E. Brown insists that his baseball team be given work by the film-makers when the team is idle.

ements is that of Irene Dunne, who is Universal, Columbia, RKO-Radio and talk it over when there is a conflict r the singing star.

York. And George O'Brien, for years, has never made a contract that didn't give him three months between pictures, which accounts for the fact that he has found time to visit almost every country in the world.

Joel McCrea insisted, and it is in his contract, that he shall not be asked to play opposite his wife, Frances Dee. Not that he doesn't adore Frances and think that she is one of the finest actresses, but he thinks they have a better chance for personal happiness if they work separately.

Regardless of anything, Janet Gaynor is permitted to quit work at five o'clock every afternoon. The late Will Rogers enjoyed the same privilege. They had never met before they went to work together in "State Fair." The first day when five o'clock came Janet looked at Mr. Rogers. Mr. Rogers looked at Janet. Each considered the other the "big" star and neither wanted to be the one to say, "Let's go home." So they kept right on working and Director Henry King, quick to take advantage of the situation, kept right on until he finished the sequence at six-thirty. Then he called it a day. It wasn't until later that Janet and Mr. Rogers compared notes and learned they both had the same privilege.

No one would expect anything unusual in Stuart Erwin's contract because he seems like the last person in the world to either want or require extra clauses for his own or his employer's protection. But it seems that while Stu was at Paramount, he was continually complaining because his roles always called for a wardrobe of old clothes. And Stu quite fancies himself as a fashion plate.

Word of this got to the ears of M-G-M executives, so when they offered him a contract to sign it contained a paragraph which said he must wear whatever clothes were offered him without complaint. He signed and everything was fine until he was assigned the role of a female impersonator in "Broadway Melody of 1936" and handed feminine apparel to wear. He had to do it because it was in his contract, but he presented such a woebegone appearance and pleaded so hard to be let off just once, that the role was given to another actor

THE first contract Joe E. Brown ever signed was when he was nine years old and joined the circus. The contract didn't have much of importance in it, merely providing that his salary of $1.50 a week should be sent home to his parents, but it was read with much interest and signed by every member of his family! Today his contracts have everything he can think of in them. His latest contract with Warner Brothers permits his manager, Mike Levee, to visit Joe at the studio at any time. As everyone knows, Mike and the Warners aren't on speaking terms, so the reason for that clause is obvious.

It also provides that all the members of Joe's baseball team must have employment of some sort of work at the studio if they are not working elsewhere.

Irene Dunne is under contract simultaneously to four companies—Universal, Columbia, RKO and Paramount. If they all needed her at the same time it might bring on a real war, but to meet this emergency there is a clause in each contract requiring that, in case of conflict, representatives from the four companies shall meet and arrange matters amicably. It's all a matter of barter and trade, however. If Paramount and Universal want Irene at the same time, Universal will probably say to Paramount: "We'll let you have Irene if you'll loan us Claudette," and so the stars are bargained for just like any other commodity, for that is exactly what they do.

HARPO MARX tired of his silent roles and asked to talk in "A Night at the Opera." He even went to Irving Thalberg about it. Mr. Thalberg listened sympathetically and promised him he could talk "a little" in the picture.

When time came for Harpo to sign his contract, there it was in black and white—the privilege of speaking—one word! His dignity was so upset he retaliated by refusing to open his mouth!

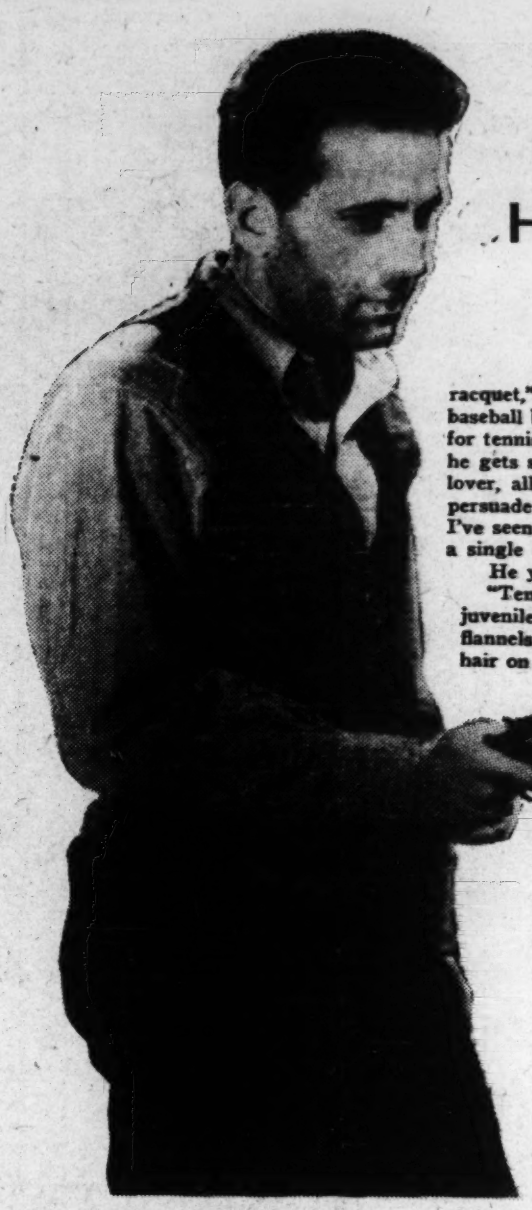

Fred Astaire, famous for his dancing, wants to be known as an actor and intends, under the terms of his new contract, to make a picture with no dancing in it. It's also in his contract that he can have a different leading woman every third picture, but the fans demand the team of Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire.

The stars demand dressing room bungalows, vacations at certain times of year and work for their poor relatives. Robert Montgomery refuses to work on Sundays. The studios hate these extra clauses and deny they exist. But they are there, just the same, and sometimes they work. Sometimes they don't, as in the case of Phil Regan, who was dissatisfied with his contract and wished to have it torn up. He was told if he didn't behave he would be put into small parts and Western pictures.

"All right," Phil said, "you can make me work, but you can't make me smile! THAT isn't in my contract!"

Fugitive from a Racquet

Humphrey Bogart Escapes from Tennis-Playing Juvenile Roles

By Carlisle Jones

HUMPHREY BOGART, the menacing gangster chief of "The Petrified Forest," gets red behind the ears when a director suggests that he carry a tennis racquet onto the stage or into the scene in a motion picture.

Bogart went "tough" primarily to get away from tennis racquets. He used to be pegged by New York producers as a romantic juvenile, which Bogart believes is an actor's lowest estate. To him a racquet, perennial prop for leading juveniles, is a symbol of those unhappy days.

He is willing enough to talk about it, now that he has successfully changed his type. Reassured by the announced intention of Warner Bros. studios to feature him in roles similar to those which led Edward G. Robinson and James Cagney to fame, Bogart recently took time out between scenes of his new picture, "Two Against the World," to talk about what he calls the "tennis racquet racket" of stage and screen.

"It's like this," said Bogart, leaning far back in his chair and pulling his hat down low over his eyes. "The playwright gets five or six characters into a scene and then can't figure out a way to get rid of all but two of them. What does he do? He drags in the handsome young juvenile, tennis racquet in hand, who says:

"How about a game of tennis?"

"That makes it easy for everyone. The players accept the suggestion. The leading lady, who has a love scene coming up with the leading man on the next page, says she is tired. The others go off and the stage is all set for the big clinch.

"It represents no great opportunity for the juvenile but it makes it handy for the author."

BOGART stretched himself still further out of his chair.

"Of course, it isn't always a tennis racquet," he went on. "It can be done with golf clubs or a baseball bat or a pair of dice. But playwrights have a weakness for tennis. It can be played, presumably, just off stage, so when he gets stuck with the dialog between the leading lady and her lover, all he has to do is have the juvenile come back in and persuade one or both of these to 'come out and point the game.' I've seen juveniles get rid of eight or 10 characters that way in a single evening."

He yawned prodigiously.

"Tennis is a playwright's idea of the proper game for the juvenile to play," he added. "He wears clean white flannels, sneakers and has a chance to show the hair on his chest. It's supposed to be good theater.

"Lately they've been getting into the habit of ending the scene whenever the author is stuck with too many characters on the stage. Now we have plays with 17, 18 or 47 acts, revolving stages and sets that move up or down or around. The tennis gag is much simpler. I must have saved producers millions of dollars by dragging off the surplus actors with that magnificent line: 'How about a game of tennis?'"

Bogart pushed his hat back and struck a match for his cigaret. "I used it when I played with Mary Boland in 'Meet the Wife'," he recalled. "You've no idea what a relief it was to play the role of Duke Mantee in 'The Petrified Forest' and never hear tennis mentioned.

"I play a rotten game, anyway," he added. "That's one of the difficult things in pictures. When you talk about playing tennis in a drawing room on the screen it's a cinch that the director will want to show you really playing the game in a later sequence. Even white flannels and hair on your chest won't save you then."

HE GOT up slowly and walked over to the water cooler on the set where he dug around in the ice container until he produced two bottles of pop. He decapped them skillfully and brought them back to our corner.

William McGann, the long-suffering director, started toward us but changed his mind and busied himself looking through the camera toward the set where Bogart and Claire Dodd were soon to play a scene.

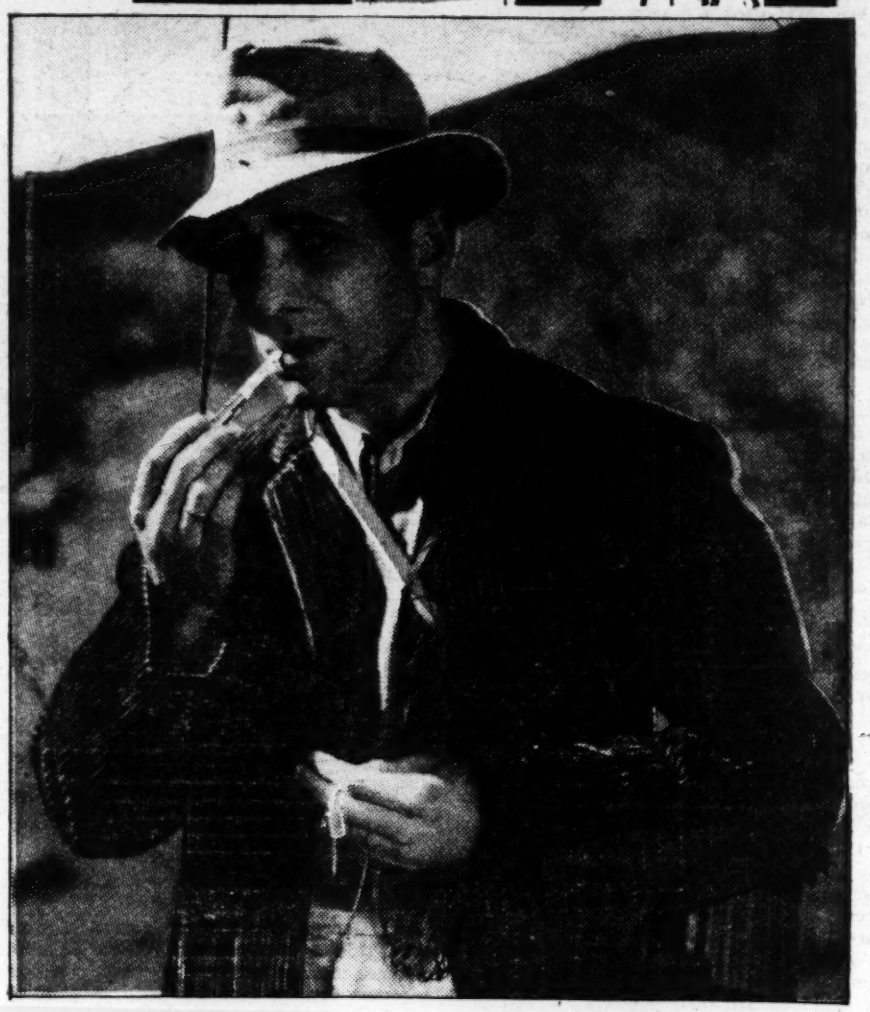

"You know," said Bogart thoughtfully, "these tough roles are fun—and they are easy, compared to most others. There is nothing more deadly than the job of playing a juvenile tennis player—except the job of playing a straight lead, opposite a great feminine star.

"That's terrible!"

The drinks were gone and Bogart was again far down in his seat.

"When a great leading man gets a part opposite a fine actress, he's licked and he generally knows it. He just can't compete. The lady turns on the charm, the beauty, the flutter or whatever it is she has that has made her great, and the leading man is left with nothing but his lines to say. I doubt if any leading man ever became a star through his straight performances opposite a fine actress. Give him a bit of a character twist and it's a different story.

"A glamorous female is the most deadly competition a man can have in a race for acting honors. What chance would I or any other graduated juvenile have against a Kay Francis, a Marlene Dietrich, a Bette Davis or a Helen Hayes, when playing a straight lead opposite any one of them?

Humphrey Bogart (above left) as the gangster in "The Petrified Forest." Off the set he indulges in a little fishing.

"THIS is why the majority of the screen's male stars have come up from the ranks of the heavies and the character actors. Look at them. There are Bill Powell, Paul Muni, Clark Gable, Jimmy Cagney, Edward G. Robinson, Charles Laughton, Wallace Beery, Spencer Tracy. With straight leads they wouldn't have been stars and everybody knows it.

"The character man has the best of it. The tough guy never carries a tennis racquet onto the set. He lugs no props for the plot to lean on. He may not say much, but what he says matters. That was what made Duke Mantee an interesting fellow. This Sherry Scott role I'm doing now is less villainous, but he doesn't spout smart small talk while the lovely feminine lead runs away with the audience. He has things, real things, to say."

He sat upright suddenly, with one movement.

"Perhaps you think I'm unnecessarily bitter about this," he challenged. "Well, I am. But this is fun. 'The Petrified Forest' was fun.

"I hope to heaven I've outlived my usefulness as a juvenile and that I continue as a 'heavy' as long as I have to work for a living."

He swallowed nervously and then grinned.

"Let's finish this tomorrow," he suggested. "How about a game of tennis?"

I walked with him to the stage door.

"That damned line still haunts me," he said. "Hope you don't mind."

Fresh From the Tub

By Sara Day

TUB FROCKS are the order of the day in Hollywood. You may take a tip from the stars and dress in wash frocks this summer. What used to be termed a house dress has developed from practicability into chic. Whether it is for play, for shopping or dancing, you'll find wash frocks most attractive.

There are a number of cottons and linens in bright patterns as well as some new wash fabrics which include chintzes (yes, the same kind you had your new bedroom chair upholstered in), cotton and linen tweeds, cotton corduroys and an amazing variety of synthetic material.

It wouldn't do to mention the popular materials for summer wear without speaking of sharkskin. This Celanese fabric, first used a season or so ago for men's suits, has taken the country by storm. It is being made up in suits, dresses, slacks and shorts. Beside being cooler than silks, these washable materials are very reasonable, whether you buy them by the yard or in ready-made clothes.

The other day I stopped to look in the windows of a cotton shop which specializes in play suits and wash dresses that run from $1.95 to $3.95. I was a little surprised to see Pat Ellis and Paula Stone inside, for somehow you think of picture girls as shopping in the most exclusive shops. But I've found that they, too, like to economize—at least occasionally.

I went in and Paula had to show me her new buy. It was a $1.95 natural colored linen crash shirtmaker dress which had, as its only trimming, big wooden buttons tied on with bias pieces of the material. Pat was pleased, too, over her new bargain, which was a farmeret outfit of blue cotton overalls, a red and white plaid shirt and a red bandana kerchief.

I FOUND out afterward that they rushed home to spread the glad news with the result that the cotton shop gained Anne Shirley, Dorothy Stone, Alma Lloyd and Mitzi Green as customers. Anita Louise shopped there and her find was a yellow cotton sunbonnet which she is planning to wear on the beach.

Pique, the good old standby of the cotton field, is very popular in Hollywood. Betty Furness has a new white pique dress striped in red and blue which features a front zipper closing. Maureen O'Sullivan tells me that she wears white almost exclusively in the summer and her dresses are made up in shirtmaker style in pique, linen or ratine. With these she wears white angora cardigans. Comfort is Maureen's slogan for summertime, so she adds socks and white sport shoes to complete the costume.

AT Palm Springs recently I saw several of our younger screen stars basking in the desert sun in the cool comfort of cottons. Fay Wray was wearing blue and white pin-striped culottes which were amusing because she wore cotton suspenders and a white cotton shirt which tucked into the culottes. Olivia de Haviland was playing ping-pong in a white ratine sports dress which had a jobot edged in a brilliant shade of tomato. Her cotton jacket of this same shade was quilted.

Priscilla Lawson was there, too, wearing a dress made of a new Celanese fabric called Celange. The dress was white with a red scarf and cummerbund. Her bolero jacket was checked in red, black and white and edged in red rick-rack braid which also trimmed the collar, cuffs and pocket. With this she wore a wide-brimmed white straw sailor.

Marla Shelton, one of the newcomers to pictures and who is now appearing as Buck Jones' leading lady in a Universal feature, "The Phantom Rider," tells me that her whole summer wardrobe is made up of tub frocks. The day I saw her at the studio she was wearing a new double-breasted short-sleeved suit of yellow sharkskin. It had a cunning tucked net blouse of dark blue and with it she wore dark blue accessories. For sports wear she bought a white linen frock on which were embroidered navy blue stars. The nautical collar is edged in navy blue linen and there is a tie of navy blue linen.

For dancing on summer evenings she purchased two cotton frocks. One was a fine white pique on which were scattered red poppies. It has a square cut decolletage decorated by a bunch of scarlet poppies and she wears another bunch of them in her hair. The other dress is a flowered cotton sheer in shades of blue and yellow and there is a little cornflower blue linen jacket to go with it.

LINEN is very popular now that that old cry about linens wrinkling is a thing of the past. Manufacturers have developed a new non-crushable linen. Wendy Barrie has just acquired a linen dress sent to her from New York. It is one of the new jumper dresses made of dark green linen with a red and white dotted swiss guimpe. With it—and this sounds pretty gay to me—she wears a big yellow straw hat with green ribbon streamers which match the green of her frock.

Jeanette MacDonald says she always has at least one linen dress in her summer wardrobe, and this year it is a dinner dress of chartreuse handkerchief linen which has an accompanying jacket of yellow linen which knots in front. Norma Shearer was one of the first to wear one of the new linen tweed suits. Hers is the natural linen color. She brightens it with a burnt orange handkerchief linen blouse and wears brown accessories.

When Alice Faye recently went vacationing on the desert after completing her part in the Shirley Temple picture, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," she included in her wardrobe a sports dress of black linen. Alice is a stickler for black, winter or summer. This is a jumper style frock with a white pique blouse, belt and hat. The jumper, just to be different, has two zipper pockets outlined in red.

Lunching at the Brown Derby the other day, I saw Jane Wyatt, a New York stage star who has just been borrowed from Universal by Columbia studios to play in "The Lost Horizon."

She was wearing a shirtmaker type sports dress of white sharkskin with winged sleeves and trimmed with amusing buttons made of red, white and blue cellophane. With it she wore a straw colored breton sailor banded in navy blue, and navy and white spectator sport pumps.

Gail Patrick of the Paramount lot was also there with her current beau, Bob Cobb. She was looking very summery in a red-dotted organdy made with a very full skirt. The cute trick about this dress is the detachable train. Presto chango, says Gail, and she hooks it onto a black taffeta dress and adds the red taffeta jacket which she also wears with her organdy frock.

Tub frocks are the order of the day in Hollywood. Gail Patrick, above, shows you her new organdy with a detachable train. Jane Wyatt, below, wears a smart white sharkskin sports frock with winged sleeves.

Beauty and the Mike

By Ruth Arell

RAY LEE JACKSON is one of the most exclusive photographers in the world. Before the magic eye of his camera have paraded the most beautiful women in the land of watts and kilocycles. In his studio, the darlings of radio take orders from him. He is head boss and they never pull a tantrum more than once. What's more, he makes the appointments and, if they are late, they lose the sitting.

Ray Lee Jackson, you see, is head photographer of the National Broadcasting Co. In this capacity, he takes about 1,500 pictures a week. Although his office is in New York and he does most of his work there, if necessary he will travel to the tip of the most far-flung tentacle of the red and blue networks should any of his assistants in a local NBC office have trouble in getting a good shot.

He also has photographed all the important men who have ever appeared in front of an NBC microphone. He thinks the faces of Rubinoff, Jack Benny and Fred Allen are especially interesting and reveal character lines.

H. L. Mencken paid him this rare compliment: "Ray Lee Jackson did the best mug ever made of me. Jackson's art made a whole series of radio crooners, most of whom look like Middle-West Congressmen in real life, as indeed I do myself."

This benevolent czar of the camera was born in Columbus, O. Even at an early age he was interested in photography and his first commercial job was at the age of 10 when a neighbor's hired girl paid him a quarter to take her picture on his brand-new camera.

After graduation from Ohio State University, he opened a photography studio in his home city. His work began to attract attention.

ABOUT this time, radio was beginning to lose its blinders. While its appeal was still principally to the ear, people were beginning to wonder what the favorites whom they heard regularly looked like. The best way of showing them was by photographs. NBC officials, after a lengthy look-around, invited Ray Lee Jackson to take over the job. Thus he became the pioneer network photographer.

Jackson is in a unique position. In the first place, he does no private work. All his pictures are for the National Broadcasting Co., which places them in newspapers and magazines. In the second place, no artist can go up to him and say, "Please, won't you take my picture?" This taking of pictures is strictly an invitational affair. The artist does not pay for the pictures and the invitation to come in for a sitting is issued only when word is received from the publicity department that a certain person is news or seems to be having an especial run of popularity.

In other words, the number of times a singer or dramatic actress is asked to come down for new pictures really indicates how much the listeners-in like her.

Thus, when you see many photographs of your favorites, and in a great many different poses, you know that she is at present enjoying widespread public approval. When I asked Jackson to tell me whom he had been photographing a lot recently, hoping to find out who is the popular gal of the moment, he merely grinned and remained silent in a dozen languages. Evidently tact is one of the requirements of a good lens-man.

Too busy photographing radio stars to take his own picture, Ray Lee Jackson relied upon Xavier Cugat, orchestra leader, to supply this likeness of the camera-wielder.

"I'm proud to have been the pioneer in photographing radio stars. I can remember when they used to come up to the microphone not caring particularly how they looked. After all, it was voice—not appearance—that counted. That was the universal idea. But when fan magazines began to use pictures of these 'voices,' the women behind them began to pay attention to their appearance.

"Then the huge studio audiences at each broadcast and the personal appearance tours in vaudeville all tended to make them conscious of what they looked like to the public. Once I took some pictures of a young singer who had a most charming smile. But the proof showed what we had overlooked. She was minus a front tooth. Before we would release her pictures we asked her to have a false tooth made, which she did.

"To me, one of the most interesting phases of this work is to see the changes that the years bring. It all shows in the photographs. When they first come on the network, especially if they start on sustaining programs, they are generally timid, shy and subdued. Some are almost drab. But once they get an important commercial, almost overnight they blossom out.

"They acquire poise and confidence, they learn how to wear clothes effectively, how to stand — in short, from merely being pretty, they emerge as beauties. The fact that people clamor for tickets of admission to the studio to watch them broadcast, the thought that movie and even opera fame may be around the corner, all act as stimulants to bring out the best in them.

PROBABLY the best illustration of this is the case of Helen Jepson. When she first started, she hadn't learned how to make the most of her hair. She wore the same dress all the time. Broadcast after broadcast she appeared in this same dress with the beaded sleeves and the boa around the neck. Now mind you, her voice in those days was just as glorious as it is today.

"Then came recognition. You see her now as one of the most glamorous women on the air. Her beauty is emphasized and shown off by a large variety of costumes. She probably doesn't wear the same one twice. What is more, she even changes her style of hairdress to suit the mood of the gown she is wearing.

"You would hardly recognize the simple little maids in white lace as the dramatic persons that the Pickens Sisters have become. When the first picture was taken—notice the old style microphone—they looked like little girls just up from prep school from their native 'Jaw-ja.'

"But they couldn't continue to look so naive and yet sing the smart songs they now have in their repertoire. They learned how to carry themselves, to dress smartly, and they have become a trio of sophisticated Georgia peaches, very much in demand by radio sponsors and by night clubs.

"Some 10 to 15 years ago, Irene Rich was a leading lady in the movies in the old silent days. Certainly in her early pictures, of what the well dressed woman wore then, the movies entirely overlooked and failed to bring out the glamour of her maturity.

IN HER latest picture you will see that there is an aliveness about her face and a brightness in her eyes that brands her as ageless and belies the fact that she is the mother of two grown girls. She has an exquisitely youthful figure and is much sought after to model clothes.

"I think I have taken hundreds of pictures of Jessica Dragonette—she is probably my most photographed star—and yet in each pose she presents a different facet of her personality. She grows more beautiful in each photograph. There is no monotony about her. Even when she appears most sophisticated, she manages to convey some of her charm in each shot. And just when I thought I had photographed her from every possible angle, she cut her luxurious long golden hair and there was a new and more alluring Jessica to photograph.

"Margaret Speaks is certainly one girl whom radio forced to sit up and take stock of herself. For years she had been wearing her hair in a simple swirl across the top of her head and caught in a knot at the back, with bangs on one side. There was great simplicity in this style, but it also made her look like a very severe person, which she is not.

"Studio audiences could not reconcile the severity of her appearance with the sweetness of her voice. Finally a new coiffure was designed for her. This new hairdress retains the essential simplicity which is so much a part of her character, but at the same time it softens her appearance. Now she has simplicity with charm, but minus severity.

WOMEN in radio are giving screen and stage stars plenty of stiff competition for honors in beauty and grooming. To bring out the last ounce of allure and to get the best photographic effects, we have introduced the same sort of makeup used in the movie studios. The result is that now you see the mike girls modeling the latest fashions and their photos used in endorsements of various products where once this was reserved only for movie and footlight topnotchers.

"It would be no exaggeration to say that some of the ether stars have a larger following than the big names of the screen. You see them looking at you from magazine covers and billboards.

"In my camera's record of the advancement and popularity of radio entertainers, you really have a story of the progress and public acceptance of radio itself. Before I sign off, I want to pay my respects to the clock-like regime necessary in broadcasting. It's done a lot to abolish temperament. Temperament is positively taboo around me. Not that much of it is ever displayed. Radio folks are too well-trained in the value of a split second to waste much time. They come in and get right down to business."

Reviews of New Films

Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard, co-starred in the gay, romantic comedy, "The Princess Comes Across."

"The Princess Comes Across."

A romantic comedy starring Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray. Paramount.

Two murders in mid-Atlantic and the high-powered sleuthing of five international detectives are merely minor incidents in the plot of this picture, which is essentially a romantic comedy, bringing together Fred MacMurray and Carole Lombard for the first time since their smashing success in "Hands Across the Table."

All action of the story takes place on a trans-Atlantic super-liner, en route from Havre to New York.

Miss Lombard adopts a Swedish accent for her role. She is cast as a Brooklyn girl posing as Princess Olga of Sweden, for the purpose of gaining a film contract. Aboard the luxury liner "Mammoth," she meets and falls in love with MacMurray, leader of a swing band.

The ship and the romance hardly get under way before the first of a pair of murders start a chain of suspense and thrills maintained throughout. Music provided both by the ship's band and by concertina playing MacMurray (who sings his first song in films in this picture) aids the comedy and romantic scenes in maintaining the film's light touch.

An unusually fine supporting cast, led by Alison Skipworth as a wise-cracking former trouper, "lady-in-waiting" for Princess Olga, and William Frawley, manager for MacMurray's band, backs up the stars. Included are Douglass Dumbrille, Porter Hall, George Barbier and a score of others.

Recent pictures which have been reviewed and recommended in Screen & Radio Weekly are as follows: "Rose Marie" (M-G-M); "Little Lord Fauntleroy" (M-G-M); "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" (Paramount); "These Three" (United Artists); "Robin Hood of El Dorado" (M-G-M); "Captain January" (Twentieth Century-Fox); "The Singing Kid" (Warner Bros.); "13 Hours by Air" (Paramount); "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" (Columbia); "Small Town Girl" (M-G-M); "The Unguarded Hour" (M-G-M); "The Moon's Our Home" (Paramount); "Big Brown Eyes" (Paramount); "One Rainy Afternoon" (United Artists); "Under Two Flags" (Twentieth Century-Fox); "Show Boat" (Universal).

"Florida Special."

Jack Oakie leads the cast in an amusing film about crooks and the richest man in the world. Sally Eilers is the girl. Acceptable. Paramount.

'Tis a wild ride, my hearties, on the "Florida Special," which leaves New York with the richest man in the world and a million dollars worth of jewels and loses both by the time it reaches Philadelphia. The latest Paramount film to have Jack Oakie as its comic hero is a hodgepodge of unbelievable stuff circling around a nucleus of lightsome robberies and slayings but, while not an extraordinary picture, it does hold the interest throughout and is consistently entertaining.

When Bangs Carter, the newspaperman, played by Oakie, clambers on the de luxe train with his tipsy friend, Wally Tucker (Kent Taylor), the thing to do is check your logic in the lobby. Of course, the richest man in the world could hire an armored car to take himself and his gems to Florida instead of trusting to a train.

Of course, in any case, he could hire a vault in New York and leave the gems inside it. But Simeon Stafford, a role ably interpreted by Claude Gillingwater, does get aboard the train and does carry the gems along and thereby causes no end of exciting complications.

Involved in the complications are Sally Eilers as Jerry, the train hostess; Frances Drake, as the niece of crabbed Stafford, and J. MacDonald as Harrigan, who is both police officer and bodyguard. Involved, too, is a fine assortment of crooks on the rich man's trail.

If the plot had been just a trifle more clever, the film would be a smooth satire on murder mysteries. As it is, the good dialog, the swift action and the flair for humor which never fails Oakie make the picture enjoyable.

Except for a pale romance between hostess Jerry and Wally, the farce melodrama leaves love fairly well alone. So much goes on, however, with people running from one compartment to another and in and out of the recreation car that the lack of fervid scenes isn't noticeable. Among the best of the lesser moments is a fine takeoff of a newsreel spieler on the movie screen in the recreation car.

For people in an uncritical mood, "Florida Special" may be recommended as take-it-or-leave-it diversion. People in a captious frame of mind had better stay home and read a book.

"Human Cargo."

Unbelievable newspaper story, with Brian Donlevy and Claire Trevor, has some exciting moments. Twentieth Century-Fox. Acceptable.

Perhaps some day a producer will walk through a newspaper office, or at least hire as technical advisor somebody who has been nearer a newspaper office than the scenario department. But until this happens the screen will again and again be pockmarked with newspaper pictures like "Human Cargo."

Of course, if reporters like Packy Campbell (Brian Donlevy) or Bonnie Brewster (Claire Trevor) ever did crash a news room, the city editor would hurry them right out to the nearest psychopathic ward. Unless he happened to be a city editor like Lionel Crocker (Alan Dinehart).

Needless to say, Packy is the kind of reporter who saunters 'round town picking up what the screen calls "scoops" from under the singularly dull noses of rival newspapermen. And, of course, Bonnie, in one bound and with no training, progresses from the status of wealthy debutante to that of cleverest woman reporter in town.

The "Human Cargo" refers to the wholesale smuggling of aliens into this country from somewhere south of the Mexican line—a very "hot story" which Packy promises himself to break wide.

What scamps these news-gatherers are, to be sure. During her first 24 hours on the paper, Bonnie accompanies Packy to a night club where he sends her into the dressing room of a girl dancer to find out whether a certain deadly gangster is hidden therein. Exactly the assignment for a cub reporter! And who more surprised than Packy and Bonnie when the gangster tries to strangle the lady reporter.

After Bonnie has been rescued she goes to work for the opposition paper as the result of a fight with the city editor and Packy. And what does she do but travel south of the Mexican border, disguising herself as a French alien, and snoop around till she's found out all about the smuggling racket. And whom does she meet, also disguised as an alien, but (and does it surprise you?) Packy himself. Their meeting forms a clever and very humorous sequence.

Packy and Bonnie escape from the gangsters, who try to kidnap them, and rush to telephone to instruct their city editors to stop the presses.

Donlevy and Miss Trevor are sufficiently attractive and Rita Cansino does a vivid piece of acting as Carmen, a terrified pawn of the crooks.

While it contains nothing new, the picture rouses and holds the interest fairly well.

"The Big Noise."

Guy Kibbee shows what happens when a retired businessman jumps back into the harness. Traditional. Warner Bros.

Once more the retired businessman leaps forth from his retirement to organize a new business and at the same time defeat the younger element which had forced his retirement in the first place. Currently it is Guy Kibbee as Julius Trent in "The Big Noise." This Warner Brothers picture shows Julius surrounded by apprehension and doctor's orders in the Pasadena patio whither he has betaken himself after his board of directors ousted him from the presidency of his farflung mills. The gardener, Douglas, played by Edward McWade, tells Julius that he, too, was on the brink of the grave after giving up business until in boredom and despair he got himself a job and now will probably live to be 100 years old.

He shows Julius the "business opportunities" column in the newspaper and Julius decides to buy a partnership in a dry cleaning shop. His partner is a young man named Ken Mitchell, played by Warren Hull. The attempts of Julius to keep the new business enterprise a secret from his family are complicated by the fact that his daughter, Betty, played by Alma Lloyd, brings her dresses to the shop.

She has met and liked the young partner. Other comedy angles are a parrot with a sense of humor and also the wide-eyed clerk played by Marie Wilson. But the chief complication and comedy come from the racketeers.

When one gang tries to collect tribute from his shop, Julius eggs them on to throwing acid upon the clothes left for cleaning by the rival gang of racketeers. In the resultant battle all racketeers on both sides are wiped out. Before the smoke has cleared away, Betty Trent becomes engaged to Ken instead of to the son of the man who ousted her dad from the mills.

Then the mills request Julius to return and everything ends with the usual joy. Nevertheless, in spite of some amusing moments, the picture lacks novelty of idea and plot and totals up as so-so.

THE NEW WEST.

Filming "The Texas Ranger" for Paramount on location at the Zuni Reservation in New Mexico, King Vidor will use 250 Indians in colorful native dress. To his surprise, Vidor found most of the costumes would have to be made in Hollywood and then shipped to the reservation. The Indians today, he reports ruefully, wear blue denim.

Vidor also is sending to New Mexico long-horn cattle rounded up after a search in Southern California. Long horns, he says, have virtually disappeared from New Mexican cattle ranges.

DEMAND.

Hollywood casting offices are used to filling strange and difficult orders. One studio casting director wore a slightly puzzled look a few days ago when he got this request from the front office: "Must have by tomorrow one-legged man of French type who can act and play the accordion." Undaunted, the casting office got its man.

Baker and Cantor Plot Big Mix-Up; Clock Is Winner

Phil Baker and Eddie Cantor, whose programs come one after the other on Columbia, cooked up a little stunt not many days ago that might have been very funny—had they been able to do it.

Eddie's program comes first, you know—from 6 o'clock EST to 6:30—and Phil's takes care of the half hour following. They were going to get all mixed up on their time and right in the middle of Eddie's program, Phil was going to come into the studio and start his rib-tickling. Hal Kemp and everyone else would have been in on it and the arguing would have lasted right through Phil's half hour, too.

Eddie finally remembered they couldn't do it because he has a repeat broadcast and Phil Baker doesn't. Therefore, for Eddie's second show, done around midnight especially for the West Coast, he would have had to write another script.

If it weren't for the fact that 8 p. m. in the East is mid-afternoon in the Far West, there wouldn't be such a thing as a repeat broadcast.

Both Jack Benny and Fred Allen have set routines for the three hours that separate their first shows from their second.

Benny goes out to dinner with some of his friends—like Block and Sully—and talks over the show, arranging to leave in ad-libs and mistakes that were funny, putting in Hollywood jokes that would mean nothing to Eastern listeners, and pulling out gags that laid aigs.

Fred Allen, on the other hand, does not leave the studio. His wife, Portland Hoffa, goes down to the drug store and has something to eat with the Mighty Allen Art Players. She orders for Fred and his food is sent up.

Fred takes no jokes out of his script, once they're in, but he does add them. The amateurs on his show sometimes feel pretty cocky by the time the repeat performance rolls around and have even tried to pull jokes on Fred that he had pulled on them earlier in the evening. Fred always puts them promptly back in their places.

Freddie Rich Ready for Arduous Summer

Freddie Rich, who has become chief of the Hit Parade on Saturday nights over CBS, isn't a bit worried about all the hard work that goes into arranging or rearranging 15 songs a week. The tall, heavy-set band leader is used to that sort of thing.

Time was when Freddie, with Howard Barlow, conducted all the music emanating from the Columbia studios proper during the day. Howard took care of the classical stuff; Freddie handled jazz. In those days, the only food Freddie could eat was that sent to the studios for him. He never had the time to go out.

The Hit Parade is going to do about the same thing to him, he's afraid. The 15 best songs are decided upon on Monday, after returns from all the music houses are in. Then Rich goes to work on them.

His six arrangers are locked up tight in their rooms for two full days. It takes them that long to arrange 15 numbers for a 36-piece orchestra.

On Thursday morning, early, the band goes into rehearsal and Freddie starts polishing off the arrangements and settling the order in which the songs will appear. That lasts through until Saturday night, when the show goes on—about 50 hours' work for a one-hour program. But, then, Freddie says it's worth it.

Time Trouble Reunites Wynn and Graham

Beginning a week or so ago, you started hearing Ed Wynn on Tuesday evening over NBC instead of on Thursday evening over CBS. You may have thought Ed's famous superstitions had something to do with the change from network to network. Well, it did a little, but not entirely.

Wynn is a pretty superstitious fellow, all right—his shoes, which he has worn on every performance for the past 20 years; his funny hats, his manias about whistling before breakfast and three on a match prove that.

But Ed was lonely for his Tuesday night spot and his Tuesday night audience, and because Fred Waring and Walter O'Keefe and Ken Murray use all the good Tuesday time on Columbia, Ed had to return to NBC to get it. He missed Graham McNamee, too. He likes the way Graham laughs.

As a matter of fact, most program shifts from NBC to CBS and back are made because better time, and therefore better audiences, are suddenly available. CBS got a lot of NBC's shows just a couple of months ago for just that reason, and now that NBC has cleared some valuable time, CBS is losing a few. Singin' Sam, the Voice of Experience, and Richard Himber's Champions, for instance.

Old Home Day

Chester Lauck and Norris Goff, the Lum and Abner you hear over NBC, capped a climax recently when the fictitious Pine Ridge, Ark., of their scripts became a reality.

On their fifth radio anniversary, the State of Arkansas officially changed the name of the town of Waters to Pine Ridge. It will so appear on the maps.

Uncle Cling Wilhite, 79-year-old native of the new Pine Ridge, made his first trip to a large city to attend the ceremonies at Little Rock. The exact prototype of Grandpappy Spears in the Lum and Abner show, Uncle Cling said about himself, "I'm as pert as a cat bird." About Lauck and Goff, he said, "They're smart boys. They got good idees."

Director of Pageant of Youth Finds Use for Children as They Take On Years

Not long ago we told you about Mrs. Ann Hummert, the lovely lady behind the scenes of NBC's American Album of Familiar Music. Now, we'd like to tell you about Mrs. Alice Clements, the lovely lady behind NBC's Sunday morning Pageant of Youth.

Mrs. Clements is a radio producer, too. She began doing it six years ago with a kid program over NBC and made something very unusual out of it by discovering latent abilities in children and directing these talents along the proper paths.

The Pageant of Youth is a program using boys and girls from 15 to 17 years old. Mrs. Clements figured it out more than a year ago when she found the tinier children on her other program were growing away from her. She's terribly glad it has worked out, since she's used 80 per cent of the kids from her child's program on her adolescent program.

The kids are glad, too, for that matter. Their appearances on the program, although they are amateurs, are regular, and they get paid for them. If a fellow gets on the Pageant of Youth, he can be pretty sure he'll stick for a couple of weeks.

Each Saturday, Mrs. Clements auditions 50 boys and girls around 16 years old. Every once in a while, one will have something. In that event, the weakest of the regular cast drops out and the newcomer steps in.

Mrs. Clements has learned that her proteges object to charity—or what they call charity—in the way of presents from her. So something very strange happens. When Mrs. Clements notices that one of the boys needs shirts, he will get three or four of them marked, "From a radio admirer."

Well, after all, she does admire them quite a bit.

Backstage at NBC: Joe Venuti Swings Through Rehearsal

You and I drop into one of Joe Venuti's Sunday morning rehearsals at NBC and watch Joe, who will be called the Sultan of Swing on his program that afternoon, hire himself a new gal vocalist.

He does it this way. As Mildred Fenton, lovely young warbler, walks in the door, Joe crosses the studio and talks to her for three minutes. Then he says, "You're hired."

"But," says Mildred, startled, "don't you want to hear me sing first?"

Joe hears her sing a little later. She has no special arrangement of her song.

That, of course, is one of the rules of swing music. Each person must be allowed to "get off," or play any way he likes, so long as it's good and hot. Accordingly, there are whole bars in Venuti's arrangements marked simply, "What Have You?"

Joe really has the old college try about him. Several years ago, when he was playing his hot fiddle with Paul Whiteman, Paul gave the band one of his periodic pep talks. "You fellows are letting me down," he told them, shaking his head sadly.

For about 10 minutes he went over the breaks he had given the men who worked for him and how they repaid him by being irresponsible children. Then Joe, who was deeply touched, could stand it no longer.

He climbed on his chair, looked about him with flashing eyes, and cried, "Come on, gang. Three cheers for the Old Man."

Always Charming

Irene Rich, still the lovely lady, has abandoned complete playlets for a serial on her Friday evening program. The show is now called, "Lady Counsellor."

WILL JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

e delivered at the Mercer county ne near White House, N. J., along ith the confession.

Detective Kirkham phoned Prosecutor Erwin Marshall, of Mercer. Marshall instructed him to take Wendel to the county jail on the three bench warrants outstanding those old indictments which had never been quashed—until an investigation could be made.

However, when Kirkham saw the confession, he took the prisoner to Justice of the Peace Charles R. Mulford and arraigned him on a charge of murder. Mulford gave the necessary papers to commit Wendel to jail. Sheriff Walter Bradley, at the jail, received the accused man from Kirkham, believing the charge was embezzlement.

Wendel Hastens To Repudiate "Confession."

Presently a phone call from Bradley reached Wilentz at the Stacey Hotel, in Trenton. Immediately the attorney general left for the jail, accompanied by Hauck, Colonel Norman H. Schwarzkopf, head of the state police; Lieutenant Arthur Keaton and Captain John J. Lamb. As soon as Schwarzkopf walked into the room where Wendel was sitting, the worried prisoner leaped up and said, "Gee, but I'm glad to see you!"

He stated at once that there wasn't a word of truth in the confession he had been forced to sign.

* * *

In a letter he wrote there in jail at the suggestion of his visitors, he said:

"This is to inform you that I know nothing about the kidnaping of and murder of Charles Lindbergh Jr., and I was never in the Lindbergh property.

"I know nothing about the crime except what I read and heard.

"I did sign several statements which were false which implicated me. I was forced by tortures and brutal treatment in New York, where I was detained from February 14 to February 24, 1936. From that date until today I was detained by Ellis Parker Sr., at the state colony at New Lisbon, N. J.

"I pleaded with Ellis Parker Sr., and with Dr. Jones, Jones is head of the institution, to get in touch with the attorney general of New Jersey, Colonel Schwarzkopf and Prosecutor Hauck and I asked if he didn't deliver me to above to return me to Mercer county.

"He kept telling me when he got ready he would act and not before. Ellis Parker, who I thought was my friend, tried to tell me that Prosecutor Hauck and Attorney General Wilentz would be superseded by any he would name because Governor Hoffman assured him he would do so, that I was to plead guilty with a lawyer, that the confession would be used and I could write a story that I had been out of my mind and suddenly came to and realized what I had done which would startle not only the medical world but would make me a million dollars and my family could live easy the rest of their lives."

Wilentz emerged shortly before 3 a. m. and informed the reporters that Paul Wendel had repudiated his confession. Five hours later Prosecutor Marshall opened his morning paper and learned for the first time that the prisoner had been charged with murder. Detective Kirkham explained that when he saw the confession he believed that was the real charge.

Early that afternoon Wilentz and other officials again visited Wendel. He talked for three hours or more, a stenographer taking down his words.

In Mount Holly, Ellis Parker Sr. said:

"Governor Hoffman had nothing to do with Wendel. I'm disappointed in the way it turned out." Pressed for comment on Wendel's charge that he had been kidnaped and tortured, he flared up. "Why, don't they find the murderer instead of making attacks on me? What are they trying to do, make me out a crook? I'm going fishing."

In the hearing before Justice Trenchard on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 31st, in which the Hauptmann defense forces asked for a stay, Wilentz had this to say about the Wendel matter:

"This is the meanest, vilest, most slimy and fraudulent act ever perpetrated in the state of New Jersey. We'll never live it down.

"Do you know what they were going to do? They were going to keep this Wendel arrest secret until 7:30 tonight—the night of the execution. Then they were going to parade this fellow into the state prison, turn him over to the prison authorities, and say 'There is the man who committed the crime—don't execute Hauptmann!' And they might have succeeded, except that some newspaperman found out about it."

Justice Trenchard announced at 3:30 p. m. that he would do nothing to halt the execution, scheduled for about 8 p. m.

Meanwhile the Mercer county grand jury was holding secret deliberations on the Wendel case, with Parker Sr., the star witness. Fifteen minutes before Hauptmann was to die, the foreman telephoned Colonel Mark O. Kimberling principal keeper at the prison, asking that the execution be delayed 48 hours while the jury continued its investigation.

Now the spotlight shifted momentarily to Brooklyn. If Hoffman needed favorable publicity in New Jersey, then District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, of Kings county, also needed a few breaks in his own region, for the newspaper stories about Geoghan and the Drukman case had seriously damaged the district attorney's prestige. The Wendel case, for Geoghan, was like a letter from home.

His first move to send an assistant, William F. McGuinness, to Trenton, along with a detective and a stenographer. With the co-operation of Colonel Schwarzkopf they were able to interview Wendel at the jail.

For obvious reasons, all the details of the ex-lawyer's story were not revealed, but it developed that Mr. Paul Wendel had not been quite as feeble-minded as his sojourn in New Lisbon might have indicated. Indeed, he had been so much brighter than his captors that there really could be no comparison.

He remembered the route taken from Manhattan to the place of his captivity. He gave excellent descriptions of the kidnapers, as well as the garage in which he had been held. He described exactly the view from the one small window in the garage. He told his visitors from Brooklyn that he had scratched his initials on the door—and he had also sent a suit to be cleaned, knowing that the cleaner's tag would serve as a splendid clue.

Item—on the evening of Thursday, April 2, the Mercer county grand jury voted 13 to 9 to discontinue its investigation of the Wendel case and adjourned until Tuesday, April 7.

Item—On the evening of Friday, April 3, at 8:42:30 o'clock, Bruno Richard Hauptmann died in the electric chair.

And so we take leave of New Jersey to follow District Attorney Geoghan as he carries on where New Jersey's friends of justice left off.

Kidnap House Speedily Located.

Commissioner of Police Valentine assigned extra men to work with Geoghan. Quickly the cleaner's tag was traced to a shop on Sheepshead Bay road. The owner, David Fromberg, said that at 9 a. m., February 24, a man brought a gray suit to be pressed and the frayed cuffs repaired, an overcoat to be pressed, and a brown suit to be cleaned. The brown suit (Wendel's) had bloodstains on the right shoulder, sleeve and lapel. The man bringing the garments would not give his name, nor exact address, and said he would call for the things rather than have them delivered.

The house where the kidnapers detained Wendel was located about April 9, but the discovery was not made public. Officers closed in on the place, the home of Harry Bleefeld and his family, at 3041 Voorhies avenue, on the 12th, arrested Martin Schlossman, 26, son-in-law of Bleefeld, and temporarily detained other members of the family.

Wendel identified a picture of Schlossman as the man who drove the kidnap car. Geoghan announced that an alarm had been sent out for the arrest of Murray Bleefeld, 28, son of Harry, and Harry Weiss, 30. Murray, alias Moe Taylor, was a brother of Jeff Taylor, convicted czar of Trenton's cleaning and dyeing racket.

The Mercer county grand jury cleared Wendel by a vote of 21 to 0 on April 15. Two days later he was released on $2,000 bail—this in connection with the embezzlement charges—and rushed to Brooklyn, where he speedily proved beyond all doubt, and despite recent obvious efforts to destroy identifying features of the basement garage, that the house on Voorhies avenue had been the place of his captivity.

April 19 — Geoghan announced than Schlossman had confessed.

April 23—The Kings county grand jury indicted Schlossman Harry Bleefeld, Murray Bleefeld, Weiss and Ellis Parker Jr.

April 28—Weiss found in Youngstown, Ohio. He also confessed and later tried to hang himself in Raymon street jail.

April 30—Sol Marcus, a Trenton bookmaker, jailed as the pay-off man.

May 1—Murray Bleefeld caught at Albany, N. Y. He, too, confessed, naming Parker Sr. as a conspirator in the plot.

May 7—With Parker Jr. still at large, Governor Hoffman indicated he would not permit the extradition of any suspects from New Jersey. Said he, "I won't permit any one from New Jersey to have his reputation sacrifices to save the face of a discredited Brooklyn district attorney."

STATISTICS.

Probably nowhere else is a baby's cry so expensive as it is likely to be on a motion picture set. So M.-G.-M., with an eye to the cost sheet, has been making a casual survey, seeking to learn which cries most, the male baby or the female. Records kept on "Three Godfathers" and "The Good Earth" show both boys and girls between the ages of one and four years spend an average of 30 minutes a day in lusty bawling.

Because of this and also because babies can be kept at work only for short periods—two minutes under the lights for infants less than a year old—interchangeable twins are in demand. Two sets of such twins worked in "Three Godfathers" and had a specially built, air-cooled, electrically-equipped trailer as their nursery when the company went out on desert locations.

CANDID CAMERA.

The sailor who takes a boat ride on the park lake on his day off has nothing on John Howard, young screen actor, who has recently become a confirmed camera enthusiast.

Now filming in Frank Capra's latest Columbia picture, "Lost Horizon," starring Ronald Colman, Howard wanders around the set between shots indulging in his hobby. He has proven to be particularly apt in getting candid camera shots, taken when the subjects are unaware of his presence, and has an excellent collection of photographs including some of Colman, Jane Wyatt, Isabel Jewell, Edward Everett Horton, Frank Capra, and other members of the cast.

MARGO WINS CAPRA PART.

Margo, young Mexican actress who made her screen debut in the Hecht and MacArthur picture, "Crime Without Passion," has been signed by Columbia Studios for an important role in the current Frank Capra production, "Lost Horizon," in which Ronald Colman is starred.

STRATEGY.

Shirley Temple is sitting in her little blue-and-white portable dressing room which has been moved out of doors to the spot on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot where she is currently engaged upon the picture, "Dimples." It is between shots and she is listening, all ears, to her teacher, who reads aloud to her from a little story book. The story is "Pinocchio."

"Pinocchio," Shirley explains, "is the story of a bad boy." Just how bad she doesn't know because she hasn't "got that deep into it yet."

As the reading progresses, the word "philosopher" occurs in the text. The teacher asks Shirley whether she knows its meaning. Shirley opines a philosopher is "a kind of teacher."

Mrs. Temple, Shirley's mother, sitting just outside the open door of the dressing room, hears Shirley's reply, is apparently surprised and plainly pleased.

Just then comes a summons. William Seiter, the director, is ready to shoot the next scene. Reading stops. Shirley dashes out into the set, grasps Frank Morgan by the hand. Together they go before the camera. Morgan, in the picture, is Shirley's grandfather, Professor Eustace Appleby, a none-too-scrupulous gentleman of kindly heart, "teacher of the drums, pianoforte, clarinet, the horn, also bird-calls." The period is 1850, the locale Cherry street, New York.

As the camera turns, Shirley and Morgan enter a little penny arcade, walk up to a booth where dolls can be won by the dextrous hurling of feathered darts at parti-colored balloons.

There the scene ends for the moment. But between takes Shirley seizes a dart, hurls it straight and true. Pop goes a balloon. Then Shirley, much pleased with herself, rushes out to her mother, sticks her thumbs in her armpits, throws out her chest, announces she is "One-Shot Temple."

In a moment Shirley is whispering in Mrs. Temple's ear. Before she finishes, the whisper is audible some feet away. One hears, "Can't I, Mother? Can't I?

Mrs. Temple shakes her head negatively. "I'm afraid not, Shirley, for I have an engagement after we get through here."

Shirley, a bit crestfallen, hurries back to her work before the camera. When she returns, she asks her mother at what time she must keep that engagement. Mrs. Temple, off guard, replies, "5:30."

"Oh, goody," shouts Shirley, "we quit shooting at 4 o'clock."

Mrs. Temple has been cleverly trapped. So Shirley will have at least an hour to spend with her newest toy, an auto-speedster that Bill Robinson gave her for her birthday.

COMEDIAN WINS TERM CONTRACT.

Herman Bing, who has blustered and sputtered his apoplectic way through many brief scenes to walk away with an entire motion picture, has been signed under term contract by Columbia. Bing's outstanding comedy performance in the new Grace Moore starring picture, "The King Steps Out," is directly responsible for the deal.

AH, GENIUS.

A film company is on location some miles out in the Catalina channel off the coast of Southern California. In charge is a director whose habit of making strange and unexpected demands upon his various co-workers is not unknown to these individuals. So one and all they made preparations as careful and complete as for a voyage into the Antarctic.

Arrives the moment for the filming of a certain scene. The director and the first cameraman discuss camera angles. The director tilts his head, half closes his eyes, studies a bare spar that projects from the mast of the ship on which the picture is being made.

Moments pass. Finally the director finishes his study, hurriedly summons the prop man.

"For this shot," he says imperiously, "I must have a stuffed owl."

"Brother, can you spare three minutes...to keep feeling like a king?"

Believe me, I've found the way to take care of constipation. I chew FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing-gum laxative, for three minutes. FEEN-A-MINT works pleasantly, thoroughly, and easily—because it goes to work gradually—and that's a real improvement over harsh "all-at-once" cathartics that jolt and upset your system. I never have cramps or nausea or any bad after-effects. And the whole family, including the kids, agree with me that the chewing makes a whale of a difference. Only 15c and 25c for the big family-size boxes.

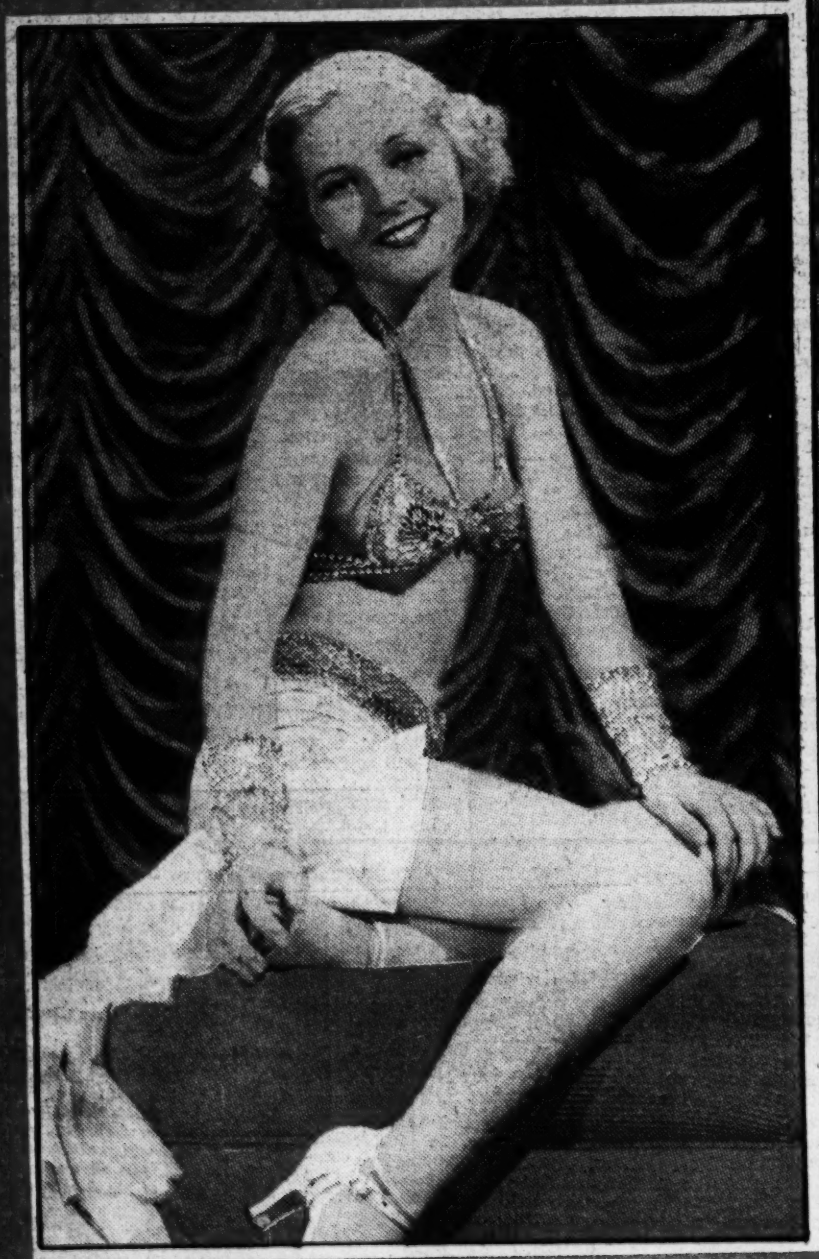

TUNE IN FEEN-A-MINT National Amateur Night with Ray Perkins, Arnold Johnson and Amateur Stars. Stations WLW, 5 P. M., E. S. T. Every Sunday.

Southern belle. That just about describes the petite Linda Lee, of NBC, who sings with Russ Morgan's Orchestra.

Yes, it's W. C. Fields, in Paramount's "Poppy," soon to be released. The pompous gentleman will take to the circus this time and will dabble in croquet on the side.

From Alaska. Terry Walker, discovered singing in a Miami night club after living in Hollywood for 10 years, will make her film debut in "And Sudden Death."
